CONVICT'S ROMANCE.

Two Women Claim One Sterling.

Girl of Fifteen, Fascinated by Forger, Married Him, but Seeks Divorce.

Minnie Church, Now in a St. Louis Workhouse With Him, Remains True.

She Declares Her Father and Babe are in Pasadena. Mystery Unravels.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Freed from her self-imposed obligation by the filing, yesterday, by Mrs. Marie Cook Sterling of a suit for divorce from Webster Sterling, aged 42, Miss Minnie Church, aged 24, the mysterious woman who, with Sterling, is serving a term in the workhouse on a charge preferred against them by Mrs. Sterling, declared today that she is the daughter of C. A. Church, a grain merchant whose winter home is in Pasadena, Cal. She declares that she is married to Sterling, and that they have a child, seven months old.

"Until the day of his arrest for wife abandonment at the instance of the woman who now sues him for divorce," said Minnie Church at the workhouse, "Sterling had always claimed—and I believed him—that he was unmarried."

IN PRISON GARB.

Minnie Church, in prison uniform, heard unmoved of the suit for divorce against the man she claims to have married. She is employed as housemaid at the prison, this employment having been given to her because of her good conduct, modest deportment and because her ways were not those of hardened criminals. Even in the forbidding prison garb she has certain attractiveness, and her manners are those of a well-bred [illegible]

"I suppose it is only what would have been expected," said she, speaking of the divorce suit. "God knows I have had nothing but trouble and sorrow and disgrace through my marriage with Sterling.

"Although I still love him, for he was always gentle and kind to me, though his deceit and advice have brought me to this disgrace, I will leave him when I am free. Nothing but trouble has come of my acquaintance and association with him, and I could not live with him again after what has happened.

"I want to get out of here," she said, "but if I had to do it at the price of causing him trouble and further imprisonment, I would rather serve out the term."

THEIR FIRST MEETING.

She said she first met Sterling March 22, 1902, in Muskogee, I. T., being introduced to him by her father. Sterling was then managing a dining-room in Muskogee, and Minnie and her father were traveling to Pasadena. Church and Sterling became introduced through their membership in a lodge. Later, Sterling wrote to Church and each time inquired for Minnie. Soon his letters were addressed only to Minnie.

They met at intervals at various places, and Sterling, early in 1903, went to Augusta, Me., where the Churches live, she says, when not in Pasadena. There he became an avowed suitor, and urged marriage. He told Minnie he had been married, but was divorced. Minnie's father counseled two years' delay, but Sterling would not listen to delay. Finally the father was won over, and the couple were married February 16, 1903, by an Episcopal Minister. The marriage was not an elopement, she says, although her father was not present, being prevented by illness from attending.

BIRTH OF THE CHILD.

They went to Hillsboro, Tex., where they lived eight months, Minnie then going to her father, who was ill. They next lived in Chicago, where Sterling had a position in a hotel, and later went to Cedar Point, O., where Sterling was manager of a summer hotel. After the season closed, they returned to Chicago, where Sterling was manager of the Lakota Hotel. There the baby was born, June 10, 1905. A few months later Minnie left the baby in charge of a housekeeper who had been in her family for years, and who was then at Lake Geneva, Wis.

Minnie and Sterling then left Chicago for St. Louis, whither they were followed by the other Mrs. Sterling. She said that when Mrs. Sterling appeared and claimed to be Sterling's wife, Sterling reassured her by telling her that Mrs. Sterling was his divorced wife, who had threatened to make him trouble. Miss Church said she did not know of Sterling's record until after the appearance of Mrs. Sterling in St. Louis, and Sterling then reassured her that he had been steward at the penitentiary.

Since the day she gave her baby into the keeping of her father's housekeeper, she says, she has not seen the child, although she believes it is now with her father at Pasadena, where he spends his winters. Neither has she heard from her father, who, she believes, is in ignorance of her predicament.

At the trial, she says, when she was put on the witness stand she was asked but one question. That was whether she was married to Sterling. She answered no.

"I knew it was a lie, but I told it thinking to save him from punishment for bigamy. I knew public sentiment was all against me and in favor of the woman who was thought to be a lawful wife, who was supplanted by another who had no claim upon him. But until I gave a false answer on the witness stand, I had been guilty of no crime, I thought I was legally married to him, and had a right to be treated as his wife."

Her petition recites that she and Sterling were married in Cuyahoga county, Ohio, July 2, 1897, living together until September 4, 1905, after which Sterling left her and came to St. Louis with Minnie Church, with whom he lived at the Albany apartments from September 7 to December 1, 1905.

ARREST OF STERLING.

Learning through a friend at the hotel of Sterling's whereabouts, Mrs. Sterling telegraphed to the chief of police to arrest him for wife abandonment. Sterling was arrested, and Mrs. Sterling arrived in St. Louis a few days later, when she altered the charge to one including Minnie Church, and after some sensational episodes between Sterling, Minnie Church and Mrs. Sterling, the couple went to trial, and were sentenced to pay a fine of $500 each and costs. Having no money, they were sentenced to the workhouse.

"I am mighty glad she has," was Sterling's fervent comment when told his wife had sued for a divorce. He added: "It's just what I would have done if I had been in a position to do so."

Sterling said he would not contest his wife's suit, but would let it go by default.

DENIES MINNIE CHURCH.

He denied being married to Minnie Church and also denied having a child by her, but said he loved her and intended to marry her as soon as he was free to do so.

He is the son of the late Col. James T. Sterling of Detroit. His first wife was prominent in society there. He was convicted of forging the signature of E. R. Kearisey, his uncle, of Bucyrus, O., and was sentenced to the penitentiary at Jackson, Mich. While he was in the penitentiary, his first wife obtained a divorce. They had one child which was awarded to the mother. It was also while Sterling was in the penitenaiary that he met the woman now suing for divorce. Sterling was then a trusty in the prison office. Miss Marie Cool, a college girl of 15, visiting the penitentiary with her classmates, saw the handsome convict, spoke to him and was captivated by his charming manners and evident frankness, for he admitted to her that he was a forger. They corresponded, and when Sterling was released, they met again and soon after eloped to Cleveland, whre they were married.

Even after Sterling's arrest at his wife's instance, she tried to win him away from Minnie Church adn have [illegible] Minnie Church.

At Four Courts, upon the occasion of his arrest for wife abandonment Mrs. Sterling and Minnie Church played hide-and-seek in their efforts to spirit Sterling from each other. Minnie Church won.

NEGRO SOAKS IN MAYOR'S BATH.

AND HIS HONOR IS MADDEST MAN IN PITTSBURGH.

Larry Temple, Prize Fighter, Drops Six Pounds of His African Flesh in Luxurious Sweatbox of City's Chief Prior to a Fight—Now Three Detective Friends May Lose Jobs.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PITTSBURGH, (Pa.) Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] When the Mayor of Pittsburgh went to his luxurious private Turkish bathroom in the Public Safety Building, this afternoon, to take his weekly official sweat and rub-down, he found that he would have to recline on the same cot and stretch his official form on the same slab on which Thursday night was stretched the manly form of Larry Temple, a negro prize fighter. Mayor Hays was the maddest man in Pittsburgh when this incident was told to him by "Scotty," the official rubber, whom the city pays $75 a month for keeping its higher officials in the pink of condition.

As a result of Scotty's revelation, there is mischief between Mayor Hays and the officials of the department responsible for the incident. Three city detectives will probably lose their jobs over the affair.

Temple last night had an engagement to meet Mull Bowser of East Pittsburgh and pound his face for him. Before the fight, it was discovered that the negro pug was six pounds over weight. Backed by the three city detectives and a number of his friends, Temple took possession of the Mayor's private bathroom, despite the protests of "Scotty." Temple not only occupied the cot in the hot room, but lay on the Mayor's rubbing slab afterwards and was generously and sufficiently rubbed. That the colored gentleman left on the slab the six pounds of flesh required is proven by the fact that later, to the delight of an assembled multitude, he made a short swing on Mull Bowser's jaw, put a soaker on the end of Bowser's chin, and finally put Bowser to sleep by a terrific crack over his heart. All of which, it is argued in Temple's defense, should certainly add to the glories of the Mayor's official bath.

AMERICAN JACKIES ENTERTAIN.

MANILA, Jan. 13.—The entertainments provided today by the enlisted men of the American fleet for the men of the visiting British cruiser squadron, comprising a dinner and vaudeville show, were attended by 2000 persons. Admirals Noel and Train were among those present. This afternoon, the American troops at Fort McKinley were reviewed by Admiral Noel. During the day and evening many receptions were held on shore and on various vessels, all being well attended. The British squadron will sail tomorrow for Saigon.

VITALITY FAILING.

Marshall Field is Much Weaker.

Merchant Prince Sends to Chicago for Attorney William G. Beals.

Personal Physician of Patient Also Goes to New York to Aid Doctors.

Hopeful Feeling Not Apparent at an Early Hour This Morning.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] There were indications at midnight that Marshall Field is failing. A bulletin was issued at 11:35 o'clock which said:

"Mr. Field is not so well. The disease has not extended, but the patient shows more exhaustion."

This was signed by all three physicians in attendance, Drs. James, Janeway and Billings.

The hopeful feeling which has been maintained all along, or at least has been expressed by the physicians, is not felt at a late hour.

One of the most significant signs that has appeared is the fact that Attorney William G. Beale arrived this morning from Chicago, and spent an hour with Field today. Beale came at Field's personal and urgent request. When he seemed to realize that his chances for recovery were in grave doubt, Field insisted that Beale be brought here as quickly as possible. He went at once to the sick room when he arrived.

Beale was asked afterward the reason for his visit, and said it was a matter which was sacred between attorney and client, and could not be discussed. It is also significant that both he and Stanley Field are remaining within easy call of the sick chamber.

FIELD'S NEW YORK TRIP.

Suffering from a severe attack of bronchitis and threatened with complications, Field, accompanied by his bride of six months, reached this city last Tuesday morning, and was taken to the Holland House. While en route from his home in Chicago, his condition became such that it was necessary to wire ahead to Pittsburgh, where a physician met him and continued the rest of the trip with the patient.

Upon his arrival here, Field was met by his business associate, Norman B. Ream, who drove to the hotel with him. The merchant had to be carried from his carriage to his apartment. His condition was not considered to be serious. Dr. James, who was summoned, gave it as his opinion that there was no immediate cause for alarm, in spite of the fact that the patient had sustained high temperature. The illness was a source of worry to Field's friends, because of his age, he being more than 70 years old.

SON'S DEATH A SHOCK.

About six months ago Field was married to the widow of Arthur Caton of Chicago, at a fashionable wedding in London. He has been under a great strain recently on account of the sudden death of his only son, Marshall Field, Jr., who accidentally shot himself while examining a loaded pistol. The shock is one from which Field is said to have had much difficulty in recovering.

Although reports from the physicians were by no means pessimistic Thursday, Field was in a serious condition at the Holland House, where the members of his family and Norman B. Ream, his business associate, were constantly within easy reach. Dr. Austin Riggs, one of the specialists called into consultation by Dr. Walter B. James, and who devoted practically all his time to the patient, said Thursday night: "Mr. Field, who is suffering from a severe attack of pneumonia, is doing as well as can be expected." It was declared that the attack had affected both lungs.

WATCHING HIS CONDITION.

There was slight change Friday night in the condition of Field. Dr. Frank Billings of Chicago, for many years Field's personal physician, arrived here Friday afternoon, and entered at once into a consultation with Drs. Walter B. James, E. G. Janeway and Austin Riggs. Dr. Billings said that he had discerned no change during the day. While it was apparent that an effort was being made to give the news from the sick room a hopeful tinge, friends of the merchant gathered small comfort from the reports.

Last night at 11:30 o'clock and this morning the physicians held consultations and announced there was no change in their patient's condition.

At 1 o'clock this (Sunday) morning it was said no more bulletins would be issued during the night.

HIS GREAT WEALTH.

Marshall Field's fortune is reckoned as follows:

Real estate	$30,000,000
Dry goods	25,000,000
United States Steel stock	17,000,000
Pullman stock	12,500,000
Rock Island stock	4,000,000
St. Paul stock	10,000,000
Other railroad stock	10,000,000
Eastern Textile mills	5,000,000
Bank stocks	4,000,000
Other holdings	5,500,000
Total	$125,000,000

Honesty, fair dealing, cash purchases, short credits, promptness, truthfulness and fidelity—these were the maxims which made Marshall Field a merchant prince and one of the foremost citizens of Chicago. He was not a gambler, a speculator or a fatalist.

Field did not spring up in the world of business and finance—he grew up. Despite his wide fame and marked success as a merchant and man of affairs, Marshall Field was little known as a man. He was not a "mixer" in any sense of the word. He had few intimates, and even those who knew him best profess to know little of his business affairs.

NOT A BULLDOG.

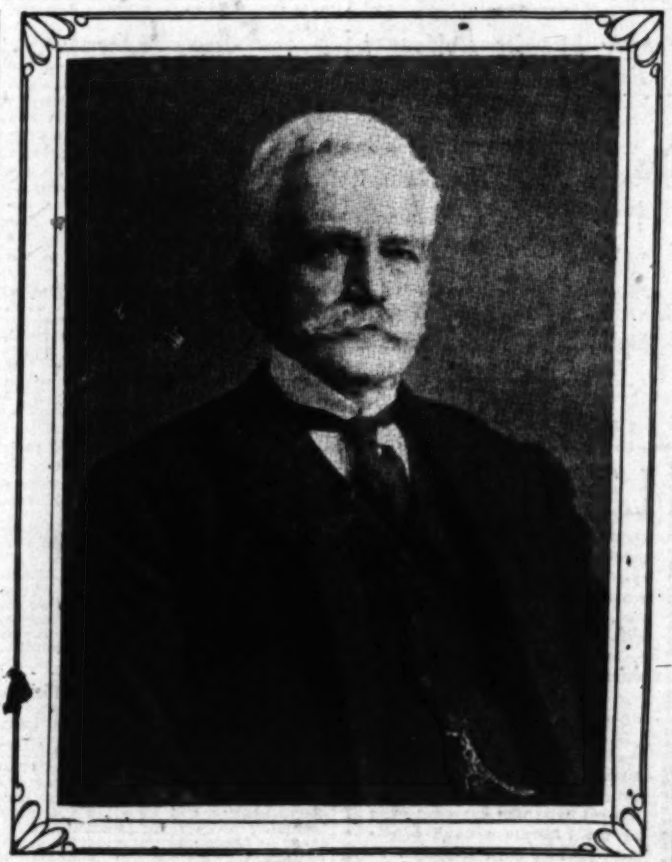
When he first made a public speech no one seems able to recall. He loved music, art and books. He traveled extensively and observed much, but talked little.

In these days of close analysis, strong competition and gamblers in fortune one naturally seeks in the physiognomy of the successful pilot the bold hard lines of prize fighter or bulldog. They are not to be found in the lineaments of Field. His face was narrow, his figure spare and slightly above medium height, and his mustache and hair white.

Unlike many other Americans, Field never was weaned from his home life. He had a country home near Leamington, Eng., and usually spent his summers in Europe, and often he spent his winters in California, but despite his travels he never forgot Chicago.

WILL LIVE FORTY-EIGHT HOURS.

CHICAGO, Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In a special dispatch from New York, Dr. Billings says Marshall Field will live forty-eight hours longer.



MARSHALL FIELD,
who is so critically ill that his recovery is doubtful.

SCHARRER PACKS UP; IS IT FOR PASADENA?

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Lieut. Scharrer left the Southern Hotel suddenly and mysteriously last night, after keeping a considerable number of the hotel staff busy several hours packing his belongings and running his errands. Scharrer left no word as to his destination. He directed that his mail be addressed to the Busch home in South St. Louis. The driver of the wagon on which his baggage left the hotel was sworn to secrecy. Inquiry at the home of Adolphus Busch was met by positive statement that Scharrer was not there. No explanation was given as to why such directions had been given with regard to mail for Scharrer.

It is generally supposed that Scharrer is en route to Pasadena, Cal., to press his suit for the hand of Miss Busch.

At 9 o'clock, the Lieutenant notified the hotel management he was about to depart. At noon he had completed supervision of the packing of his baggage, and paid his bill. An hour later, the wagon belonging to the Meyer Supply Company, dealers in hops, malt and brewers' supplies, called for his belongings, which consisted of three large trunks, a grip and a hat box.

It is said at the hotel that Scharrer's departure seemed to have been unexpected on his part. Summoning the porter, he ordered the latter to pack the luggage.

"Be as quick as you can, and I will make it right with you," were the instructions he gave the porter. It took about two hours to get the trunks packed, and the porter was made happy by a gift of 75 cents for his trouble.

"You know we can't set prices in a case like that," the porter explained afterward to a sympathetic friend.

Scharrer was accompanied yesterday by a young German, and during the preparations for departure, the two kept up a serious conversation in German. In addition to other things it is reported Scharrer has gone to make his home for the present with the Busch family, and that a major portion of his baggage was put in storage.

ARE THEY CHRISTIANS?

Rev. Imhoff Startles His Flock by Declaring Against the Secret Societies.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEWCASTLE (Pa.) Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "I say that it is impossible for one to belong to lodges and continue to be a Christian," declared Rev. I. M. Imhoff, pastor of the Wesley Episcopal Church here, last night, during revival services.

A woman arose to say that she belonged to three lodges, yet considered herself a Christian. She had no sooner finished speaking than three-fourths of the congregation, men and women, rose to their feet and made as if to go out. Rev. Imhoff turned pale at the result of his words.

"Sit down, friends," he urged.

The indignant members who had [illegible] belonged to secret societies, sat down. Rev. Imhoff then modified his statement by saying he personally could not belong to lodges and continue as a Christian. It was found that nearly two-thirds of the members present belonged to secret societies.

LONDON SHAKES; NERVES QUIVER.

TRAFFIC OVER AND UNDER THE GROUND MAKES TROUBLE.

"Vibrationitis" the Cause of Ruin to Building Structures as Well as to the Human Temple—Serious Effects in St. Marylebone and St. John's Wood.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The increasing heavy overground traffic, in addition to the vibration caused by the underground railways, threatens Londoners with new troubles. "Vibrationitis" is said not only to cause disordered nerves, but it also affects building structures. Dr. Winter Blyth, medical officer of health for the St. Marylebone Council, reports that the vibrations from the heavy traffic and from the underground railways are having serious effects on St. Marylebone and St. John's Wood.

"There have been so many instances of absolutely new drainage, namely earthenware pipe, embedded in concrete in St. Marylebone becoming defective in consequence of this excessive vibration that I have been compelled to recommend iron in the place of earthenware pipes.

"The best-built houses are also liable to be affected, and building accidents, great and small, have greatly increased of late years. In our own office in Upper Gloucester Place, Baker street, I have found it impossible to put up a simple scientific instrument, such as a spectroscope for photographic purposes, while at times the vibration is so great that it sets the telephone bell ringing."

FRANCE HAS TWO ALLIES.

Both Great Britain and Russia Will Help Her Fight Germany, if Necessary.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 13.—From information received by the foreign office here, France is clearly alarmed at the possibility of complications during the Algeciras conference, owing to fear that Germany will pursue an aggressive policy.

As France's ally, Russia is bound to sustain France, the reports that Great Britain has given France assurance of her support are confirmed.

THREATEN MURDERS.

Unionists Frothing at the Mouth.

Treasonable Utterances at a Meeting of Yawpers in Los Angeles.

Mob Led by Howton Takes Oath to "Do up" the Citizens' Alliance.

Cries of "Kill" Heard After Incendiary Speech—Hay and the Boycott.

UNION LABOR in Los Angeles showed its fangs in a poorly-lighted hall at No. 540 Maple avenue last night. About four hundred men and one woman packed the place. It was a called meeting, advertised in the news columns of the Examiner, for the purpose of forming a boycott union to cut the throat of the Citizens' Alliance, a body composed of hundreds of the most reputable business men of Los Angeles. Talk of murdering the editor of The Times, cracking the skulls of the members of the Citizens' Alliance, damaging property and putting local merchants out of business by the wholesale, was boldly made behind closed doors. Anarchy was in every breath.

A representative of this paper was in the hall throughout the meeting.

Just before the close, the crowd of 400 stood and with right hands held up repeated after Councilman "Doc" Howton, of the Sixth Ward, the following oath:

"I do solemnly swear to fight in every way the Citizens' Alliance, and to use every means to put that association out of business, so long as there shall be breath in my body; so help me God!"

A MOB AT HEART.

Physical violence in [illegible] only element lacking [illegible] gathering [illegible] the blind hatred, [illegible] conspiracy, the black hearts and the brawny hands [illegible] —all the low passions of the blood-letting mob flamed up again and again in that murky hall, while again and again heels hammered the rough floor in an ecstacy of brute admiration at some one or another lawless utterance from the stage. The spirit of the mob was there, speaking from nearly every throat, gleaming in nearly every eye; but the opportunity and the courage was lacking.

T. D. Fennessy, a local leader in the printing trades union and an Examiner employé, presided—if that be not too dignified a term to use. Speeches were made by him and by Charles Kelley of San Francisco, an agent of the Typographical Union; Arthur A. Hay an agent here of the same body; E. L. Hutchison (El Hutch,) a trades union attorney, and A. D. Howton, union labor-socialist Councilman from the Sixth Ward.

Labor agitators from practically every union in the city made up the audience. In the strict sense of the word, probably no more actually representative body of union yawpers could have been gotten together. This fact takes on emphasis when it is noted that the occasion had been advertised in the union-label press of the city as a mass meeting of unionists for the purpose of forming a general union to defy the laws of the land, to institute boycotts, to undermine and if possible destroy the Citizens' Alliance. The point is one of importance to the law-abiding portion of the community: The collapsed printers' strike for a closed shop, was used boldly, as an opportunity for the proposed forming of a conspiracy against the business interests and property, the peace and prosperity, of some hundreds of the men and firms who compose in greater part the commercial and industrial life of Los Angeles.

With that understanding, and for that purpose, these 400 representatives of local unions came to the Maple-avenue hall.

PASSIONS SLUMBERING.

When the meeting opened the crowd was in a condition of comparative quiet. Only the whisperings of little knots with heads bent together, and the subdued murmurings of twos and threes throughout the rapidly-filling hall, had given to one who watched aside a hint of the passions that slumbered in that outwardly calm crowd.

One phase then noted may be worth the setting down; it indexes much. In almost any other assemblage the presence of a woman, prominently seated in a front row, would have been a courtesy signal to every man in the place. Not so here. Some hats came off, many stayed on throughout the meeting; and of smoking and spitting and here and there a muttered curse there was no abatement. She sat through it all, her bonnet silhouetted against a fog of tobacco smoke that curled about her and hung aloft.

Directly speaking began, the crowd was tense.

Fennessy, puffing from exertion which he said was the result of his having been chased nearly to the hall by an employing printer, one of whose non-union crew he had just helped to steal away, outlined with ugly emphasis the object of the meeting.

"We ain't here to mince words," he said. "You all understand, and I want to impress it on you now, that we're here for the sole and single purpose of taking steps to put the Citizens' Alliance out of business. That's what we're here for—to form an alliance of our own, an Anti-Citizens' Alliance, to compel the employers of Los Angeles to give us what we want. And I want to tell you that whatever we make up our minds we want we can get." [Applause, and cries of "We'll show 'em!"]

He introduced Charles Kelley of San Francisco, a Typographical Union walking delegate.

This Kelley appeared to be a person educated beyond his intelligence. He started in to describe the condition of labor at the time of the building of the Pyramids, but stumbled onto Rome and got mired in what he called "the Eppington Way." He quoted Daniel Webster for some speech that the other Webster forgot to put in his dictionary; and finally, wiping with the back of his hand the sweat from his brow, provoked a thunder of heel-and-hand applause by the following sentiment:

"What our forefathers done we can do! What we done in San Francisco you can do here in Los Angeles! [Applause.] Up in San Francisco there's a sign that hangs right over the door of the City Hall after you go in. It says: 'This is a Union office.' [Cheers.] There's no reason why you can't make them put up that sign in the City Hall here in Los Angeles! Will you do it?" [Prolonged applause; cries of "You bet we can!" "Watch us and see!" "Good for you, Kelley!"]

THE PRINTERS' STRIKE.

The crowd was beginning to let itself out. A. A. Hay, a local agent of the Typographical Union, was brought forward by Fennessy. He devoted some time to urging the men not to believe that the strike of the union printers was lost. Fennessy chimed in with this: "I want to say that we are perfectly confident of winning that strike. Let The Times man print that statement—if he dares to quote me correct."

Hay, continuing, fed awkward generalities to the crowd, avoiding all figures except in the statement that union printers who are at work in the newspaper offices [only job printers were called out] are contributing weekly from their earnings to the support of the strikers "for the sake of the principle at stake."

Hay wound up his rambling speech with an objurgation of all who stood out against the demands of organized labor."

By introducing E. L. Hutchison as "the ablest lawyer in Los Angeles," Fennessy got off the one drollery of the evening. He further described Hutchison as a man who had proved himself to be at all times, "without question of retaining fee," at the beck and call of the unions. He might have added, though he did not, "and of union men whenever they are arrested and jailed for assault, rioting, attempted blackmail and common drunkenness."

GARBAGE AMMUNITION.

Hutchison, or "El Hutch," as he is more commonly named, caught the crowd and put himself at once en rapport by lugging a barrel of garbage phrases onto the platform, rolling up his sleeves and hurling double handfuls of abomination at men whom he singled out as leaders of industrial independence in this city. Coarse guffaws greeted his continued filth-flingings—"mere digressions," he called them.

But a storm of applause burst when, after daubing himself all over with surplus invective, he cried:

"Those two [the editor of this paper and the secretary of the Citizens' Alliance] are thieves, liars and common villains! But they are citizens; hence the Citizens' Alliance. Their two heads ought to be cracked together! Do you hear me?"

"Break their heads!" yelled scores of voices. "We ought to kill the scoundrels!" "Yes, kill them!" cried others, in lowered tones in the very back of the hall. Fellows turned their heads and nodded earnest approval. Some of the faces in the smoke-filled, murky room had assumed expressions of utter brutality. Passion and lust for violence distorted their features. The crowd was becoming a mob.

HOWTON A MURDERER?

There was difficulty restoring quiet when Hutchison finished, so had he stirred the bloodthirsty emotions of his union hearers. It seemed that the board floor must break beneath their stomping heels.

Fennessy introduced A. D. Howton as "the man we put into the City Council." The burden of Councilman Howton's talk was incendiarism and abuse, the former against the merchants and other reputable business men composing the Citizens' Alliance, the latter against individual opponents of union labor dictation.

Working himself up to a frenzy, he shouted a confession that at heart he had been a murderer.

"I fully made up my mind," he said, "to kill Gen. Otis. [Cheers.] I came down town one morning with that purpose in my mind. [Applause.] But I met Congressman James McLachlan and he dissuaded me."

A voice in the rear of the hall cried, in a muffled tone: "He ought to be killed! Somebody ought to kill him!" Union men around him cursed in approval.

"These business men, these merchants, who compose the Citizens' Alliance," continued Councilman Howton, "are every one of them an enemy of the United States and an enemy of each man in this audience. Let's do them up! [Applause.] I pledge you my word I'll help you in every way I can. I'm not forgetting that as a citizen and a Councilman I owe my first allegiance to my union. I wear the Typographical button, and every man here is my brother. [Cheers, and cries of "We'll put them all out of business!" "We'll fix 'em one by one!"]

Referring to the fact that Attorney Hutchison had said that Christ said: "If a man smite you on the cheek and close your eye, turn the other cheek—so you won't have him on the blind side—and then put him out," (a profanity which stirred the crowd with ribald laughter,) Howton said he would add his Scriptural quotation to the fund, and he proceeded to tell a sacrilegious story. The crowd cheered him.

A few minutes later he said to his audience: "God bless you in the cause," and a heavy voice bawled the response: "Aw, cut that out!" The Sixth Ward Councilman stopped and apologized for the use of the blessing. "I didn't mean God in the sense you think of God," he explained. "I know nothing of religion, I belong to no church; I merely meant, when I said 'God bless you,' that I invoked all good forces to your aid." Thus assured of the speaker's unbelief in the Deity, the crowd regained its face.

After urging the unionists to form the anti-Citizens' Alliance without delay, and each member thereof to visit personally the merchants and industrial employers who compose it and threaten them with union boycott, individual and collective, Councilman Howton declared that in this way "the greedy, grafting alliance could be completely destroyed" and its members humbled to the dust.

Then he called on the crowd of 600 to stand, hold up the right hand, and repeat after him the oath already described. They obeyed with a savage fervor, and the mob meeting then broke up.

LIBERALS TRIUMPH.

Political Map Strikingly Changed.

Former Premier Balfour is Beaten by Very Weak Candidate.

Eighteen Seats are Gained, Including Four for the Laborite Faction.

Churchill, Parker and Wyndham Safe—Composition of the House.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Jan. 13.—The political map of England today underwent a striking change as the result of parliamentary elections held in thirty-nine constituencies in widely scattered, but important centers, and in which the Liberals gained eighteen seats. The Laborites, who are counted among the Liberal gains, secured four new seats against Unionist candidates.

In the east division of Manchester, Arthur J. Balfour, the former Prime Minister, was defeated by T. G. Horridge, Liberal, who was conceded even by the Liberals a weak candidate against such a person as Balfour. Horridge secured the remarkable majority of 1980. This victory, notwithstanding the Liberal predictions, was a decidedly sensational outcome of the day's polling, and will, it is believed, enormously affect the elections, which will continue for a fortnight.

Winston Churchill, Liberal and Free Trader, won the seat for the Northwest division of Manchester from W. Johnson-Hicks, Conservative, by a majority of 1241.

LONDON, Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Electionitis continues to rage throughout the country, the fever having reached its height by the commencement of the polling yesterday. The fight has waxed fierce, in fact, it is impossible to recall an election in which such bitter feeling has been displayed on both sides. It is difficult for candidates to get a hearing anywhere. For instance, at Manchester, when Balfour got on the platform, the hecklers at once began to bombard him with questions. Listen to his speech they would not, so he good-naturedly gave in, and for once in a while was witnessed the rare spectacle of a hot conversational duel between the horny-handed sons of toil and the polished aristocrat, which ended by the latter appealing for fairness at the hands of his opponents.

"I have served you for twenty years," he said.

"Then now you deserve a rest," came the prompt reply.

The Prime Minister has come off just as badly. At one meeting, seven women who got hysterical in the course of heckling him had to be ejected, and another night the meeting was broken up without a word being uttered by him.

WOMEN WORKERS.

The only electioneers who appear to receive any consideration at the hands of constituents are women workers. Lord Edmund Talbot is fortunate in the fact that he is ill and unable to leave the house, and his wife is electioneering for him with apparently considerable success. Lady Edmund is engaged daily in canvassing for votes. Wherever she goes she receives the enthusiasm of the Unionists.

"We are sorry Lord Edmund is ill," remarked a Liberal worker, "for we cannot help folks being persuaded over to the other side by Lady Edmund. She has such a pleasant way with her that the people cannot bear to refuse her their votes."

Lady Edmund's charming personalities is rousing the women as well as the men to a sense of loyalty to the invalid member, and often twice a day the persuasive lady orator makes an effective little speech to the meetings for women only. The women flock to see her, and go home determined that their husbands shall vote for "Lady Edmund," as some of them have dropped into the way of saying.

In spite of the rain, Mrs. Cornwallis West, Mr. Churchill's mother, and Miss Balfour, the ex-Premier's sister, are proving themselves splendid supporters of their respective candidates in the political fight.

About a score of members were returned unopposed in the course of the day, among them being John T. Redmond, William O'Brien, James William Lowther, Speaker of the House of Commons, and Sir Edward Carson, the former Solicitor-General.

SUMMARIZING RETURNS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

LONDON, Jan. 13.—Everywhere, the Liberal majorities were increased today, and the net result of the first day's contest between the great political parties was overwhelmingly in favor of the present government. Although only sixty-six seats are now filled out of the 670 required for the new Parliament, which will meet at Westminster, February 15, the composition of the House, as shown by the results received up to midnight, is as follows:

Liberals, 39; Unionists, 14; Laborites, 6; Nationalists, 7.

This includes twenty-four candidates who were unopposed and the two candidates elected at Ipswich Friday. Little disorder attended the polling at any place. The excitement at Manchester was intense, and the candidates and their constituents worked with feverish anxiety, especially in the district Balfour was contesting when reports were circulated late in the afternoon that Balfour was in danger of defeat.

Political clubs received the returns by special wires, and everywhere the defeat of Balfour was received as a most complete surprise. Then, as Liberal gain was added to Liberal gain, until the remarkable total of twenty-two seats, counting the Laborites, out of thirty-nine constituencies was reached, it was agreed that the Liberal majority in the next Parliament would show the overwhelming decision of the country.

MANCHESTER EXCITED.

Dispatches received from Manchester say that the excitement there tonight was indescribable. Great crowds swarmed the streets, cheering and demonstrating with the utmost enthusiasm. Balfour tonight addressed a gathering at the Conservative Club. He acknowledged the gravity of the disaster, but predicted short life for the Liberal government. He urged the Unionists to continue to work for the party and the future reversal of today's results.

Of course, Balfour will find another safe seat before the elections are over, by one of the Unionist candidates retiring in his favor. Up to the present, however, there is no indication where the former Premier will find this place where he can secure a majority which will enable him to take his seat as a leader on the front Opposition bench.

UNIONISTS SAVED.

Among the Unionists who saved their seats in the general landslide was Sir Gilbert Parker at Gravesend, with a majority of 800 over J. MacPherson, Labor and Liberal candidate.

George Wyndham, former chief secretary for Ireland, the Unionist candidate for Dover, also retained his seat over R. J. Bryce, Liberal and Free Trader.

Five of the six divisions of Manchester were won by the Liberals, the other going to a Laborite. Elsewhere in the manufacturing districts in Lancashire and Yorkshire, the Liberals took seats from Unionist candidates.

Two London constituencies voted today, Nottingham and, Walworth, the last-named resulting in a Liberal gain.

One of the most remarkable reversals was at Halifax. Of the two seats there one hitherto had been held by a Unionist, but today one Liberal and one Laborite was returned. Seventy-three constituencies will vote next Monday, including twenty in London and all those in Leeds and the other important centers in which seats of members and former members of the Cabinet and a number of prominent men of both parties are involved.

Free Traders at Birmingham, who attempted to engage in an anti-Chamberlain demonstration this afternoon were roughly handled. A mob of tariff reformers effectually prevented the delivery of speeches, tried to duck the leaders of the Free Traders in a fountain and ultimately routed them. A strong body of police intervened and prevented serious fighting.

DOWNFALL OF BALFOUR.

CRUSHES "JOEY'S" HOBBY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The defeat of Mr. Balfour may be regarded as a crushing blow to the policy of a protective tariff for England, so strongly advocated by Chamberlain. Although Balfour, when he became Minister, feeling that the proposal would not be acceptable in its entirety, tried to temper it with modifications such as "preferential tariff" and "retaliation," its unpopularity has been clearly demonstrated by his failure in the election.

On Balfour's first appearance in the House of Commons, in 1874, as member from the pocket borough of Hertford, few would have ventured to prophesy that this slender shoot of the Cecil family would one day become the Prime Minister of England. His appointment by Lord Salisbury to the Secretaryship for Scotland attracted little notice, the office being politically unimportant, but there a surprise came when he was appointed Chief Secretary for Ireland. This, indeed, was no sinecure, for there were troubles upon troubles, and it seemed laughable that this nephew of the Prime Minister, with his dilettante manner could crush disorders in Ireland and face the attacks of the Irish members. Balfour, however, closed his ears to the storm of abuse that greeted him as it had greeted previous Irish Secretaries, and succeeded where a blunter nature would have failed.

His triumph in Ireland was so complete that his subsequent appointment as leader of the House of Commons was accepted by every one as a perfectly natural step, but in this latter capacity his success varied. In some things his leadership gave general satisfaction. In others, it was marked by a negligence and lack of vim which gave rise to much grumbling.

There is no doubt that Balfour needed the stimulus of a fight to bring out his best points. Whenever he was attacked by the opposition or by discontented members of his own party, he retaliated in a way which showed strength hidden beneath his languor and indifference.

KISSED BY TWO KINGS.

Death of Lady Barrow at Ninety-seven. Known as the "Beautiful Miss Croker," When Young.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Kissed by two kings, "the beautiful Miss Croker," as Rosamund, Lady Barrow, was known when the last century was young, has died at East Molesey after just entering her ninety-seventh year.

She was painted at the age of 17 by Sir Thomas Lawrence; her portrait was exhibited at the Royal Academy, and from that moment she became famous as the most beautiful girl in England. George IV kissed her and when she went to the Court of William IV, after Lawrence's picture had made her famous. That monarch said: "I am so pleased to be introduced to a young lady of whom I have heard so much," and he stooped and kissed her on both cheeks.

The adulation which she received had no effect on Miss Croker. Always of a pious and contemplative nature, she withdrew from society, and it is said never looked in a mirror for two years. She married Sir George Barrow in 1832, and bore him three sons and five daughters. Her grandson is the present holder of the title.

Force of Life Chemical Company Has Troubles.

Roosevelt Leads Raid on People Who Raise Dead.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] On the personal suggestion of President Roosevelt, the postoffice authorities, advised by the New York County Medical Society, have arrested two officers of a medical concern, are seeking two others and threaten to involve Republican politicians and Federal office holders in a scandal.

Dr. William Wallace Hadley, "medical director" of the Force of Life Chemical Company and Mrs. Laura M. Wilson, confidential manager of the company, are today out on $2500 bail, having been arrested on charges of conspiracy to obtain money under false pretenses by the use of the mails.

The authorities hold warrants for E. Virgil Neal, the alleged moving spirit in the concern, who has figured in other affairs demanding the attention of the Postoffice Department, and for Arthur H. Williams, styled treasurer of the concern, for whom Mrs. Wilson acted as secretary.

A dispatch from Syracuse says that a Deputy United States Marshal today went through the home of Neal, in that city, but was unable to find him. His mother said he had left for Washington about midnight.

GONE TO WASHINGTON.

The deputy marshal was unable to find Arthur H. Williams. It was said that he also had gone to Washington, both having received by telegraph the news of Hadley's arrest.

Neal, it is reported, has gone to explain to the Federal authorities his connection with the Force of Life Company. Within a few weeks, Neal and Williams went to Syracuse and organized another company, in which they interested several of the prominent business men there.

The arrests were made at the offices of the Electro-Vibratory Company, No. 164 West Forty-seventh street, a concern in which Dr. Hadley is said to be interested. The building was formerly occupied by Dr. F. Gray Blinn, who is now a fugitive from justice on a charge of criminal practice. Dr. Hadley and Mrs. Wilson were taken before Commissioner Ridgeway, by whom each was held in $2500 bail for examination one week from today.

BRING DOWN BIG ONE.

Gen. James O. Beirne, president of the concern, was also arrested and held in $2500 bail. It is believed, however, that he knew nothing of the affairs of the company, and was used as a figurehead. Gen. O'Beirne has for years been more or less prominent in Republican politics in this city. He has been a special agent of the Treasury Department, assistant commissioner of immigration, and has been connected with the administration of charities in New York. He was seen following his arrest, but his counsel refused to allow him to talk.

HULL OF LOS ANGELES.

Writes to His Sister, Mrs. Minor Morris, Attacking Barnes and Congressman Hull.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Minor Morris, who was recently ejected from the White House by an employé, is still confined to her bed at the Willard Hotel, and shows no indication of recovering from the effects of the experience. She has received from her brother, William Hull, in Los Angeles, a letter commenting on her treatment. The letter is exceedingly bitetr in tone, and includes a severe personal attack on both Secretary Barnes and Representative Hull. The brother says if there is any assistance he can render, he is ready to offer it.

Alluding to her long contest with Representative Hull, the writer says "the game is not worth the candle," and advises her to give up the struggle. Alluding to the President, Hull says he fully expects to see the Morris incident taken up and thoroughly investigated, as any other course would not be in accordance with his estimate of the President's character.

OREGONIANS A-COMING.

PORTLAND (Or.) Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] With six Pullmans, two diners, one day coach, an observation and a baggage car, the Oregon business men's excursion to California left the Union depot at 7 o'clock tonight. On the side of the cars, in big red letters on white bunting, was the word "Oregon." In all, 180 members constitute the personnel of the excursion.

It is meant as Oregon's return acknowledgment of California's interest manifested toward the recent Lewis and Clark Exposition. The first stop of duration will be Sacramento, then comes San Francisco, where the trips through Chinatown, the ascent of Mount Tamalpais and a reception at the St. Francis Hotel will be the features.

The Oregonians will visit Stanford University, Santa Cruz and Paso Robles. They will arrive in Los Angeles Saturday morning, where a big reception will be held. The excursion will break up at the Southern California metropolis, and its members will return separately as they please.

LITTLE JOHNNIES SPILLED.

SELMA (Ala.) Jan. 13.—A special train, consisting of two Pullmans and two baggage cars, carrying the "Little Johnny Jones" company from here to Pensacola, was wrecked between Monroe and Repton, Ala., seventy-one miles south of here, on a branch line of the Louisville and Nashville, at 5:10 a.m. today. The wreck was the result of a collision between the special and a log train, through a misunderstanding of orders. Only three of the company were injured and they are now in the hospital at Pensacola. Their names are: Miss Maddock, Miss Thomas, Miss Bailey. Although the scenery and baggage are injured, it did not prevent the performance in Pensacola tonight.

ZION CITY "OPEN SHOP."

Reörganization of industrial affairs at Zion City has afforded developments which will be of peculiar interest to those who are watching the city as a sociological experiment. During the past week this has been materially changed.

CHATANIKA DITCH GREAT WORK

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TACOMA, Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A. H. Murphy leaves Fairbanks for the outside tomorrow to submit the final report of the completion of surveys on Chatanika ditch to New York people. This ditch will deliver 15,000 inches of water and follow the divide from McManus River for a distance of seventy-two miles, to Clear Creek summit. It will reach all the present producing creeks in Turana district, covering more mining territory than any ditch now in operation in Alaska.

Murphy will return with nearly a hundred head of mules and the company expects to have the ditch finished next September, at a cost of half a million dollars.

LAND ESCAPED TAXATION.

BELONGS TO SHASTA COUNTY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCICO, Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The supervisors discovered today that a strip two miles wide and thirty-three miles long, containing 40,000 acres of timber land, worth $250,000, belongs to Shasta county, not to Lassen county.

Lasse nocunty has not claimed the land since 1899, when an act of the Legislature defining and correcting the boundary moved it two miles eastward. This two-mile strip, nearly all government land at the time, was in the district covered by the land office at Susanville. All the rest of the Shasta lands covered by the records of the land office were in Redding.

When the Shasta county assessor made out his annual rolls he consulted the Redding land office but overlooked the land office at Susanville and thus for six years sixty-three square miles of land escaped taxation.

The discovery is due to an eastern landowner writing to Redding to find out his taxes.

POLITICAL.

PAPER BOOMLET FOR P. KNOX.

WANAMAKER-FRICK COMBINE AIMS AT PRESIDENCY.

Purchase of the "Pittsburgh Leader" is Taken to Foreshadow Acquisition of Other Journals in the Smoky City and Inauguration of Campaign in the State.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PITTSBURGH (Pa.) Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It was definitely announced here, tonight, that the purchaser of the Pittsburgh Leader is the Philadelphia North American, represented by T. B. Wanamaker, principal owner of the North American, and son of ex-Postmaster-General John Wanamaker. Associated with him in the deal are H. C. Frick and the Melton banking interests of Pittsburgh, the latter representing also the Pennsylvania Railroad, and the former the Standard Oil interests. It is further announced that the Leader hereafter will be run in the political interests of State Senator William Flinn, the Republican bcss of Pittsburgh and Allegheny county.

The announcement, coupled with the fact that the Wanamaker newspaper interests have entered into the deal, marks the first step in a gigantic and carefully-matured plan to begin a systematic campaign in both ends of the State simultaneously for Senator P. C. Knox for the Presidency, as a rival to Elihu Root, the alleged choice of President Roosevelt.

The tremendous power now in the hands of the Wanamaker reform party in Philadelphia, aided by the powerful influence of the Flinn machine in Pittsburgh and Allegheny, and the combined corporate interests behind both of these political factors creates a political situation unparalleled in the history of politics in this county. The well-known fondness of Frick for the Senator, who was his counsel in the Homestead riots, makes his entrance into this politico-capitalistic combination doubly significant. The next move of the factor in this political movement, it is said, will be the purchase of the Pittsburgh Times and the Pittsburgh Dispatch.

WILL GATES OPEN?

Cahuenga, Colegrove, Prospect Park and Dayton Heights Hold Mass Meetings.

Residents of the Cahuenga Valley held a mass meeting last night at the McKinley schoolhouse, Dayton avenue and Clinton street, to discuss the question of annexation to Los Angeles. The meeting was largely attended.

There was a solid majority for immediate annexation, and a committee was appointed to arrange the details whereby the district may formally ask admission to the corporate limits of the city.

The Cahuenga district lies west of Los Angeles, north of Pico Heights, and south of the town of Hollywood. There are about four square miles of territory.

The committee of five appointed last night comprises Henry Seimer, chairman of the meeting; R. Morton, secretary; C. A. Ensign, John W. Mitchell and A. L. Stevens.

There is scarcely a dissenting vote, it is said, in this district, and last night no hammers were in evidence; the annexation proposition was pushed with vigor.

Dayton Heights also declared yesterday in favor of annexation, and a standing committee which has served for some time was reappointed with power to make plans for admission to Los Angeles.

Residents of Dayton Heights have worked a coup in securing the consent of Colegrove and Prospect Park to the annexation plan. The three districts will seek to be admitted as one slice of territory, and the population of 4000 thus represented, it is believed, will be an inducement for Los Angeles to desire the splendid strip of realty which is dotted with many handsome homes.

HIGH SCHOOLS DEBATE.

Los Angeles Wins from Covina After Spirited Discussion at the Woman's Club House.

The High Schools of Los Angeles and Covina held a joint debate last night at the Women's Club House, discussing the subject "Resolved, that the small college offers greater advantages for higher education than does the large university."

Los Angeles High School, supporting the affirmative, won the debate, according to the verdict of Judges Smith and Wilbur, who ruled on eloquence and subject matter. The contestants for Los Angeles were Steven Monteleone and J. Grove, while Covina was represented by G. C. Platt and H. Douglas.

Los Angeles High School totaled ninety points in the contest, twenty-five of which were for first place, while the rest were won on the merits of the two debaters. Mr. Monteleone captured first honors, Mr. Platt of Covina taking second place.

Interest in debating has been greatly increased in the High Schools of the county of late, and in a recent contest with Pasadena the local institution was also victorious. Last night, owing to the bad weather, only a small audience was present.

GUSHER AT M'KITTRICK.

Fearless Gas Well is Now Flowing Oil at Lively Rate and Extends the Belt.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BAKERSFIELD, Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The drill in the Fearless well on sections 16-22-30, near McKittrick went into oil yesterday and the enormous gas pressure resulted in the discharge of a big volume of oil and rock. The oil ran down the gulley and the flow continued for several hours. Later the well was quiet, though there were intermittent spurts and the volume of escaping gas was enormous.

There is little question but that the well is a success, and as such it is the most important discovery in oil land development made within a year. The land is due north of the town of McKittrick and the strike proves much additional territory as oil bearing. The largest gainer by reason of the discovery is the McKittrick Company, which owns adjoining lands and which are unquestionably in the belt, as marked by the new Fearless well.

GAS OVERCOMES RESCUERS.

Heroic Efforts Fail to Release Seven Men Imprisoned in Burning Tamarack Mine.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CALUMET (Mich.) Jan. 13.—Heoric efforts have failed to release the seven men imprisoned in the burned portion of the Tamarack mine. Several members of the rescuing party sent in were overcome by gases and were rescued with difficulty. Several were overcome and were carried from the shaft. The condition of three was precarious and their lives were saved only after desperate efforts.

An Austrian named Texsimonvitch, a brother of one of the men imprisoned, made a terrific struggle to penetrate the burning mine, wrapping clothes about his head, but the gases were too powerful and he was overcome and carried to the surface in a critical condition.

No shafts will be sealed until every possible effort has been made to determine the fate of the seven men. There is a powder magazine at the twenty-fourth level and many cases of dynamite are stored at various levels in the shaft, but the fire is several hundred feet away and there is no immediate danger of an explosion.

CASTRO IS ASTONISHED AT HASTE OF FRANCE.

Venezuela's Pugnacious President Thought He Had Conciliated the Gaul—Cable Office Closed for Non-Recognition of Tax.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CARACAS (Venezuela) via Port of Spain, Jan. 13.—President Castro is astonished that France has broken off relations. For his conciliatory attitude and his note withdrawing his counter-protest, President Castro expected France to renew relations by sending a new representative, but Mr. Russell, American Minister here, advised Señor Ybarra, Venezuelan Minister of Foreign Affairs, that France has severed all relations. France is withdrawing M. Taigny, her charge d'affaires.

The Mayor closed La Guayra cable office because of the company's refusal to recognize the municipal industrial tax. The director of the telegraphs announces that cable communications will be maintained by steamship to Trinidad, a two-hour passage.

The Constitution announces the publication of diplomatic correspondence demonstrating the justice of the act, and also confidential letters proving the complicity of France in the revolution. Mr. Russell is in charge of the French legation.

As her fighting force to overawe Venezuela, France, some time ago, sent to Martinique four cruisers and about twenty-five hundred men. The vessels were the armored cruiser De Saix, the second-class cruisers Troude, and the barbette cruiser Duguay-Trouin. The De Saix is a moderate-sized cruiser of 7578 tons, built at St. Nazaci in 1901, and carries 18 guns. She has a speed of nearly twenty-two knots. The Jurien de la Graviere is smaller, having a displacement of 5595 tons. She was built at L'Orient in 1899, carries 20 guns, most of them small 5-centimeter guns and has a speed of 18 knots. The Troude was built at Bordeaux in 1900, is of 1994 tons displacement, carries 12 guns, and has a speed of 21 knots. The Duguay-Trouin is an old vessel, constructed in 1877, carrying 14 guns. Against this squadron, Venezuela has only three small gunboats, the Bolivar, with six guns, the Miranda, with two, and the Rostaurador with five; one transport, the Zamora; one propeller, the Zumbador, and one torpedo-boat, the Margaritau.

TROOPS TO GUADALOUPE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Saturday, January 6, a special cable to the Herald, from Fort De France, Martinique, announced that the French fleet had sailed for the Isles of Saintes (near Guadaloupe,) whence it would soon sail for Trinidad.

One of the large cruisers had taken troops to Guadaloupe, where there have been political disturbances and incendiarism.

This squadron was dispatched from France when the Venezuelan difficulties began to assume an acute phase. Trinidad, which commands the Orinoco and the principal ports of Venezuela, can be reached from Port of Spain in a few hours.

MILLIONS OF MONEY TO CALIFORNIA LANDS.

Director Wolcott of Reclamation Service Writes to Perkins Denying Discrimination Against the State. Yuma Project Will Benefit Us.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A few days ago, Senator Perkins sent a letter to Director Wolcott of the Geological Survey, in which he explained his views on the apparent discrimination against California in the allotment of the reclamation fund. He today received the following letter:

"It was not intended in the list of projects to which you refer to indicate definitely or exactly to which States the project would be charged. For instance, while on one hand the Yuma project is largely in Arizona and listed under the head of California, the Klamath project is about one-half in California and is listed under the head of Oregon. On the passage of the Reclamation Act efforts were promptly made to find a project in California which would fulfill the conditions of the act, and to this end surveys were made on Clear Lake, Cache Creek, Stony Creek, King River, Sacramento River, Owens River, Pit River and at other points. On Sacramento River and at other places the large ownerships of land, vested rights to water and lack of appreciation of the benefits of irrigation were so great that consideration of these were abandoned for a time.

KLAMATH PROJECT.

"It is anticipated that the Klamath project will eventually irrigate over 230,000 acres of land, and cost between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000. The land will not be placed under irrigation any faster than the demand for lands will justify. The Klamath project is one which can and will be developed gradually, so as not to unduly rush lands on the market. This policy will require, it is estimated, an expenditure of $2,000,000 during the time covered by the Secretary's list, i. e., to July, 1908. At that time, funds should be returning both from the Klamath project and from other projects, and it is expected funds will be available to carry out the Klamath project as rapidly as then appears to be desirable.

OREGON'S PART.

"Just what parts of the land which will be covered by this $2,000,000 lie in Oregon and what parts lie in California I am unable to state, but the major portion is in Oregon. It is anticipated that the beginning of construction will bring one or more railroads into the area of the Klamath project. The entire Klamath project, from a business point of view, is tributary to the city of San Francisco, and always will be. This phase of the matter is insisted upon by Oregon people in considering the relative benefits the two States will enjoy from its construction."

YUMA PROJECT.

Regarding the Yuma project, Director Wolcott says: "The board of engineers which convened to consider the Yuma project considered carefully the bearing of the accidental fact that in this particular part of the valley the major portion of the land lay on the Arizona side, and the board was assured by Mr. Lippincott that this project would be entirely satisfactory to California people, as the entire territory will always be tributary to Los Angeles and the major portion of the benefits will thus go to California.

LAGUNA DAM.

"Laguna Dam is also expected eventually to furnish the only permanent heading that can be provided for the Imperial Valley Canal, which is now having such serious trouble with the waters of the Colorado River. The use of this dam will be for the benefit of a much larger area of California than in Arizona.

OTHER PROJECTS.

"At the time it was decided to recommend the Yuma project, it was not known that there were any other feasible projects in California in a position to be seriously considered for several years. Since the adoption of the Yuma project, however, more liberal offers have been made by landowners around Clear Lake than they were willing to consider a year earlier, and it is possible that a feasible project may yet develop in this vicinity and other sections of the Sacramento drainage basin.

"I think the interests of California have received careful consideration, and you may feel assured no effort has been or will be spared to treat the State justly in the operations of the Reclamation Act."

ENORMOUS WORKS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—In an address on reclamation work in the West before the National Geographical Society, last night, C. J. Blanchard of the Geological Survey, declared that seventy-seven miles of the main canal of river size have been built during the three years in which the United States Reclamation Service has been organized, and that irrigation canals long enough to span the earth twice and representing an outlay of $90,000,000, had been built during the past quarter century.

"Every year," he said, "this area returns a harvest valued at $150,000,000, and 2,000,000 people dwell in harmony and contentment where only a short time ago the wilderness reigned.

"The Reclamation Service has built fifty-four miles of irrigation canals and 186 miles of ditches. It has constructed and has in operation 150 miles of telephone; 125 miles of road in cañons, involving deep cuts; it has excavated 10,000,000 cubic yards of material and one-half mile of tunnels. Work is now actually going on in eleven different projects. The Reclamation Service has laid 70,000 cubic yards of concrete; 12,000 cubic yards of riprap; 19,000 square feet of paving; 150,000 linear feet of sheet piling, and has driven 10,000 feet of bearing piles. It has purchased 130,000 pounds of railroad iron; 250,000 pounds of structural steel; 600,000 pounds of cast iron; 75,000 barrels of cement, and 1,750,000 feet of lumber. The sawmills operated by the Reclamation Service cut 2,800,000 feet of lumber."

HOUSE DEBATE.

GAINES FOR FREE TRADE.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—Less than twenty members were present when the House met at 11 o'clock today to continue the Philippine tariff debate. Mr. Gaines of Tennessee spoke first, favoring the bill as a step toward free trade with the Philippines.

The need for scaling down some of the high schedules of the Dingley tariff was emphasized by Mr. Gaines. He suggested that this might be done through reciprocity treaties, notwithstanding that Mr. Dalzell denied he had made such a statement. The Republican reciprocity doctrine, he said, admitted of no reciprocity except on noncompetitive articles.

Detailing the possibility of Philippine legislation, Mr. Needham of California favored the pending bill as carrying into effect the settled policy of the Republican party. He saw no imminent danger to any American industry as a result of the bill, and said the Pacific Coast has been built up so greatly by Oriental trade that it owed a debt of gratitude to the Philippines which they could pay by legislation favorable to the islands.

There were nine speeches in the House today on the Philippine Tariff Bill, consuming nearly six and one-half hours. Three of the speakers opposed the bill, and six favored it. The debate is to close Monday at 5 o'clock, the session to begin at 11 o'clock in the morning.

AMERICA'S FIGHTING SHIPS.

COGHLAN'S TALK DISPROVED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Anent the talk of Rear-Admiral Coghlan, who in a speech to the Patria Society of New York, declared that the navy was far below the strength that the public believed it was, and that instead of having forty fighting ships, as we have on paper, there were really only eighteen ships of the fighting class, and of these two were now out of order, so that our real navy consists of sixteen ships, it may be said that Pitman Pulsifer, clerk to the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, has compiled data which show that Congress has appropriated for the new navy an aggregate of $252,272,667.21. Of this, $68,649,800 has been expended for battleships, beginning with the Texas and coming down to the Ohio. Armored cruisers have cost $29,791,143, ranging from the Brooklyn to the West Virginia. Protected cruisers, from the Newark to the Galveston, have required $32,213,680. The vessels now under construction will have cost $66,101,668 by June 30 next.

The navy on June 30 last, consisted of 270 vessels fit for service, 34 under construction, 7 authorized, and 15 unfit for service. The United States ranks third as a naval power, having 158 fighting ships, with a total tonnage of 701,797. Great Britain is first, with 497 ships of 1,907,998 tonnage. France is second, with 533 vessels of 800,958 tonnage. Germany is fourth, with 222 ships of 583,062 tonnage.

These figures, by the way, indicate that Germany would be at a disadvantage in case of a war with France over Morocco.

DEATHBLOW TO AMERICAN TRADE

GERMAN TARIFF TAKES EFFECT MARCH FIRST.

Administration Thinks It Will Lessen Commerce With Other Foreign Countries—Ex-Senator Harris Predicts Serious Loss to Cattle Growers—Action by Congress Needed.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Secretary Root and Secretary Shaw frankly admit that they have been beaten in their efforts to avert a tariff war with Germany, and that unless Congress steps into the breach, the country can only learn by dire experience the opportunity which it has missed.

The proposed German tariff, which, according to administration officials, has been held in the air as a menace, will go into operation March 1 and they say that under the present conditions of the American tariff it will mean not only death to American trade, particularly in meat products with Germany, but what the administration considers as of far greater importance, the lessening of trade with other foreign countries, which, under favorable tariff relations with Germany, will substitute German products for those of the United States.

If the administration had any hope left in the case, it is in the education of the people to the dangers which are threatened in the tariff war with Germany.

Isham G. Harris, formerly United States Senator from Kansas, now working in the interests of the Western Cattle Growers' Association, has been busy here for some time, although he has lately left for the West. He has told the officials of the State Department and the President that the cattle growers whom he represents have a large surplus product beyond the requirements of the home markets, and that the closing of the markets of Germany would mean a serious loss.

According to an explanation made this morning by a high authority of the State Department, Germany holds a great advantage, in that she proclaimed nearly a year ago that she would adopt a maximum tariff schedule, and then sat down to await offers which other countries might make her in the way of tariff concessions upon her products in return for those which she might be disposed to make upon the admittance into Germany of theirs. The United States, on the other hand, passed the Dingley act and put it into immediate effect.

BRAUN HOLDS TO HIS SECRET.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—When the case of Marcus Braun, special commissioner to Austria-Hungary to investigate emigration conditions, against Lajos Steiner of this city, whose arrest Mr. Braun had secured on a charge of criminal libel, December 6, came up in Police Court yesterday, it was devoted chiefly to attempts on the part of attorneys for the defense to force Braun to reveal the nature of his work abroad as representative of the Immigration Bureau and of the secret report he has made to President Roosevelt concerning his investigations in Austria-Hungary. These questions Braun absolutely refused to answer. He exhibited a telegram from Secretary Metcalf, in which the latter assured him that, under no circumstances, would the contents of the secret report be made public, not even at the command of Congress, which had called upon Secretary Metcalf's department for the report.

The rain has stopped the Southern Pacific's work on the new machine shops, the site of which is almost completely under water.

This afternoon, the argument in the case of the American Dredging Compang against the Southern Pacific Railroad Company to restrain the latter from using certain water-front property at West Oakland, was concluded. MUCH LONGER DO THEY STAY.

PRESENT TOURIST SEASON WILL STRETCH ITSELF FAR.

Even Into Summer Months Will It Go, Because of the Shriners in May. Railroad Men Report Record of Incoming Passengers Away Beyond Previous Marks.

That the volume of tourist travel to Southern California will exceed this year by from 15 to 20 per cent. that of previous years, is the prediction of local railway passenger traffic men.

N. R. Martin, assistant general passenger agent of the Southern Pacific, declares that the increase of the Southern Pacific's westbound business will be this year easily 20 per cent. greater than that of last year. He is of the opinion also that the coming of the national convention of the Shriners in May will carry the well-defined tourist season much farther into the summer than ever before.

"In fact it is noticeable that the so-called tourist season each year shows a marked tendency to cover a greater period of time and extend farther and farther into the perfect spring months of Southern California," said Mr. Martin.

"Travelers and resort-seekers are gradually being educated into the knowledge that Southern California is delightful and fascinating in summer as well as in winter, and with that knowledge hundreds are spending the summers here who would not have dreamed of including this part of the country in anything but a mid-winter itinerary not so long ago."

John J. Byrne, assistant passenger traffic manager of the Santa Fé, on his departure last night for Chicago to attend the meeting of the Transcontinental Passenger Association, said that the Santa Fé is feeling a decided activity in its passenger business, and is confident that the figures this year will show a decided increase of passengers carried over those of last year.

Yesterday afternoon a Raymond and Whitcomb special excursion train of twelve coaches, bringing 125 people to Southern California, arrived over the Santa Fé, and after a week here will continue to San Francisco.

Tonight a special train will leave Salt Lake City over the Clark road to bring the visiting delegates of the Western Classification Committee to Los Angeles for their convention Tuesday. The train is due to arrive in Los Angeles Monday night. It will be accompanied by George Sargent, general agent of the Salt Lake at Chicago.

STRANGLED WITH WIRE.

Prominent Chicago Woman Foully Murdered.

Seized by Fiend Who Fails to Commit Assault.

Covered Her Body With Refuse and Feigned Find.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CHICAGO, Jan. 13.—Mrs. Bessie Hollister, 30 years old, the wife of Franklin C. Hollister of the printing firm of Hollister Bros., one of the largest concerns of its kind in the city, was murdered last night by Richard Ivins, 24 years old, who had attempted to assault her. The body of Mrs. Hollister was found this morning lying on a pile of stable refuse in the rear of the Ivins residence, No. 368 Belden avenue. Around the neck was twisted a fine copper wire and death had been caused by strangulation.

Ivins, who pretended to find the body and reported the fact of the murder to the police, confessed to the crime a short time after he had been taken into custody. His statement to the police, in effect, was that he was at work in his carpenter shop, which stands but a short distance from the place where the body was found, and that when Mrs. Hollister passed by he attacked her and when she resisted he dragged her into the carpenter shop and killed her by twisting the wire around her neck. He then went home and remained there all night. This morning he went to the barn ostensibly to perform some work, and, pretending to find the body, rushed into the house and reported to his father and later to the police, that the body of a woman was lying in a heap of refuse near the barn.

Ivins in his confession, claimed that he was drunk at the time of the crime, but this is denied by his mother, who said that he came into the house and ate his supper while perfectly sober. Ivins had previously borne a good reputation.

The wire was of the kind usually handled by telegraph linemen and was not over one thirty-second of an inch in diameter. It had been insulated at one time, but the insulation had been scraped off. In front, it had been caught by the sealskin collarette worn by Mrs. Hollister, but in the back it had been brought against the flesh with such force that it was deeply imbedded in the muscles.

WAS ON WAY TO FUNERAL.

Mrs. Hollister left her home yesterday afternoon to attend the funeral of a friend, Mrs. Emma Semple, at No. 172 Seminary avenue, not far from the Hollister residence. When she left the house she carried with her a small clock which she had intended to leave at a jeweler's for repairs, and she intended also to stop at a florists and order some flowers to be sent to the funeral. That was the last seen of her by any of her friends. The flowers ordered arrived at the funeral, but Mrs. Hollister did not. After waiting until 7 o'clock, Mr. Hollister informed the police of his wife's disappearance and an all-night search was instituted, which resulted in nothing.

Early this morning, when the body was found, the feet protruded from a pile of refuse which lay in a small enclosure just off the alley. It was almost entirely covered by the refuse. The police were notified. As soon as the patrol wagon had arrived at the spot a crowd gathered, among its members being George G. Congdon, choir master at the Wesleyan Methodist Episcopal Church, where Mrs. Hollister sang in the choir. He at once identified the body as that of Mrs. Hollister and it was removed to an undertaking establishment and her husband notified.

Judging from the appearance of her clothing, Mrs. Hollister had made a desperate fight before she was killed. Her long hair was torn loose and tangled as if it had been pulled violently down; the front of her silk waist had been torn open and the glove of her right hand was missing. Three rings which she usually wore on this hand were gone. Other small articles of jewelry which she had worn at the time of leaving the house had been taken.

Mrs. Hollister was a woman of great personal charm, handsome and had for years been prominent because of her beautiful voice, which was considered of extraordinary quality. She frequently appeared at musical entertainments in different parts of the city.

TRIES TO SHOOT WRETCH—

At the conclusion of the Coroner's inquest, which was held late in the day, a verdict was returned holding Ivins to the criminal court without bail.

During the inquest, Ivins remained seated and apparently showed no interest in the proceedings. When he was called upon by the Coroner to give his testimony, his unconcerned manner and defiant tone caused great indignation among the men in the room and after the inquest was over W. C. Hollister, brother-in-law of the murdered woman, made an effort to shoot him. He was making his way toward Ivins, holding a revolver in his hand, when an officer caught sight of the weapon and held Hollister. Other policemen came to his aid and Hollister was compelled to leave the place.

Ivins, when detailing the crime, spoke in the most indifferent manner. He said:

"Well, I was standing in front of the carpenter shop when this — what's her name?"

"You mean Mrs. Hollister, don't you?" asked the Coroner.

"Yes, that's her name. Well, she came along and I grabbed her. We were standing at the gate in the alley for five minutes and then I dragged her into the yard."

Ivins identified the wire which he twisted around the neck of Mrs. Hollister, saying calmly: "Yes, that's it."

MOB LAW THREATENED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The murder of Mrs. Hollister is the climax of a series of tragedies within the last few months in which women have been sacrificed to the fiendish desires of crime-crazed youths. Mrs. Mize, Maud Reese, Mrs. Almberg, Mrs. Gentry—all victims of assassins, are names that stir Chicago people almost to the point of wreaking summary vengeance upon the latest woman-killer.

This was a popular feeling, not at all allayed by a public warning—practically a confession of helplessness—sounded by Chief of Police Collins, who today appealed to the women of Chicago to keep off the streets unless attended by escorts and to keep a sharp lookout constantly wherever they may happen to be.

That only a leader was needed this afternoon to precipitate the city into a maelstrom of mob law cannot be denied. This sentiment was not confined to any class. Dr. William B. Leach, one of the most prominent clergymen in the West End, said: "Lynching is as good as any punishment which I would suggest for the perpetrator of the heious crime. The same wire which the murderer used to kill his victim should be placed around his neck in hanging him."

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL

Few People Know How Useful It Is In Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion; it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered willow charcoal and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

CONSUL MILLS REPORTS.

MURDER ON FINSTAD RANCH.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EL PASO, Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] United States Consul Mills, of the city of Chihuahua, who was instructed by the State Department to go to Santa Rosalia, Chihuahua, to investigate into conditions surrounding the murder of C. W. McMurray of Los Angeles and R. W. Rutherford, Jr., of Philadelphia, on a ranch near Diaz, Mexico, has completed his investigations and has returned to Chihuahua. His report has been prepared and forwarded to the State Department. Mr. Mills has declined to make public the contents of his report.

Mr. Mills was authorized to make the trip at the request of Mrs. Finstad of Los Angeles, whose husband and L. G. Coughener, "Shorty," are under arrest at Santa Rosalia. It was her request that the consul be present while the investigation was in progress, to see that the prisoners secured a square deal. From Philadelphia have come indications that Rutherford's father believes Consul Mills neglected to take proper interest in the case.

Coughener and Finstad are still under arrest. They say they are well treated by the authorities. Mrs. Finstad, who is at a hotel in Santa Rosalia, confers with them frequently. They have never varied from the story they first told.

POISON AND HAIR CUT.

SUICIDE IN BARBER SHOP.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

M'KEESPORT (Pa.) Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Dr. H. S. Foster, a physician, stepped into a drug store today, purchased a large dose of morphine—enough to kill several men—and swallowed it. He then went into a Fifth-avenue barber shop, got into a chair, and called for a shave and a hair cut.

As the barber went along with his work, Dr. Foster's body began to slip from the chair. The barber could not arouse his patron, and called in an officer. The officer sent for a doctor, who found that his fellow physician was dying. Dr. Foster was taken to a hospital, where he died a few hours later.

TOO MUCH JEOPARDY.

JAMES S. KEERL'S APPEAL.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

HELENA (Mont.) Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Supreme Court today heard arguments in the appeal case of James S. Keerl, under sentence of ten years for killing Thomas Crystal in Helena. At his first trial Keerl was convicted of murder in the second degree, and given a life sentence. The Supreme Court granted a new trial, the jury disagreeing. On the third trial he was convicted of manslaughter. From this finding he has again appealed, on the ground that the statute relating to the discharge of a jury by a court upon its failure to agree is unconstitutional. It was urged by his lawyer that the second trial, because of the discharge of the jury, was an acquittal, and that the third trial was the placing of Keerl twice in jeopardy for the same offense.

Keerl for years has been one of the leading civil engineers of the Northwest, and is highly connected in both Maryland and Montana. His case has attracted unprecedented interest in Montana, and the three trials have cost this county a fortune.

MADE HER WEAR PANTS.

TUSSEY FLECK'S PECULIAR ACT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ALTOONA (Pa.) Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Tussey Fleck, a farmer of Sinking Valley, near here, was placed on trial today for one of the most peculiar crimes ever committed in this region. Fleck is charged by Lawrence Patton, who lives on an adjoining farm, with having kidnaped Mrs. Patton, after which it is alleged Fleck took the woman to a cave in the mountains, in which he kept her confined for seven weeks.

Mrs. Patton testified today that Fleck tethered her in the cave so she could not escape, and compelled her to put on men's clothing. He then visited her twice a day, bringing food to her on every visit. Mrs. Patton finally broke the bonds that held her, and made her escape to her home. Fleck's arrest followed.

CRIME BRIEFS.

Deacon Sanford Gathered in.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Charles L. Sanford, superintendent of the First Methodist Episcopal Sunday-school here and a deacon in the church, was arrested by West Virginia authorities today as a fugitive from justice. Sanford is charged by the officers of a Wheeling novelty company, of which he was president, with having embezzled $10,000.

IS HE SELF-SLAYER?

Police are Unable to Find Any Trace of B. L. McClelland, Who So Mysteriously Disappeared.

The police have been unable to discover any trace of B. L. McClelland, the self-confessed victim of gambling at Ascot, who so mysteriously dropped out of sight last Thursday.

Up to the time of his disappearance McClelland was employed by the Pioneer Fruit Company, with offices in the Mason Block, and Manager Derrig of the company says the young man's accounts are perfectly straight, and that he cannot explain his action in leaving as he has done. Mr. Derrig refuses to believe McClelland is a suicide, as he has investigated the case and finds that the young man owed very little money here in town, and had a good reputation.

Manager Derrig, however, believe that McClelland went away while in a fit of melancholia, to which he was subject. In McClelland's room at the Hotel Drennen he left his clothing and other articles valuable to him, and this leads the police to think that he has ended his life. The authorities are using every effort to locate the missing man, however.

SINGULAR CASE.

Gee Toy, a "China boy" who has been arrested by the United States inspectors, believes that he is being persecuted for some secret reason. He claims to have been born in Tucson, Arizona, about twenty years ago, and white friends bear witness of this fact, as his father and mother are remembered here, when they come across the country with the babe of a few months in their arms. The case will attract much interest when it comes up in the United States Court.

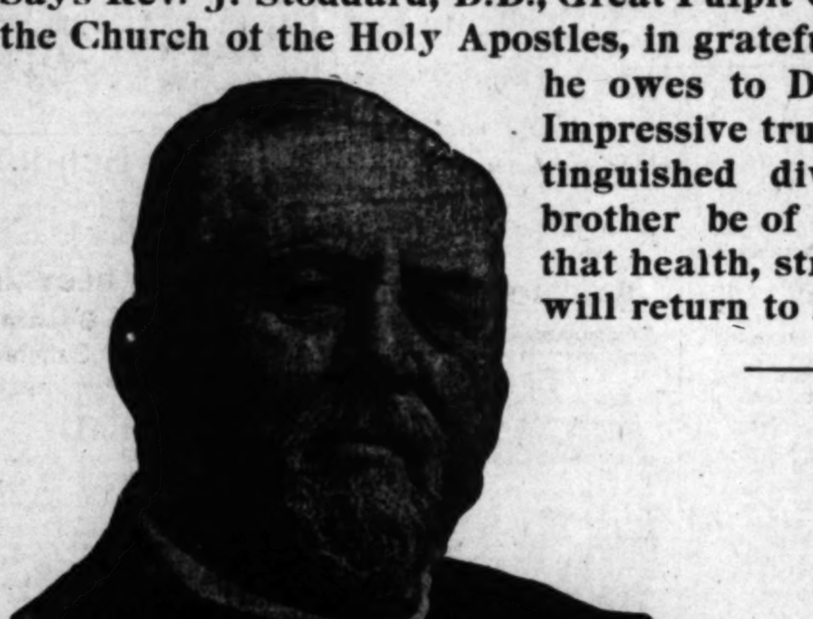
My Life a Sermon of Thankfulness

Says Rev. J. Stoddard, D.D., Great Pulpit Orator and Former Rector of the Church of the Holy Apostles, in gratefully acknowledging the debt he owes to Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. Impressive truths from the lips of this distinguished divine, who bids his ailing brother be of good cheer and prophesies that health, strength and the joy of living will return to him:



REV. JAMES STODDARD, D.D., Former Rector Church of the Holy Apostles, Perry, N.Y.

Perry, N. Y., September 21, 1905.

My Dear Brother:

"Yes, dear brother, it would give me lasting joy to be at your bedside through these long and trying days; to be able to minister to your physical wants, and to lead your thoughts along paths profitable alike to both of us. Alas, I cannot come to you, but I am comforted in knowing that the lung trouble is leaving you and that you are in good hands and have every care. Above all, that your doctors have found in Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey the one medicine that is curing you. I am certain that this preparation will continue to build you up, that it will put you on your feet again, as well and strong as you used to be.

"You will remember the condition in which the closing months of last year found me. My voice was gone, I suffered from chronic bronchitis, I was weak in body and slow of mind. When hope had all but vanished, a dear, old friend brought me Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. I took it according to directions—a dessert-spoonful three times a day. You know full well what a cure was wrought in my case.

"Today I am strong, robust, healthy. My throat is completely cured, my voice restored. I am imbued with strength, energy and hope. My limbs have the elasticity of youth, and I possess the exalted powers of mind and body. This and more I owe to Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, the purest and most effective medicinal preparation nature has produced. I bid you then to take courage.

"Yours with warmest good wishes,
"REV. JAMES STODDARD."

For more than fifty years Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has been prescribed by doctors and used in over two thousand leading hospitals as the greatest tonic-stimulant and health-builder known to medical science. It is indorsed by the clergy and professional nurses and recommended by all schools of medicine as the best cure for coughs, colds, consumption, grip, bronchitis and pneumonia. It stimulates and enriches the blood, aids digestion, builds up the nerve tissues, tones up the heart and fortifies the system against disease germs. It prolongs life, keeps the old young and the young strong. Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey contains no fusel oil and is the only whiskey recognized by the Government as a medicine. This is a guarantee. For sale by all reliable druggists and grocers, or direct, in sealed bottles only; never in bulk, $1 a bottle. Make sure the seal over the cork is unbroken. Doctor's advice and medical booklet free. ABSOLUTELY PURE & UNADULTERATED
TRADE MARK

Will You Let Me Prove It?

If You Have Any Kidney, Bladder or Urinary Disease (No Matter How Serious) I Will Send You Some of a Medicine That I Am Positive Will Permanently Cure you. I Will Send You Needed Advice and I Will Send You a 2-Cent Postage Stamp, by Mail, Postage Paid.

ABSOLUTELY WITHOUT ANY CHARGE WHATSOEVER.

I know that I have perfected the one remedy that really does cure and cure permanently nearly every case of Kidney, Bladder, Prostatic and Urinary diseases. I want every suffering man and woman to also know this FACT, consequently I say, and say in naked language, PUT ME TO THE TEST and make me prove it. All you need do is just to fill out the following coupon and send it to me. I will then send you sufficient medicine to prove that I have a REAL CURE. I will send you a book of PROOF. I will at any time give you my best advice, and I will send a good, unused United States two-cent postage stamp to make good what it cost you to prepay postage in answering this notice, all of which I send you ABSOLUTELY FREE AND PREPAID.

Remember, there is no expense to you now or forever after for all this, and neither does this offer entail any obligation on your part. If I was only moderately successful I wonder how long it would take to bankrupt me in carrying out the provisions of the above offer. Not long, I warrant you, though I am by no means a poor man.

My cure used as directed POSITIVELY WILL NOT HARM the most delicate person in the world, and it DOES CURE CASES nothing else can touch.

You ask "why it will cure you when everything else you have used has failed?" I will tell you the reason.

When there is any disease of the Kidneys or Bladder there is always a leakage of vitality from the system, either through the urine or by absorption by poisonous matter, or both. The vitality thus lost is absolutely necessary to the support of the cell structure of the kidneys, and to the keeping clean of the mucous membrane of the bladder. Most any good Kidney or Bladder remedy will restore to the blood and fluids some of this peculiar though absolutely necessary vital element, but not enough to give these vital organs a sufficient chance to gather themselves for the complete throw-off of the disease. My cure DOES THIS. At least it has for hundreds, yea thousands of others, so why should it not for you? My cure gives back the necessary vitality, it helps to restore healthy tissue, it cleans and heals the Kidneys and Bladder. It expels the poisons which may be rotting the Kidneys and stupefies and casts out germ life. Just try it and let it CONVINCE YOU that all the pains, aches and misery you are suffering from are entirely and absolutely UNNECESSARY.

Not every neglected or wrongly treated case leads to premature death, but a very large per cent. do, and you should bear in mind that by taking my treatment now this element of danger is reduced to a minimum. Therefore, to escape your present suffering and what may become an incurable disease attended with suffering more intense, more awful than anything you can now imagine, just fill out coupon below and send to DR. D. A. WILLIAMS, No. 71 B. O. Block, East Hampton, Conn.

(I presume no sufferer cares for the free stamp, but it is my pride to PROVE I have an ACTUAL cure at not one penny of expense to the sufferer.)

This coupon entitles you to free medicine, free advice and a free postage stamp.

Give your name and full address plainly, and send to Dr. D. A. WILLIAMS, 71 P. O. Block, East Hampton, Conn., and receive same by return mail.

Baldwin fell backward, his head striking the cement sidewalk and cracking his skull. He was removed in an unconscious condition to the hospital, where an operation was undertaken tonight. Dr. Strong, the superintendent, states Baldwin will probably die. McCall is in jail awaiting the result. Several bystanders claim McCall knocked Baldwin's feet from under him.

The child's mother was also attacked, but drove the animal off, without being injured herself, though her garments were torn.

He was released from the County Jail only a few hours before the forgery was committed. ANAHEIM.

LICE DAMAGE CABBAGES.

ANAHEIM, Jan. 13.—Some growers are complaining of the insects, or cabbage lice, and where these are found the crop will run largely to "seeders," which are unmarketable at any price. This is caused by the recent dry weather.

Late cabbages, which have made but little growth, will be brought out by this rain, but the crop will come in nearly a month behind the usual time this season, and it is estimated that it will be light, notwithstanding that over 600 acres have been set to cabbages in Anaheim, Fullerton and Placentia.

Growers say they have to depend on the rains to grow good cabbages which cannot be irrigated successfully until after the plants have formed heads.

It is reported today that the short crop means high prices.

ANAHEIM BRIEFS.

M. P. Baker died at the home of his sister, Mrs. M. V. B. Lovering on Orangethorpe avenue, this morning of consumption. For many years Mr. Baker was a well-known resident of this county. He was a brother of the late D. M. Baker, for twenty years editor of the Santa Ana Standard.

HELP CAME TOO LATE.

Late Attorney Wright, Christian Science Believer, Thought He Had Only a Severe Cold.

C. C. Wright, the well-known attorney whose funeral will be held this afternoon, was a believer in Christian Science.

Physicians were not summoned until he was in a dying condition. He was taken sick Thursday a week ago, and physicians were called the following Wednesday. He died Thursday evening—the next day.

He had been interested in Christian Science for some time, his wife having been successfully treated by that school for a trouble of the eyes.

A week ago last Thursday, Mr. Wright was working in the basement of his home, tinkering with a furnace, and became overheated. He remained in the cold basement to rest and cooled off too suddenly. He became ill almost immediately.

After that he did not go to work again, but remained about the house until his death. He stayed up and fully dressed almost until the end.

When medical men finally arrived, Mr. Wright was dying. He was sitting in his chair, still fully dressed, but near the end. He could hardly talk.

The doctors diagnosed his complaint as double pneumonia. Although a consultation of physicians was held, it was too late for much to be done. Mr. Wright passed away the next day.

A friend of the family gave last night some facts in extenuation of these stated circumstances.

"It was not thought that Mr. Wright was seriously ill. Had he wanted a physician, one would have been summoned. He was able to be up and about and it was thought that he had nothing more than an ordinary hard cold. It was a shock and source of astonishment to the family to find that his condition was so serious."

Neither Dr. Taggert nor Dr. George Cole, who treated him, would be quoted further than to state that Mr. Wright was a very sick man indeed when medical help arrived.

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES.

Situation in China to be Discussed by One Who Spent Many Years There.

Rev. Dr. Warren F. Day, pastor emeritus of the First Congregational Church, has gone to Claremont to preach this morning, and Dr. Kingman of that place will fill Dr. Day's pulpit. The latter spent many years of his life in China and will make the subject of his address this morning: "The Situation in the Far East." Rev. William Horace Day, pastor of the First Congregational Church, has been ill for some days and may not be able to preach this evening, but the pulpit will be filled by some other minister, if necessary.

Commissioner Kilbey will lecture in Blanchard Hall this afternoon at 3 o'clock on the subject: "National Problems and Salvation Army Remedies." At the same meeting Mrs. Kilbey will speak on the subject of women's rescue work.

Rev. J. W. Mohr of Joliet, Ill., who has been in the active ministry since 1856, will preach this morning in the Pico Heights Congregational Church. He is a guest of Rev. J. M. Schaeffle, pastor of the church.

The well-known Peniel Mission, which owns its valuable property at No. 227 South Main street has added a deaconess to its working force, whose duty is to look after the needy, sick or distressed, without charge. They have also taken pains during the cool or rainy weather to have the hall on the ground-floor well lighted, heated and supplied with literature and open all day for the accommodation of those who would drop in to spend the time comfortably with profitable reading.

Rev. E. F. Henderson, pastor of the Colored Mission of the Christian Church, at Eighth and Wall streets, will preach on "The Boy Christ," at 11 o'clock today. Maj. Allen Allensworth will occupy the pulpit in the evening.

BURNED BY FLASH.

William McClain, stage manager at the Cineograph Theater, was badly burned about the face and eyes during the performance last night. He was taken to the Receiving Hospital, where his injuries were dressed by Police Surgeons Quint and Bonynge. McClain was setting off a flashlight at the time of the accident, his face being too near the powder. The injury to his eyes is considered serious.

INTERESTING FACTS

For Nearly Every Man, Woman or Child.

A short time ago we published an article recommending to our readers the new discovery for the cure of Dyspepsia, called Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, and the claims then made regarding the wonderful curative properties of the remedy have been abundantly sustained by the facts. People who were cautious about trying new remedies advertised in the newspapers and were finally induced to give Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets a trial were surprised and delighted at the results. In many cases a single package costing but 50 cents at any drug store made a complete cure and in every instance the most beneficial results were reported. From a hundred or more received we have space to publish only a few of the latest, but assure our readers we receive so many commendatory letters that we shall publish each week a fresh list of genuine, unsolicited testimonials and never publish the same one twice.

From James Yemmeisler, LaCrosse, Wis.: Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are doing me more good than anything I ever tried, and I was so pleased at results that I gave away several boxes to my friends who have also had the same benefits.

From Jacob Anthony, Portmurray, New Jersey: I have taken Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets with the best results. I had dyspepsia for 6 years, and had taken a great deal of medicine, but the Tablets seem to take right a hold and I feel good. I am a farmer and lime-burner and I heartily recommend to every one who has any trouble with his stomach to use these Tablets.

From Mrs. M. K. West, Preston Minn.: I have received surprisingly good effects from using Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. I gave one-half of my last box to a friend who also suffered from indigestion, and she had the same good results.

From Mrs. Agnes K. Ralston, Cadillac, Mich.: I have been taking Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and I am very much better, and feel very grateful for the great benefit I have received in so short a time.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are a certain cure for all forms of indigestion. They are not claimed to be a cure-all, but are prepared for stomach troubles only, and physicians and druggists everywhere recommend them to all persons suffering from Nervous Dyspepsia, sour or acid stomach, heartburn, bloating or wind on stomach and similar disorders.

BREAST CANCER KILLS MOTHER

Two Sisters and Uncle Cured Without Knife or Pain.

"SAN FRANCISCO EXAMINER"

Mrs. Elizabeth McClure of 1563½ Market street, San Francisco, Cal., lost her mother about a year ago after a surgical operation for a lump in her breast. Mrs. McClure and her sister each had a large lump in her breast, which became a poisonous eating cancer. Fearing they would die as did their mother they refused operation.

Hearing of Mrs. Crosthwaite's (954 Arlington avenue, Oakland, Cal.) remarkable cure without knife or pain by a wonderful Pacific Island plant extract, each sister and also an uncle had cancers cured within the same month, and, strangely, without one telling the other. These noted cancer specialists who discovered and use this remedy cure hundreds of cancers that no one but themselves and the patients ever know about. They charge nothing until cured and offer $1,000 if they fail. The cures are made in the privacy of the patient's own home.

Dr. and Mrs. Dr. Chamley & Co. are the doctors who cured Mr. E. J. (Lucky) Baldwin, Arcadia, Cal., of three cancers just three years ago after X-ray had made him much worse. Other physicians thought he could not be cured and would die in a few months. His testimony in his own words is in Dr. Chamley's book, which is the best ever published on cancers. It contains proof that any lump in woman's breast is cancer, also that any tumor, lump or sore on the lip, face or anywhere is cancer.

Dr. Chamley is declared by his patients to be one of the most honest, sincere and kind-hearted doctors they ever knew. He is the best authority in America on the cure of cancers, having cured more in thirty-three years than any other doctor living.

HOW TO CURE RHEUMATISM

I searched the whole earth for a specific for Rheumatism—something that I or any physician could feel safe in prescribing—something that we could count on not only occasionally, but with reasonable certainty. For the ravages of rheumatism are everywhere and genuine relief is rare.

After twenty years of search and experiment I learned of the German chemical I now employ. And I knew then that my search and my efforts were well rewarded. For this chemical in combination with others, gave me the basis of a remedy which in the cure of Rheumatism is practically certain. In many, many tests and difficult cases this prescription has with regularity justified the confidence I had in it.

I don't mean that Dr. Shoop's Rheumatism Tablets can turn bony joints into flesh again and never fail—that is impossible. But they will with reasonable certainty drive from the blood the poison that causes pain and swelling, and then that is the end of the pain and swelling—the end of the suffering—the end of Rheumatism.

Any Rheumatic sufferer who writes may receive my little book on Rheumatism, including professional advice as to diet, etc., free. With the book I will also send without charge my "Health Token," an intended passport to good health. Address Dr. Shoop, Box 2970, Racine, Wis.

Mild cases are sometimes reached by a single package—for sale by 40,000 druggists.

FOOTHILL CITY WINS AGAIN.

MONROVIA TAKES HONORS IN HIGH SCHOOL DEBATE.

Results Attributed to Custom of Having Students Speak Often Before Their Mates—Almost Complete Chain of Victories—Unpopular Side of the Question.

MONROVIA, Jan. 13.—Monrovia High School added another to her list of triumphs last night when, handicapped with the unpopular side of a question of public policy, she won a debate from Downey High School by a score of 100 to 0. There was introduced at this debate a new and untried team of speakers.

Miss Gladys Burr and Charles Jernigan, who were untried only in the sense that they had never appeared in a championship debate, for it has been the custom of Prof. Nathan F. Smith to have all the students of the High School speak frequently before their schoolmates. This has not only given the Debating League a number of practiced speakers to draw upon but has fed enthusiasm, and has caused Monrovia High Schoo to divert to this feature a great deal of interest that might otherwise have gone to profitless sports.

This is only one more step in Monrovia's unique record. Although by no means one of the largest schools in the Southern California High School Debating League, it has participated in more debates than any other. This school has met and conquered Covina twice, Pomona once, Long Beach, Compton, Riverside, Pasadena twice, Los Angeles once, Anaheim once, Santa Monica by default, and Downey. Only once did the school lose the decision. This was in an argument with San Fernando when they were called upon to prove that this government is not more representative than that of England. In this instance the Monrovia speakers carried off first and second honors.

It was fated that Monrovia should argue again on the wrong side of a question—that it should be called upon to show that this country should not maintain a large navy—and even Prof. Smith was despondent of results. Downey knew her strength, and her speakers were well equipped for the fray. They came to Monrovia 125 strong on a special train, and their speakers were so competent as to arouse sincere applause from the Monrovia audience, which packed the High School auditorium until there was not standing room. Their defeat they took in good part. They gave three cheers for the victors and received floral tributes from the triumphant team, which escorted them to the train.

Monrovia High School is determined to secure the championship this year, and will work all the harder with this splendid victory to its credit. This gives the school 100 points, adding to eighty-five received through Santa Monica defaulting on a debate.

BANK OFFICERS.

At an election of officers held this afternoon the First National Bank placed upon its board of directors H. S. McKee of Los Angeles, who has recently become largely interested in real estate and buildings here. He has become a heavy stockholder in this institution, which is entering upon the new year with something over a quarter of a million of deposits. Another new director is Joseph Fowler, a business man of Duarte. Reëlections of directors are I. W. Hellman, J. A. Graves, J. F. Sartori, Louis Bradbury and J. H. Bartle.

The election of officers in the Monrovia Savings Bank has put on the official board H. W. Hellman, R. M. Baker, A. H. Johnson, W. A. Chess and J. H. Bartle.

WHAT SULPHUR DOES.

For The Human Body in Health and Disease.

The mention of sulphur will recall to many of us the early days when our mothers and grandmothers gave us our daily dose of sulphur and molasses every spring and fall.

It was the universal spring and fall "blood purifier," tonic and cure-all, and mind you, this old-fashioned remedy was not without merit.

The idea was good, but the remedy was crude and unpalatable, and a large quantity had to be taken to get any effect.

Nowadays we get all the beneficial effects of sulphur in a palatable, concentrated form, so that a single grain is far more effective than a tablespoonful of the crude sulphur.

In recent years, research and experiment have proven that the best sulphur for medicinal use is that obtained from Calcium (Calcium Sulphide) and sold in drug stores under the name of Stuart's Calcium Wafers. They are small chocolate coated pellets and contain the active medicinal principle of sulphur in a highly concentrated, effective form.

Few people are aware of the value of this form of sulphur in restoring and maintaining bodily vigor and health; sulphur acts directly on the liver, and excretory organs and purifies and enriches the blood by the prompt elimination of waste material.

Our grandmothers knew this when they dosed us with sulphur and molasses every spring and fall, but the crudity and impurity of ordinary flowers of sulphur were often worse than the disease, and cannot compare with the modern concentrated preparations of sulphur, of which Stuart's Calcium Wafers is undoubtedly the best and most widely used.

They are the natural antidote for liver and kidney troubles and cure constipation and purify the blood in a way that often surprises patient and physician alike.

Dr. R. M. Wilkins while experimenting with sulphur remedies soon found that the sulphur from Calcium was superior to any other form. He says: "For liver, kidney and blood troubles, especially when resulting from constipation or malaria, I have been surprised at the results obtained from Stuart's Calcium Wafers. In patients suffering from boils and pimples and even deep-seated carbuncles, I have repeatedly seen them dry up and disappear in four or five days, leaving the skin clear and smooth. Although Stuart's Calcium Wafers is a proprietary article, and sold by druggists, and for that reason tabooed by many physicians, yet I know of nothing so safe and reliable for constipation, liver and kidney troubles and especially in all forms of skin disease as this remedy."

At any rate people who are tired of pills, cathartics and so-called blood "purifiers," will find in Stuart's Calcium Wafers a far safer, more palatable and effective preparation.

AZUSA.

WATER DIRECTORS CHOSEN.

AZUSA, Jan. 13.—The Azusa Irrigating Company today elected the following directors: W. W. Hett, Dan Reichard, W. R. Powell, C. D. Leech, B. F. Thorpe, E. F. Badger and D. C. Headley. Dan Reichard, W. R. Powell and H. R. Griffith were elected to serve on the San Gabriel River Water Committee. The newly-elected board organized by electing W. R. Powell president; W. W. Heth, vice-president; H. S. Johnson, secretary, and the First National Bank of Azusa, treasurer.

The following directors of the United States National Bank of Azusa have been elected: J. A. Graves, president; E. R. Jeffrey, vice-president; J. H. Anderson, cashier. Contract for the new bank building will be let in the next few days.

EL MONTE.

CALL TO PASTORATE.

EL MONTE, Jan. 13.—The members of the Baptist Church have voted to call Rev. S. A. Webster of Monrovia to the pastorate. It is the intention of the church to sell the present property, which is valuable as a business location, purchase a less costly lot and erect a more modern building. This house of worship was the first Baptist Church in Southern California, built over fifty years ago.

Rev. S. L. Todd, pastor of the Methodist Church here, is in Santa Paula, where he is assisting in revival services.

OCEAN PARK.

KNOTTY LICENSE QUESTION.

OCEAN PARK, Jan. 13.—The right of the city of Ocean Park to exact a license from the business houses of Pier avenue is being questioned, and promises to come before the City Trustees in the shape of a hard knot that seeks untying. Pier avenue, while located in Santa Monica, is recognized as the bone and sinew of Ocean Park. Its merchants supply the people of Ocean Park, as there are no stores in that city, except at Venice. The merchants resist the payment of the license and deem it unjust.

SANTA MONICA.

BATH-HOUSE MAN FALLS DEAD.

SANTA MONICA, Jan. 13.—G. W. Kintz, proprietor of the Crystal plunge bath-house, on Ocean front, dropped dead this afternoon. He was walking along Trolleyway near Front street and suddenly fell to the ground. Before assistance could reach him he had breathed his last. Coroner Trout will come to the beach tomorrow and investigate the death, although it is thought to have resulted from heart trouble.

SOUTH PASADENA.

FAVOR HIGH SCHOOL BONDS.

SOUTH PASADENA, Jan. 13.—At a public meeting last evening the sentiment was expressed in favor of another bond issue for High School funds.

A series of revival meetings will be held in the Magnolia Hall the coming week by Rev. Sumner T. Martin of the Christian Church, Pasadena. He will be assisted with song and stereopticon by J. Walter Wilson.

Edwin Cawston is enlarging his feather factory at the Ostrich Farm. The new building will be 30x40 feet, and two stories high. A force of about double the present number of laborers will be employed in the new building.

The funeral of Miss Mabel Keith, who died yesterday morning, will be held at the Methodist Church Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. C. W. Iler, pastor of the Baptist Church of which Miss Keith was a member, will officiate, assisted by Rev. G. W. Coultas. Miss Keith grew up in South Pasadena.

The new house of worship of the St. Andrew's Mission will be opened tomorrow with services conducted by Bishop Johnson of Los Angeles.

LONG BEACH.

ARRESTS ALLEGED ABDUCTOR.

LONG BEACH, Jan. 13.—Constable R. M. Lynn this morning arrested Pablo Valensuela on a charge of abduction preferred by Namo Soto. The latter alleges that Valensuela, who is 25 years of age, induced his daughter to leave home. Valensuela says he wants to marry Miss Soto, but as she is not quite 18, the County Clerk refused to issue a license. Meanwhile the couple are living together. Valensuela was released on bond.

SEASHORE RUMBLINGS.

The corner-stone of the joint building of the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Association has been set for Sunday, February 4. The programme will include brief addresses by State and local representatives and music by a male and female chorus from each association. In four months the Y.M.C.A. has secured a membership of 550 and the Y.W.C.A. has grown to 300 in two years.

The Cosmopolitan, the leading men's club of the city, has secured a five-year lease of an entire floor of the Heller-Driskill Block on Pine avenue and will occupy it after June 1. Last night the club elected officers: President, Rev. Charles T. Murphy; vice-president, Dr. W. H. Jones; secretary, E. H. Van Sittert; treasurer, W. A. Kennedy; chairman House Committee, L. Hazelwood-Smith.

The display cases on the south side of Brennan's grocery store at Second and Daisy collapsed at noon today and with a roar that was heard a block away crashed down on a row of showcases and jams, jellies and catsups, mingled joyously with candy, soap and toilet articles. A defect in the walls, which settled, caused the wreck.

Deputy Grand Chancellor S. G. Long last night installed new officers of Long Beech Lodge, No. 210, K. of P. Following this a banquet was given by the new officers.

Dr. W. H. Rider, pastor of Westlake Methodist Episcopal Church, will address the Y.M.C.A. meeting Sunday afternoon at the Tabernacle on the subject "Fits and Misfits."

The Citizens' Savings Bank has elected new officers: President, J. B. Heartwell; vice-presidents, W. L. Campbell and W. W. Lowe; cashier, C. L. Heartwell; assistant cashier, C. E. Huntington.

Mrs. Anna Sax, aged 73, and a resident of Long Beach for three years, died this morning at her home on Seventh and Terminal strreets.

E. L. Wingard today sold 50x150 feet on Pine avenue between Second and Third streets for a stated price of $50,000 to C. J. Walker. The property is improved with a modern two-story brick block.

CLAREMONT.

MEDICAL ASSOCIATION MEETS.

CLAREMONT, Jan. 13.—The quarterly meeting of the Pomona District Medical Association, a branch of the Los Angeles County Medical Association, was held at the home of Dr. F. W. Thomas Friday evening. Dr. A. S. Lobinger of Los Angeles was the guest of the association and spoke on "conditions that justify the opening of the abdominal covity for the purpose of diagnosis and exploration." The physicians present were F. Garcelon, C. T. Toland, T. H. Smith, J. K. Swindt, T. J. Wilson, all of Pomona, and Drs. R. P. Myers, R. Richmond, and F. W. Thomas of Claremont.

The association extended an invitation to the college students who were intending to take up the study of medicine as a profession, to attend the meeting.

FIRST DIVIDEND.

The Citizens' Light and Water Company has declared its first dividend—6 per cent. About two and one-half years ago the company was incorporated. A large reservoir and pumping station were installed about two miles north of town at a cost of about $20,000. With the increased demand of the last year the company has increased its pipe lines and installed a new engine at a cost of several thousand dollars. The following directors were elected: Dr. F. W. Thomas, C. C. Johnson, C. M. Parsons, George Jencks and L. N. Smith.

POMONA.

SAY UNIONS DON'T BENEFIT.

POMONA, Jan. 13.—The tenth-year pupils of the Pomona High School gave a reception at Hotel Palomares last evening and a debate was given in the High School auditorium between representatives from Pomona and the Throop School of Pasadena. The subject, "Resolved, that labor unions have benefited the laboring man," was presented by Floyd Lorbeer and Miss Bess Adams for Pomona, who supported the negative side and won the debate. Joseph Dixon and Walter Taylor represented Throop, speaking on the affirmative side. The judges were Prof. Frampton of Pomona College, Judge Noyes of Riverside and Judge West of Orange.

POMONA NEWS POINTS.

A man named Joseph Fowler, who arrived at North Pomona this morning on the west-bound Overland from Benton Harbor, Mich., died soon after leaving the train. He was coming here to meet a couple of long-haired evangelists, members of Gabriel's Band, who have been preaching on local street corners. Fowler's religious belief led him to spurn medical relief and he would allow no physician to be summoned.

The funeral of the late Mrs. P. C. Tonner was held at the Methodist Church this forenoon, Rev. Dr. Wesley Beans officiating. The local W.C.T.U. attended in a body.

Miss Grace Shoemaker entertained a few friends at dinner at her home on Cucamonga avenue last evening.

The local High School cadets are arranging to give the military play, "Held by the Enemy," at the Fraternal Aid Operahouse in a month or so. A. H. Witman, Jr., will assist in the production.

Their Merits Quickly Realized

Marshall & Stearns Company's Patented Wall Beds and Fixtures

Will Be Universally Adopted and Installed

THE MARSHALL & STEARNS COMPANY'S PATENTED WALL BEDS AND FIXTURES have done more toward perfecting the modern apartment house than has any thing else during the past quarter century.

The purposes for which they were intended—that of increasing the number of suites in a building built on the same size lot, over that possible in the old-style building, which would mean a much larger income; the reduction in cost of construction, and the added conveniences to the tenant, for which they would willingly pay as much or more for two or three rooms than they would for six or eight, have more than been fulfilled, and have been met by a united response from the public at large.

Quickly realizing their merits and many advantages, architects, contractors, builders, investors and capitalists have speedily adopted them in the construction of modern apartment houses, and as it is built in California today so is the apartment house of the entire country sure to be constructed as fast as our Patented Wall Beds and Fixtures can be introduced and adopted.

The overcrowded city of New York, where building restrictions are more severe than in any other city in the United States, has quickly accepted them, and a plan is now nearing completion for the expenditure of a million dollars in the erection of apartment houses under the Marshall & Stearns Company's plan. The hustling, bustling city of San Antonio, Texas, will also revolutionize its method of apartment house construction and will adopt our plans, as will be seen by the following extracts from the Daily Express of that city.

"Plans have been made for another magnificent apartment house to be built on the Mission style, which will be constructed at an early date on a site near the postoffice. Local and foreign capital will jointly be interested in the house.

"The building will contain twenty modern apartments, each furnished with the Marshall and Stearns Company's Patented Wall Beds and Fixtures, consisting of a living room with disappearing furniture, a dining-room, kitchen, bath room, gas arrangements for cooking purposes and other modern features. A vestibule entrance to each apartment will be provided, as will also a private veranda in dimensions of seven by twenty feet.

"A courtyard will be provided, with palms and other tropical verdure will lend the local color which is so attractive in San Antonio.

"It is proposed to make this apartment house one of the very finest in the country. In Los Angeles they have long been features of the facilities of that city in handling tourists, for whose uses they are especially adapted."—San Antonio Express, January 4, 1906.

"It is probable that during the first week in January arrangements will be made for the erection of two large apartment houses in San Antonio on a novel plan. On account of details yet to be worked out, the complete plans cannot be made public now. One building will likely be on Avenue C and the other on San Pedro avenue. Probably $75,000 will represent the investment in both.

"The features that will distinguish these buildings in their equipment with the Marshall and Stearns Company's Patented Wall Beds and Fixtures, after the plan that is common in cities where apartment-house life means much more than it has in San Antonio.

"The use of these wall beds, bookcases, writing desks, dining tables and ranges that are arranged on swinging doors so as to fit into the walls and appear and disappear at will has made it possible to build more rooms in a given space and the convenience to the householder is said to be proportionately great. This arrangement makes it necessary for the renter to buy only the minimum amount of furniture and will be especially attractive to winter visitors, who may desire to remain in San Antonio but six months of the year.

"Some of the men who are figuring on investing money in apartment houses in this city estimate that they can make 17 per cent. per annum on their money, where they are now getting but 3 and 4. This character of investment in San Antonio seems to be regarded as one of the safest and most profitable offered."—San Antonio Express, December 30, 1905.

It is a pleasure to explain in detail to everyone our method of construction and the many advantages to be derived from the same by the use of our Patented Fixtures. Whether you call in person or write, you will be given the same attention and information. If you cannot call, send for a copy of "THE HOUSE IDEAL," which illustrates and describes in detail our PATENTED WALL BEDS AND FIXTURES. In it are many facts and much food for thought for every hotel owner, manager, capitalist, builder of apartment houses, homes and cottages, as well as the permanent and transient resident who lives in the same. To the latter it tells you how to enjoy life; how you can greatly reduce your housework and find more time for the pleasures of life. To the former, how to best arrange and construct your building, of whatever kind it may be, how to reduce the cost of such construction, and how to increase the income from 25 to 33 1-3 per cent. SEND FOR A COPY. IT IS MAILED FREE UPON REQUEST.

Local Citrus Movement.

The shipments of citrus fruit from Southern California yesterday consisted of 25 cars of oranges and 2 cars of lemons. This makes a total for the season of 4509 cars, of which 580 cars were lemons. For the same period last season, 4278 cars were shipped, 328 cars being lemons.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

The week closed yesterday with a moderately active Saturday produce market. Traffic in some of the commodities was inclined to be a trifle dull on account of the rainy weather, but retail dealers were purchasing liberally of the choice grades of eggs, butter and fruits, and prime quality vegetables were in keen demand. There was considerable discussion among the local egg jobbers as to the correct price of local ranch eggs; while the egg committee of the exchange held the price at 32 cents, jobbers around the markets declared that with the present supplies and the heavy receipts daily, the market could not stand over a 30@31-cent quotation, for even the strictly fresh ranch offerings. A few reported that they were receiving 32 cents for their ranch eggs, but the general price quoted was 30@31 cents. No great change is expected until after the weather clears up, and it is predicted that if the weather is warm local ranch eggs will be plentiful, and further drops may be expected; if it turns cold, supplies will be lessened and higher prices are likely to rule. A shipment of fresh eggs is to arrive Tuesday from Fresno. The consignees say the eggs are secured for less than local ranch eggs can be bought for, and the arrivals of these offerings may have a tendency to weaken the price here. The receipts yesterday were unusually heavy for one day, being a total of 173 cases.

The butter market in San Francisco is reported firmer, but local jobbers of dairy products say it is unlikely that this market will advance beyond present firm quotations. One car of Wisconsin cheese arrived yesterday and is steady at unaltered prices. Fresh stocks of cheese are very firm, owing to the light receipts.

Trade in apples was rather quiet, but the market was very active and firm on citrus fruits. Large sizes of navel oranges commanded firm prices. It is reported that many of the large packing-houses are shutting down at Riverside, on account of lower orange prices in the East. This has had a tendency to lessen the shipping of culls to this city, and the demand has increased for the better grades. The first shipment of the season of the Poppy and Eclipse brands from Redlands were received during the past week by Marston & Martin of the market. The oranges were quoted at 2.50@4.50 per box.

Strawberries were in moderate receipt and sold at 15@25.

Imperial grapes are about all that is left to quote now. They sell at 8 cents a pound. A shipment of 125 cases of pineapples is expected in on Wednesday from the Islands.

Potatoes were in good demand yesterday, and the poorer grades showed some sign of improvement. Northern potatoes of chice stocks are very firm, and reports from the Sacramento Valley are that large shipments were sent to Arkansas and Texas during the past week. There was a good demand for sweet potatoes at 1.00@1.25 per cwt.

Several shipments of choice Australian Brown onions came in from Lompoc, and are said to be the finest stock of the season.

Vegetables were scarce on account of the rains. Lettuce sold at 50 cents per box; tomatoes, 50@1.00; summer squash, 1.25 box; sprouts are more plentiful, at 6@7; peas are weaker, at 6@8; Geans, 16@18; eggplant, 12½@15.

Poultry receipts were light, and stocks are cleaned up.

Large fish was plentiful, but small fish, lobsters and crabs scarce. Wild game was equal to the demand.

The receipts of produce as reported at yesterday's exchange were as follows: Eggs, 173 cases; butter, 11,255 lbs.; cheese, 6755 lbs.; potatoes, 1256 sacks; onions, none; beans, none; sweet potatoes, 45 sacks.

NEW YORK MARKETS.

SHARES AND MONEY.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—There was enormous profit-taking throughout today's short session of the stock exchange. Notwithstanding the very active demand which lifted the volume of sales for the two hours' session to near the million mark, the market was kept in an irregular state by the constant realizing, and showed some signs of disorder in the final dealings. There were sustaining points of strength at all times, and prices were lifted to the highest after the general reaction from the opening advance, but the favorable bank statement, which was better than the preliminary estimates, was the signal for heavy selling throughout the list, to take advantage of its stimulating effect on new demand. The Pacifics were especially affected by the late realizing. This was after Union Pacific had been lifted a fraction to a new record level, at 158⅝. At one time, Amalgamated Copper and United States Steel preferred momentarily were a point above last night's level. The Hill stocks also made wide additions to their recent large advances. Missouri Pacific continued its newly-awakened activity, and had some effect on other members of the Gould group. The upward rush in Brooklyn Transit at the last was due to revived traction merger rumors. Reports of failures of brokerage houses in Pittsburgh and Cleveland had some bad effect on sentiment. Total sales of bonds, par value, $2,280,000.

GENERAL EASTERN MARKETS.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

CHICAGO, Jan. 13.—Advices from Argentina of additional rains and a resulting delayed movement of the wheat crop resulted in a firm market here today. Several of the larger commission houses bought freely in the first hour, and although local traders sold liberally, prices made a moderate advance. In India the wheat crop was said to be suffering from lack of moisture. Toward the middle of the day, the market reacted somewhat on selling induced by reports of a slack demand for flour in the Northwest and at Kansas City. The easier feeling, however, was quickly dispelled by active buying of shorts, who were stirred by action by small primary receipts and heavy clearances at the seaboard. The market closed firm. After opening unchanged, to ⅛c higher, at 88¼c@88⅜c, the May option sold between 88⅜ and 88⅝c, and closed at 88⅜@88½c.

Unsettled weather in the Central West caused strength in the corn market. The market closed strong with prices at highest point of the day. May opened unchanged at 45⅛c, sold off to 45, and then advanced to 45⅜@45½c, where it closed. Sentiment in the oat pit was bearish. May opened unchanged to ⅛c lower at 32@32⅛c; sold between 31⅞@32⅛c, and closed at 32@32⅛c.

Provisions were easier early in the session because of profit-taking by longs, which was induced by a 10c decline in the price of live hogs. Pit traders, however, were bullishly inclined because of heavy shipments of meats and lard, and bought freely. Their operations resulted in a firmer feeling. At the close, May pork was up 5c; lard was up 2½@5c, and ribs were 2½@5c higher.

The leading futures closed as follows:

FRUIT, GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Disclusive.] Aside from the filling of local routine jobbing wants for over-Sunday requirements there was little life stirring in the fruit market today, continued stormy weather seriously interfering with traffic in all departments. Prices were without important variation, and there was a total absence of interesting features. Supplies of large-sized oranges continued light and firmly held at full outside prices, while quoted rates for smaller fruit were steady, as dealers showed no disposition to force sales by shading rates. It was reported that four carloads of navels were in sight for Monday's auction. The fresh consignments of Mexican limes were placed on sale, but as a large portion was utilized in filling previous orders, prices showed no easiness. Lemons continued abundant and cheap. Apples remained precisely as last quoted. Another car of Hood River stock is reported at hand for Monday's market.

Weather conditions continue to hamper trading in potatoes, and the market was of quiet appearance at the old range of values. Similar conditions existed in the market for onions. Sweet potatoes were plentiful at old prices, much off quality stock pressing for sale at inside rates. The arrivals of miscellaneous vegetables were extremely light, and well cared for. Fancy tomatoes sold at improved rates, and peas were quickly absorbed at quotations. Cucumbers continued to drag, and were easy at lower prices.

IN MEMORIAM.

Society of Colonial Wars Issues Handsome Souvenir to the Memory of Departed Brothers.

The decennial register of the Society of Colonial Wars in the State of California, together with the proceedings of the eleventh general court, held December 21, has just been published.

The main purpose of the publication of the register is to record the deaths that have occurred among the members during the past year and give an authentic history of their lives and lineage. Four were added to the long roll during 1895 and with their biographies appear fine half-tone portraits of the deceased. They are Rev. Alexander Ross Merwin, who died in Pasadena, February 2, 1895; Herbert Cornelius Andrews, who died in Chicago, May 31, 1905; Frederick Hastings Rindge, who died in Yreka, Cal., August 29, 1905; Spencer Roane Thorpe, who died in Moor Park, Cal., September 2, 1905.

The register is printed in four colors and forms a handsome souvenir for the friends of the deceased members.

At the time of her disappearance she was garbed only in a wrapper. She was traced to the car line and is thought to have come to this city, while partially demented.

Money Flowing Back to New York Makes Financial Situation Much Easier.

The immense sums of money spent for holiday trade all over the country, the largest probably ever known, are at last gathering into rills and streams and going back to New York. This will increase in volume almost daily for some time to come, and that financial center of the world will find less stringency in the money market from now on than has been the case during the past many months.

The bank statement issued yesterday shows an increase in the reserves of the clearinghouse banks in the city of New York amounting to $12,227,650. While this was true, the loans for the past week showed an increase of only $382,300. The deposits increased $13,467,400, leaving a surplus above the legal reserves of deposits of the handsome sum of $12,908,650. This must seem very encouraging to the big plungers in the stock market, who have seen the reserve trembling around the legal point, going as often below that as above it for many weeks past. Evidently this condition has been more or less anticipated, as indicated by the exceedingly firm grip that the holders of speculative securities have held upon that kind of property in spite of call money, which ranged all the way from 25 to 125 per cent. Owing to the relaxation in the money market, a large business in speculative stocks and a market of a very bullish character are anticipated for the coming week.

BITTERS

To The Money Earner

Where is the money you have earned during all the years you have labored with hand or brain, or both?

Has it been frittered away, or has it been placed in some safe, sound and solid investment?

No man ever got rich by the sweat of his brow.

You and your money are partners. Make your partner do a little of the work.

Do you see the point? Money in the bank makes money for the bank.

Your money, placed in a safe, sound, solid enterprise with its assets based on real estate, with its product based on the greatest of all food necessities—beef—means that your "partner" is doing something, and will continue to do something when you, perhaps, are unable to work. The is an enterprise which illustrates admirably the opportunity for such "partnerships" in the best sense of the word. Here is the record of its assets and liabilities:

ASSETS.

12,000 acres grazing land, inclosed, at $9.00	$108,000
1800 head Hereford cattle, $20	36,000
12 miles pipe line, canals, horses, barns, etc	31,000
Total	$175,000

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock (in shares of $100 each)	$250,000

Value of Stock Per Share $70

The holdings of the company are in the Antelope Valley, Los Angeles County, 18 miles from Lancaster. There is plenty of water, with the Los Angeles market within easy reach.

We have purchased 1000 shares of the stock of the American-Mexican Cattle Company—the entire amount tendered the public—and now offer 700 shares at which is 30 per cent. below its actnal value, based on a very conservative estimate. The stock will pay 5 per cent. on the capitalization, which is TEN PER CENT. ON THE PRICE WE ASK. We have no hesitancy in strongly recommending this as a sound, money-making investment. Call on or address

ELASTIC
COMPANY

Dividends 10 to 20 Per Cent.

The undersigned is authorized to offer at par 10,000 shares of stock of the

of Los Angeles, incorporated under the laws of California. Capital stock $100,000, in shares of $1 each. TREASURY STOCK 80,000 SHARES.

Pres., W. R. Dickinson; Vice-Pres., Garner Curran; Sec. and Mngr., J. C. Marquardt.

Nineteen different elastic pulp plaster companies are in successful operation in different parts of the United States. All are paying handsome dividends—some as high as 30 PER CENT.

There is no reason why the Los Angeles company should not do equally as well. Building is progressing at the rate of $1,000,000 a month. Vast quantities of plaster are used, and ELASTIC PULP PLASTER IS THE BEST AND MOST ECONOMICAL PLASTER MADE. The builders of Los Angeles and Southern California must have it.

A favorable lease has been made for a four-story factory building on Slauson avenue, in the Huntington Park manufacturing district. The necessary machinery has been purchased, part of it is in place, and delivery of the product will begin within 30 days. ORDERS RECEIVED NOW.

ELASTIC PULP PLASTER is composed mostly of gypsum, contains no hair or lime, and is absolutely FIREPROOF AND WATERPROOF. It is manufactured under a secret formula, is protected by strong patents and is the result of 10 years' hard work.

Remember, Elastic Pulp Plaster is not an experiment. It is an accomplished, successful fact, as its nineteen dividend-paying companies testify.

At Par, $1 Per Share

We believe this to be one of the very best opportunities open to investors. We will be glad to give further information. Call on or address

How About That Bank Account

Which You Intended to Start With the New Year?

Thousands of people make resolutions to open a Bank account with some reliable banking institution at the beginning of each year, but many neglect to fulfill their resolutions.

In later years these negligent ones bemoan their hard luck and vow that were they enabled to live their lives over, no barrier could come between them and a savings account.

Small deposits soon amount up to goodly sums, and place the depositor in an independent position.

The Continental Building & Loan Association of San Francisco is the largest co-operative bank in the United States, and is as strong as the Rock of Gibraltar.

While ordiary savings banks pay 3 per cent. interest, the Continental pays 6 per cent. Why not open an account with the Continental today, and make your money earn 6 per cent. interest?

Thousands of our citizens are taking advantage of the Continental's "Banking by Mail" department.

The... Steinway Vertegrand

The Vertegrand is the latest development in Steinway construction. In this piano a result has been achieved which embodies all the superior attributes of a Steinway Grand Piano in a compact, upright form, suitable to the limited dimensions of the modern drawing room.

Owing to the simplicity of its design and construction, the Vertegrand is offered to the public at the lowest price at which a new Steinway Piano could be purchased in the last 35 years, namely, $550—in an ebony case.

The Steinway Minature Grand

The new five-foot-ten-inch Steinway Miniature Grand is proving a constant and increasing source of erment and delight to all musicians and music rs. Scientific experiments and acoustical researches determined the exact size, namely, five feet ten es, necessary to reproduce the remarkable tonal ities of our larger Grand Pianos. Any Grand under size crosses the danger line, as it cannot yield a result superior to the discarded square.

We recommend a thorough examination and trial this unique instrument to anybody desirous of possessing a Grand Piano, but who does not wish to exceed investment of $875 in a piano purchase.

GIGANTIC TASK FOR SCIENTISTS TO PLACE TELESCOPE ON MOUNTAIN.

HOW to get some of the ponderous parts of the marvelous Snow telescope to their final destination at the peak of Mount Wilson is a question that is puzzling scientists and engineers engaged in the work of installing the most wonderful heaven-searching instrument in all the world.

With the site of the solar observatory more than a mile above them—the intervening space spanned by a mere mountain trail—they are working out plans for transporting the apparatus from the workshop at Pasadena to the lofty eminence.

It will be necessary either to widen the existing trail up the mountain side or to await the construction of the electric road and incline for which a company already has been organized but which has not announced its plans for the construction of the road.

The castings and larger parts of the Snow telescope and spectroscopic instruments were carried up some months ago on a specially devised, narrow, four-wheeled truck, drawn by mules.

But the five-ton castings of the new five-foot reflector cannot be handled in a manner so comparativey easy. It will be a Herculean task to get the apparatus to the mountain top in any event.

Yet this is only one of the many details pertaining to the work of the astronomers on the heights. With all that already has been done, plans are under way for a new observatory with a fifty-foot dome, which is to be erected in the vicinity of the Snow telescope to accommodate the new sixty-inch reflector and its ponderous mounting now being constructed under the supervision of Prof. Ritchey at Pasadena.

YEAR'S APPROPRIATION.

For work that is to be done in the course of the present year, the Carnegie Institute, at its recent annual meeting, made an appropriation of $150,000 for the completion of buildings, the purchase of machinery, and the construction of astronomical instruments for the solar observatory. This with previous appropriations will aggregate $315,000. Additional appropriations will be made annually for maintenance of the work.

It was a fortunate thing for Southern California when Prof. George E. Hale, director of the Yerkes Observatory, decided to come to this land of cloudless skies to study the conditions for astronomical research.

One must go back some time to learn the history of the final establishment of the great solar observatory on Mount Wilson, and the founding of the best equipped and most complete astronomical instrument factory in the world today. Early in his career this young man—Hale is only 37 years of age—became a specialist in astronomical research. Believing that solar physics—a study of the nature and constitution of the sun and the changes to be noted on its visible surface—offered the most inviting field in the domain of astronomical science, he fitted up a private observatory of his own (the Kenwood, near Chicago,) and with spectroscopic devices invented by himself, instituted a series of observations which attracted the attention of astrophysicists throughout the world.

HARPER ENLISTS HALE.

When President Harper joined the Chicago University, Hale was invited to take the chair of astronomy. Learning that a pair of forty-inch lenses were waiting for a purchaser, Hale and Harper visited Yerkes, then city railway magnate, and induced him to make the donation of $500,000 to found the observatory in which the famous telescope should be a leading feature. Hale planned its equipment, selected its working force, merged the Kenwood into it, and became its director.

Prof. Hale had been elected a member of the National Academy of Sciences and it seemed to him that that organization might exercise a great influence in promoting international coöperative research. He suggested the appointment of a committee from that body to coöperate with like committees from other national academies, for the special purpose of furthering the cause of solar research.

Accordingly Hale was made chairman of a committee of five distinguished American astronomers, consisting of Young of Princeton, Langley of Washington, Michelson of Chicago, Campbell of the Lick, and himself. They arranged for an international convention of delegates in St. Louis in 1904, where a preliminary organization was effected. At a second meeting, held at Oxford in September last, the International Union for Coöperation in Solar Research was established; with an Executive Committee consisting of Schuster of Manchester, Hale of Mt. Wilson and a third member to be appointed.

The result was that systematic solar research has been undertaken by investigators in that branch of astronomical science in England, France, Germany, Russia, Sweden, Italy, Austria and India. In 1895, Prof. Hale established the Astrophysical Journal, which immediately became the organ and authorized channel for contributions in that department of research, and is such today.

A few years ago the Carnegie Institution was established at Washington for the purpose of aiding and encouraging original research in the physical and biological sciences. Its splendid endowment of $10,000,000 enables it to expend annually $500,000 for the purposes mentioned, and a committee was appointed to determine how that munificent fund should be distributed so as to further the best interests of science.

MOST PROMISING SITE.

In 1903, a committee consisting of Boss, Campbell and Hale, was appointed by the Carnegie Institute to report on the advisability of establishing an observatory for solar research. Prof. Hussey, then of Lick Observatory, was employed by the committee to investigate sites in Southern California and Arizona, and also in Australia. As the result of his recommendations, confirmed by Campbell and Hale, Mt. Wilson was selected as the most promising site.

Systematic tests inaugurated by Hale in March, 1904, and continued to the present time, have demonstrated the fact that Mt. Wilson is unsurpassed as a site for all classes of astronomical research.

The custodians of the Carnegie fund decided to establish laboratories for research in various parts of the country, but they made the largest appropriation in the past two years for the establishment on Mt. Wilson of the most completely equipped observatory for solar research in the world. The amount thus far donated for this purpose aggregates $315,000, of which $5000 was expended in determining the best location for a solar observatory site, and the balance is now being expended for the erection of suitable buildings on Mt. Wilson, and the equipment of a complete astronomical instrument shop and computing office in Pasadena.

In a former article were described the buildings then being erected upon the mountain, consisting of the massive foundation for the unique Snow telescope, 220 feet in length; the "Monastery" for the residence of the astronomers; the electric power-house and repair shop, and other necessary buildings, and how the lumber, cement and other materials had to be conveyed up the steep mountain trail on muleback.

A SHOP OF WONDERS.

Perhaps one of the most important adjuncts of the solar observatory is the extensive instrument shop, located on Santa Barbara street in Pasadena. The shop is of brick, with brick partitions, thus minimizing danger from fire.

Here are several large and elaborately constructed lathes and other machine tools, capable of handling heavy work and of producing the most refined mechanical results. The Snow telescope and the entire mounting of the magnificent spectrographs used in connection with it, with improvements never before embodied in like physical instruments, have been designed by Messrs. Hale and Ritchey and executed by their corps of highly trained assistants.

In a separate room and carefully guarded, Prof. G. W. Ritchey is grinding the great concave mirror, a massive block of glass imported from France, five feet in diameter and eight inches thick, and weighing more than a ton. It has a focal length of twenty-five feet, and when silvered and mounted in the new observatory on Mount Wilson, will be unsurpassed in light gathering power by any reflector in existence. A special mounting, designed by Prof. Ritchey, is being constructed for it by the Union Iron Works at San Francisco. Several of the separate parts will weigh more than five tons each.

This magnificent reflector will be devoted to photographic and spectro-

KNOCKING AT CITY'S GATES.

Forty Square Miles Ready to Enter There.

Cry for Annexation Along Boundary Lines.

Twenty-five Thousand on the Waiting List.

Knocking at the gates of the city and earnestly seeking admission to the corporate limits of Los Angeles is a vast stretch of territory with a growing population.

From the east and from the west, from the north and from the south, the request is urgent and the city will be called upon soon to decide the question of admitting or rejecting the many populous sections which are hugging the city limits so closely.

Perhaps the most peculiar of all the requests for annexation is that of East Hollywood and the territory immediately adjoining. Failing to secure necessary improvements, because of the alleged indifference of the Supervisor from the Third district to the needs of the section, East Hollywood asks to be admitted at once to be free from Supervisoral domination.

As an inducement good school buildings, splendid opportunities for the laying out of handsome boulevards, and nearness to the heart of the city, are offered. The section on the extreme northwest would like to enter at once.

A proposal made to the residents of East Hollywood and Cahuenga that the two districts enter the town of Hollywood, has been turned down decisively by the dwellers in those sections. This they say can never be and they will wait indefinitely for annexation to Los Angeles if their present request is not granted. East Hollywood has a population of about 4000 and includes the school districts of Cahuenga and Prospect Park.

Colegrove has held mass meetings during the past week and taken steps to have its territory annexed. The desire is almost unanimous, and associations have been organized and committees appointed to forward the movement. Griffith Park and Dayton Heights will join with Colegrove, and a territory of almost ten square miles will be offered.

Swinging around the circle the New York Valley, a rich stretch of country with a scattering population of 800, is ready for annexation. Beyond this is the Lindsay Orchard tract, the Annandale tract and the district called Parkdale, with a population of more than 1000. This territory extends to the city limits at the Church of the Angels.

NATURAL LIMIT LINE.

An argument for the admission of the above tracts is that a natural city limits line could be established along the ridge of hills behind the New York tract, Happy Valley, and Highland Park These hills, on whose slopes splendid residence sites will ere long be laid out, would form, it is averred, a natural base line for the northern limits of the city, making a symmetrical survey which would embrace Garvanza.

This survey would take the limits line along the ridge from Avenue 50, behind Occidental College, to the northern terminus of Avenue 64.

By extending the limits line to the brow of the low-lying hills a population of another 1000 would be added to Los Angeles. The city, it is declared, will eventually choose the proposed limits, and while the present agitation is going on the residents of the hillslopes desire to secure the longed-for benefits to be derived from city government.

There is no more enterprising district than Hermon, lying to the east of Garvanza. This section boasts a Free Methodist college with 125 students, a thriving church, and with other adjoining sections, a population of 900. To a man, it is declared, Hermon will vote solidly for admission to Los Angeles.

Quietly a plan which is stupendous has been forming among the residents of Hermon. Offered admission to South Pasadena some time ago, they were later refused the proffered annexation. There is said now to be a disposition on the part of South Pasadena to take the thriving territory within its limits.

South Pasadena lacks only a small majority to make the little city willing to be annexed to Los Angeles. This majority would be supplied by the annexation of Hermon to South Pasadena. This is one of the steps proposed by the citizens of South Pasadena and residents of Hermon in their unique plan to force a vote for admission to the City of the Angels.

No section is more anxious to be included within the limits of Los Angeles than the vast district lying east of Boyle Heights. About 800 acres has been subdivided into city lots. This region has a population of 700, besides a large scattering population beyond the subdivided territory.

The population south and east of the Boyle Heights and Euclid Heights city limits is not sufficient to secure present admission to the city. Beyond Rossini street there is good city property, but as yet the district is not sufficiently settled to make any strenuous demand for annexation.

In the expansion plan the town of Vernon, beyond the southeastern limits, must be reckoned with. An incorporated town, the miniature city would feel more secure were the corporate limits of Los Angeles extended to embrace that manufacturing place. No definite action has been taken among the citizens of Vernon toward immediate annexation, but when the town was incorporated it was plainly stated that the plan was ultimate annexation to Los Angeles.

HUNTINGTON PARK.

Huntington Park forms the hardest knot of the problem. This section has been unfortunate in having failed to secure the desired incorporation. Residents of Huntington Park have been repeatedly left in the cold in efforts to form a town.

A large proportion of the residents of the attractive suburb are in favor of annexation to Los Angeles. There is also a large number desirous of trying incorporation before trying to get into this city.

The prevailing annexation sentiment has spread to the western outskirts of the city, and there rich, level country stretching for several miles around the limits would make itself attractive. The population is not so great as that of other sections, but the rate of growth is rapid.

An objection raised by city officials to the admission of so vast a stretch of territory is the water supply. Superintendent Mulholland and others declare they are opposed to the annexation of more territory before the Owens River is brought here. This is admitted to be a serious objection and there is a possibility that at least some, and probably all, the places ready to enter will be denied admission for the present.

The sections seeking admission to the city constitute from forty to fifty square miles, with a population of perhaps 25,000.

Among Local Financiers.

THE MANAGEMENT OF TRUST COMPANIES—DEPOSITORS HAVE A DUTY.

By George W. Burton.

SOME one connected with the First National Bank, who learned arithmetic in his boyhood days, seems to have worked out an elaborate plan for the directorate of the institution and its allied Trust Companies.

This bank has recently absorbed two other national institutions, the Los Angeles National Bank and the Southwestern National Bank. The combined directorates of the three consolidated banks numbered twenty-nine persons. To these were added two others, H. E. Huntington and Col. Epes Randolph, making a total of thirty-one persons in the directorate of the First National Bank as reorganized. The officers of the bank are one president and four vice-presidents, besides the cashier and his subordinates. These five, the president and the four vice presidents, with ten other directors added to them, will make an executive committee of fifteen to conduct the affairs of the bank for the directorate immediately and for the whole body of stockholders more remotely. This executive committee will hold meetings once a week and go over the transactions of the preceding six days.

The Los Angeles Trust Company will have a directorate made up of these five head officials of the First National Bank, a president and vice-president of that Trust Company, and eight other directors of the First National Bank, giving it a directorate of fifteen persons. These will meet twice a month to go over the transactions of the Trust Company for the preceding two weeks.

The Metropolitan Bank and Trust Company will have a directorate made up of the five head officials of the First National Bank, a president and vice-president of its own, and also eight other directors of the national bank not in the executive committee of that institution nor in the directorate of the Los Angeles Trust Company, giving it a governing body of fifteen persons who will also meet twice a month to look after the management of its affairs.

By this directorate plan, every one of the thirty-one directors of the First National Bank will be actively employed in managing the affairs of that institution and those of the two Trust Companies allied with it. The whole directorate of thirty-one persons will hold a meeting once a month in which all the affairs of the three institutions will be carefully looked into.

From the elaboration of this plan, it appears as if no figurehead directors or officials were to appear in managing the institution which they did not really manage. If the plan outlined in this method of officering the three institutions is carefully and vigorously carried out, the business of the three institutions certainly ought to be conducted on an entirely stable basis.

NEED OF WATCHFULNESS.

There is no doubt that great watchfulness on the part of men skilled in the banking business and of absolute moral integrity is needed in the management of any great financial institution. It is no longer ago than last Friday morning that the press dispatches brought us a report of the failure of an Ohio bank in which the institution seems to have been looted by its officers almost to the last nickel in the till. To those not acquainted with the complications involved in conducting a bank it may seem strange that this should be possible under all the safeguards in the hands of the directorate of a bank and in the bank commissioners appointed by the State, or bank examiners appointed by the Federal government.

The plan so successfully carried out by the thieves who robbed the depositors and stockholders of their money in this case was the simplest imaginable. They stuffed the bank with forged securities, the municipal bonds of various small cities and towns in the State of Ohio. In discussing this, an expert banker of great ability in one of the local banks said to the financial reporter of the Times: "There is no way to make a dishonest man honest by act of any Legislature on earth. There is no real safeguard for the funds of depositors or stockholders excepting in the moral integrity of the officials managing the affairs of the bank. The dishonest official can stuff the bank with $1,000,000 worth of securities apparently good on their face, but not intrinsically worth one copper cent when put on the market for sale.

"You ask me if the bank examiners can be deceived by these pretended securities? I say, yes. No matter how expert nor how honest the bank examiners or commissioners may be, even although they be themselves bankers of long experience and great ability, a shrewd man can deceive them in spite of all the care they can exercise in this matter of foisting worthless securities upon them as valuable assets of the bank. There is no way to discover the wrongdoing until the time comes to liquidate the worthless securities.

"Oh, no! I do not mean to say that laws are useless, nor to have it inferred that no safeguards should be placed around the funds of the bank. As you say, a burglar may pick a lock or force the fastening on a window, and rob the house, but as you argue, that would be no reason for leaving the doors of the house open nights to invite the thief to enter without hindrance and carry away what he wished, while the occupants were asleep. In fact, the more facilities there may exist for bank officials to prove recreant to their trust, just that much more reason there is for placing around them all the safeguards that can possibly be devised to protect the interests of depositors and stockholders."

MIXED BANKING METHODS.

Another bank official in one of the banks of the city, whose whole life has been spent at the business, in speaking of a suit now pending in the State Courts against a San Francisco bank, said during the past week: "I sincerely hope the result of this lawsuit will be a decision by the Supreme Court of the State that savings banks are acting outside of the scope of their legitimate functions when they carry on a commercial banking business in connection with savings-bank operations. I do not hesitate to say that no matter how many such institutions may be honestly and successfully conducted, there is too much opportunity in such a system of banking for trouble to arise to make it desirable to permit any longer this mixed banking method.

"I can see that I do not quite understand whether such a decision would be possible or not. I am not a lawyer, and it is only the legal talent of the State that can finally determine such an issue. As you say the banks conducting this mixed system of banking hold State charters, and it certainly is difficult to conceive that such charters should have been granted from time to time, ever since the present Constitution was adopted, now nearly thirty years ago, and no question of their loyalty be raised if they are unconstitutional. Of course, you are right in saying that the only way of reaching the evil as it exists in California today would be by showing that such charters are unconstitutional. But if it be a fact that they do not contravene the Constitution of the State, then I say it is time that a constitutional amendment were passed, making it impossible for any bank to conduct a commercial, savings and trust institution under the same roof, or even in separate premises, under the same charter and by identically the same governing board. There is too much temptation, too much scope for lax methods and for absolute dishonesty in this method of banking.

"As it is, a great many, a majority, one might go farther and say almost all, the trust companies and savings banks are more or less closely allied with national or State banks doing a purely commercial business. Now, take railroading as an illustration. It is a fundamental principle with those who control a railroad not to parallel their own lines. Why should a national bank or State bank, whose business is purely commercial banking, foster a savings bank or a trust company which enters into direct competition with their own business? It would be better for the stockholders in the long run, and much safer for them and for the general public, to confine the operations of each of these forms of financial institutions to their own legitimate field.

"There is a field here in Los Angeles, a broad and rich field, for the operations of a well conducted trust company in the hands of an honest directorate. There is peculiar use and need for such institutions in this city. A great many invalids come here from the East, a great many men who have retired from active business on account of their age, who have a large amount of funds in the aggregate seeking investment. Many invalids coming here come after their diseases have wrought such ravages upon their constitution that even this climate is inefficacious in restoring them to health or even prolonging their lives. Many of them pass away. Their wives and families have become attached to Los Angeles on account of its beauty and the salubrity of the climate, and wish to remain here. All these classes of persons are incompetent of managing their own affairs successfully, the women from lack of experience, the men from impaired health or advanced age, and they have great need of just such a medium as a well managed trust company to invest their funds for them. There are multitudes of bond issues, municipal and semi-private, on the market at all times, paying a reasonable rate of interest and with ample assets back of them for their redemption at maturity. Those who are engaged in managing a trust company have ample facilities and possess the requisite technical knowledge for ascertaining the exact values of all such bonds. They can be of the greatest service to the public in advising them what securities they should buy. Now, I am connected with trust companies myself, and I say this, that such an institution has no business to sell any client a bond which it would not be willing to buy back from the client if the client desires to part with it. That may mean a somewhat narrow basis to operate on, but it is the only safe basis, and the business of the trust company can be successfully carried on on just that basis. There is so much business of this kind here that the stockholders in a well organized trust company can well afford to confine themselves to just such operations as this. They can earn good returns for the money they have invested and for the time they give to the management of such an institution to let commercial banking alone, leaving that to the banks organized for commercial banking purposes. So far as my voice and influence may go in the conducting of any trust company I have an interest in, they will always be exercised in the direction of confining its operations to the legitimate business of a trust company as I conceive this to be legitimate."

THE DEPOSITORS' SIDE.

Still another Los Angeles banker has this to say: "You newspaper financiers appear to me to think that there is only one side to banking, the side of the banker. Now, I want to say to you that there is a very important side as it is related to the point of view of the depositor. Here is a pamphlet issued in Los Angeles. It shows the operations of a so-called bank in this city. This institution is less than a year old. When it was about six months old it made a report, as is shown here, to the bank commissioners, which certainly shows some very curious features. In its liabilities we find the paid up capital of a little over $8000. We find individual deposits subject to check, of considerably over $3000, demand certificates of a little less than $100, time certificates of about $2500, savings deposits some $1600, making the total amount of deposits a little over $7500. Nearly half of this money is subject to check. Let us look at its resources. The interesting item is money on hand, about $400. Now, let us suppose that trouble, financial trouble, should arise. What is the condition of this bank? Make a sum in division. Put 400 above the line and 7500 below equals—? The sum is easily worked out, but the quotient is somewhat fractional. Now, I say the public owes it to itself to inquire with some degree of care into the solvency of the institution to which it entrusts its funds, and the public owes it to itself to inquire into the character of the men who are conducting the affairs of the bank in which they propose to deposit their money.

"The public should go farther than this, and inquire into the experience of those engaged in the complicated business of general banking. You newspaper fellows know very well that even a Harvard or Yale graduate is in no way one-tenth part as valuable in the conducting of your business as the man with perhaps one-tenth part of the university graduate's education but with ten times his experience in the newspaper business. Let me say to you that the management of a general banking business is a very delicate affair, and is only learned by a close application to the business, an application extending over years of experience. A man may be strictly honest. He may never have defrauded another man of a cent in forty years, but beyond this matter of bare integrity what has been the man's general career in business? What enterprises has he successfully carried on, and how is he fitted to enter upon the delicate and complicated duties of conducting a bank? No man or woman who blindly entrusts his funds to the hands of a person without reputation for honesty, for success in business on a large scale, and with at least some experience in the banking business is entitled to one jot of sympathy if things go wrong with the institution to which they have entrusted their funds when trouble comes and everything goes wrong.

"There is another thing the public ought to take into consideration. I have spoken of the public's duties to itself. The public has its duty to the bank. A man or woman who inquires carefully into the character of the persons managing a bank to which they entrust their funds, and the solidity of the institution itself, owes that bank a duty. In my opinion it is a breach of trust, an act of disloyalty, I had almost said an immoral act, when the first breath of trouble blows across the financial sky, for such a depositor in such an institution to rush to the paying teller, draw out his deposits, and put them in a safe deposit box. They ought to be sure that the bank is solvent and the banker honest before they put their money in the bank, and being sure on both these heads they ought to help the bank bear the stress when time of trouble comes, by leaving their deposits in the bank excepting as they may need the money in the daily course of their business.

"There is a third point from which to look at this matter. The person with spare funds owes a duty to the community in which he lives. It may not be a crime, but it surely is a sin for any person who has spare money in this work-a-day world where so many thousand persons must earn a living by their daily wages, to put that money where it is an absolute idler, doing nothing, helping nobody, but like the coward, skulking away while everything else is toiling for existence in this old work-a-day world.

"Of course, there are many persons who will smile sarcastically at any suggestion that they owe any duty to any one but themselves, but I submit here that any person who looks at his possessions in any such light is not a high order of citizen. He is not the kind of man whose character one points to as a good example in the world. We do all owe a duty one to another, and the man who has funds that he does not care to make use of in his own person, in some profitable enterprise out of which his fellows may reap some benefit, should at least entrust it to the care of some financial institution resting upon a solid basis and managed by persons of ability, experience, and integrity, that through their hands it may do the world some good without shrinking one cent in its value to its possessor. He may put it in the savings bank, where it will not only not shrink in value, but earn interest every day it is entrusted to the bank."

ARIZONA.

SNOW AND COLD IN TERRITORY.

HILLS ARE WHITE AND GROUND FROZEN NEAR BISBEE.

New Mexican Storms Cut Off Fuel Supply and Smelters Close Down for Want of Coke and Coal—El Paso and Southwestern Railroad Claims Heaviest Ore Trains.

BISBEE (Ariz.) Jan. 11.—A blanket of snow covers all of Southwestern Arizona. The cold is almost unprecedented, the ground in places being frozen several feet in depth. Around this city much of the snow has disappeared, but the hills are white from the last storm. In the mountains, the snowfall has been such as to almost prevent mining work and to drive the wood cutters to the lowlands.

Storms in New Mexico have cut off the supply of coke and coal, and fuel for domestic uses and for the smelters alike is continually on the ragged edge of exhaustion. The great Cananea smelter at Douglas has been running a part of its furnaces only, managing to keep no more than a couple of days' supply of fuel ahead. The Santa Fé and Rock Island have both been unable to supply the demand upon them for the transportation of coal cars.

The situation has caused the local mine managers to turn toward consideration of the advantages of oil as fuel and it is probable that oil burners will be in operation on many of the local mines within a month. Some of the hoists now are being operated only by burning wood and of this the supply is practically exhausted.

RAILROAD ACTIVITIES.

The El Paso and Southwestern system claims that its ore trains between Bisbee and Douglas are the heaviest in the world. They are composed of fifty steel cars, each with rated capacity for 100 tons of ore. One train, weighed at Douglas, was found to have a load of 3700 tons of ore.

The Southwestern has built a new cut-off line southeast from Bisbee, for the purpose of equalizing grades in the climb from Douglas. The road is well placed also for interference with the proposed new Southern Pacific line into Bisbee from Pearce.

Though a large amount of railroad material is on hand, the Southern Pacific has made no move for more than a year toward the announced extension of the Pearce road to Bisbee, Douglas and Naco. Surveys have all been completed to these towns. Now a party of Randolph engineers is running lines in Sonora, south of Douglas. The Southern Pacific has Sonora concessions that appear to permit the gridironing of the State with railroads on almost any line that the road cares to use.

The Southwestern has posted notices threatening dismissal of any employé who frequents saloons or gambling houses.

SHOOTS AND IS SHOT.

E. McLean of Bisbee became suspicious of his wife and left, under pretense of going to Cananea, only to return in the evening and peek through the window of his wife's bedroom. There he saw a friend, George Haigler, sitting on his wife's bedside. The husband fired at once, shooting Haigler through the stomach. The latter returned the fire blindly, but succeeded in dropping McLean with a hole through the lungs. In the hospital, through the partition between their adjoining rooms, the men have since made up their differences and renewed their friendship, agreeing that both were "chumps," according to their own estimate of the situation. They will recover, but neither will return to the woman in the case.

TERRITORIAL BRIEFS.

C. T. Scott, manager of the Bisbee Lumber Company, lately was thrown from his carriage and so injured that he died several days after the accident. Interment was in Los Angeles, where the family of the deceased man has resided.

J. Gerdesick, a miner in the Oversight mine in the Cananea Mountains, was killed last Friday by the dropping upon him of a large stone that had become dislodged 100 feet above him.

J. A. Branson, a miner in the Holbrook shaft of the Copper Queen, fell from an ascending cage and dropped more than three hundred feet to the bottom, meeting instant death. His former home was in Mariposa county, Cal.

The four-year-old daughter of David Crockett of Naco fell into a kettle of boiling water Sunday and was scalded to death.

While in a joyous mood, superinduced by mescal, Francisco Trefo of Agua Prieta tried the accuracy of his new gun by shooting at a by-stander, Manuel Fimbres. The bullet took effect and Francisco immediately expatriated himself by crossing the line into Douglas. He will probably remain a resident of the United States unless extradited, for Manuel died of the wound.

News has come that, for some unknown cause, Thomas Knowles, head of a railroad grading gang in the Cananea Mountains, lately was shot and killed by a Mexican policeman.

Fat Folks.

I reduced my weight fifty pounds, bust eight inches, waist four inches and hips three inches in a short time by a guaranteed harmless remedy, without exercise or starving. I will tell you all about it. Call next Wednesday, or inclose stamp. Address Mrs. J. C. McFadden, No. 3040 Upper boulevard, Los Angeles.

It has the same diameter as the solar image produced by the 60-foot focus mirror of the Snow telescope. To make use of this sphere an ingenious binocular device has been constructed which enables the observer to see the sun's photographic image superposed upon the sphere, whereby he is able to read off those areas of the sun occupied by the dazzling calcium clouds, and note their exact latitude and longitude, as well as extent and configuration.

As the sun is a sphere, those fields of calcium near the apparent edges are seen as long, narrow patches, for the sun's disk is to the human eye and to the lens of a camera, a plain surface, but when these distorted patches are superposed on the sphere, by revolving the sphere it is easy to determine the exact area covered by the calcium field. The use of this globe will supersede ordinary methods of measuring the positions and areas of solar phenomena, and save a great amount of time in computing.

Not astronomers only, but physicists in every department of chemical and electrical research, are deply interested in the results of Dr. Hale's investigations, and in the conclusions at which he will arrive regarding the chemical transformations going on in the sun's photosphere, and the light they will throw on the constitution of the sun.

WONDERFUL IMPLEMENTS.

To simply enumerate the spectroscopic instruments already in use in connection with the work accomplished by the equipment of the Snow telescope will give some idea of the complicated processes involved in producing the marvelous results secured under the direction of Dr. Hale and the mechanical supervision of Prof. Ritchey. These are:

(1.) A spectroheliograph with portrait lenses of 8 inches aperture, and 60 inches focal length, provided with four dense prisms. This instrument is floated in mercury and moved across the solar image given by a mirror of 60 feet focal length.

(2.) A spectroheliograph (not yet completed) with lenses of 5 inches aperture and 30 feet focal length, provided with three light flint prisms of 50 deg. angle. This spectroheliograph is fixed in position, and the 16-inch solar image given by the mirror of 143 feet focal length is moved slow across the slit by rotating the vertical axis of the 145-foot mirror.

(3.) A Littrow spectrograph of 18 feet focal length, with large plane grating. This is used with the 60-foot mirror, mainly for a study of the spectra of sun spots.

(4.) A concave grating stellar spectrograph of 15 feet focal length mounted on a massive pier in the constant temperature room. It is employed with the 60-foot mirror to photograph, with high dispersion, the spectra of some of the brightest stars. These conditions make it possible to render very long exposure feasible.

(5.) A prism spectrograph with camera lenses of various focal lengths, all of ultra-violet glass. To be used for special studies of stellar spectra in the ultra-violet region.

The solar observatory will be an important educational factor, as it will build and keep open to the public a museum of the finest astronomical photographs, and provide other facilities of public interest. All of the observatory's telescopes are designed for photographic purposes, and are, therefore, not available for visual observations, but the photographs taken with them show far more than the eye can ever hope to perceive, and are thus of more interest than any direct observations.

One pleasant feature of the revolution in Ecuador is that it was all over with before we knew it had happened.

It is really no more than might be expected that the Chinese Minister at Washington is such a glib talker. His name is Tung.

A great many people seem to be after the trusts, apparently, but what we want is somebody who can either catch up with them or head them off.

Sir Christopher Furness was the first man to be elected to the new British Parliament. Judging from his name he must have conducted a hot campaign.

Congressman Longworth says the Filipinos should be given their freedom. But let us be patient about it. Mr. Bryan will get around to it in due time.

China expects to soon have a free press, but unless the style of printing now in vogue over there is changed the matter will scarcely create any interest on this side of the world.

Anyhow, with football, hazing and those other strenuous aspects of college life eliminated, it is hardly probable that Mr. Roosevelt would be attracted by the offer of a college presidency.

We might be a litle more confident that those steamship lines planned for San Pedro will materialize if it could first be shown that the promoters have received the consent and approval of Luke Kelly.

The news that Panama has been visited by a big fire is, of course, interesting, but what we are really looking forward to is the time when it will be visited by the boys with the long handled shovels.

Congressman Nick Longworth's trouble will come when he tries to raise the money to build a house large enough to accommodate all the things that are being sent Miss Alice for wedding presents.

The attention of the local Igorrote colony is directed to the dispatch published in these columns, yesterday, and which conveys the important information that the town of Ventura is overrun with ownerless dogs.

The fact that France continues to appeal to Uncle Sam to discipline Gen. Castro strengthens the impression which has been long standing in the public mind that she would as lief not undertake the job herself.

The hope that the Panama Canal could be constructed within the next seven years may as well now be abandoned. It will require far more time than that just to overcome the objections of Poultney Bigelow.

Things look better in Russia now than at any other time since the devilment began. And yet there is an uneasy feeling everywhere that the revolution has been merely frozen up and that it will thaw out again in the spring.

The talk of President Roosevelt becoming the head of a university owned and controlled by John D. Rockefeller is doubtless sprung on the public in the nature of a joke. The story should be classified under the head of current humor.

Andrew D. White has made an appeal to college students to make America the model government for all the world. But it is difficult to see how the boys are going to be able to spare the time from their studies to comply with the request.

A petition has been presented to the Kentucky Legislature to prevent the further performance of Uncle Tom's Cabin in the Blue Grass State. But wouldn't it be better to have a Federal law passed making it a national offense?

On another page of this issue of The Times is published a large part of a graphic and absorbing article from Munsey's Magazine, treating of the Jew in America. The conquests of this people in science, art, banking, merchandising and other lines of activity in this country have been most remarkable. Everybody is aware of the fact, but the story of it all as told in the Munsey article will be found to possess an unusual interest. It is an epic of racial achievement.

The position in which Co. F, Seventh Regiment, N.G.C., has placed itself, is peculiar and discreditable. Because the company made a decidedly poor showing at a recent inspection, Lieut.-Col. Schrieber offered certain criticisms in the obvious line of his duty, and as a result Capt. J. Irving McKenna resigned. This was the most unsoldierly thing a soldier could have done under the circumstances. Now some of the non-commissioned officers and men threaten to quit the service of the State—in other words, to mutiny—if McKenna is not reinstated and Lieut.-Col. Schrieber forced to make public apology for his strictures on the command, which seems to have deserved them. It may be that the thing to do under the circumstances is to muster out Co. F.

THE TRUTH ABOUT PANAMA.

Where shall we learn the truth about Panama? Where, indeed, unless we may rely upon the official reports made to and published by the government? There is so much "knocking," there are so many "knockers," of one kind and another, that it is impossible for the average citizen to decide what to believe, unless he chooses to rely upon the government. Why shall we not do this? What reason is there for doubting the substantial accuracy of official government reports?

All sorts of wild and woolly stories about the conditions prevalent at the isthmus have been published, and are still in circulation, while new atrocities are reported day by day. Newspaper correspondents have gone down to the isthmus, have remained two or three days, and have returned with alleged statistics and detailed information that would require months of diligent work to acquire legitimately. It is a notable fact that this alleged information is all on one side—all against the government's great project. It looks like a concerted effort, maintained persistently at the expense of some person or interest, for the purpose of discrediting, delaying, hampering, and if possible defeating this greatest of engineering enterprises, in which the government and the people of the United States have embarked.

The expenses of the Information Bureau whence these knockings come must be enormous, to judge by the output. Putting these tales of horror together, one would be forced, if he gave them credence, to the conclusion, that the government of the United States has been guilty of criminal maladministration in Panama; that the place is such a pesthole that no human being can exist there for more than a few weeks consecutively; that the Panama Canal cannot be built anyhow; that the engineers sent to make professional investigations have all been wrong in their conclusions; and that the American people are a parcel of fools to have undertaken the project.

Some months ago it was announced in dispatches to The Times that a gigantic combination had been formed to defeat, if possible, the construction of the Panama Canal. It was proposed, according to the dispatches, to retard, embarrass and delay the work of construction in every conceivable manner, if the enterprise could not be absolutely defeated. The Senate of the United States was to be the instrumentality through which the "knocking" was to be carried on. Whether the reported combination is an actuality or not has never been definitely established. But the methods that have been pursued since the conspiracy was alleged to have been formed have tallied very closely with the announced programme.

Now the Senate has decided to have a searching investigation of the whole Panama matter, from beginning to end. This investigation will be well enough if it be conducted in a spirit of fairness and candor, and if it be not allowed to interrupt the work of canal construction. Unfortunately, the Senate has fallen under the distrust of the American people. The Senate itself, as a body, is responsible for this deep-seated and widespread distrust. It is not necessary to specify, for the deterioration of the Senate from its former high position is known of all men. Its course in the coming investigation of the Panama Canal will be watched with critical interest by the people, from first to last.

The Senate and its corporate masters may fool some of the people some of the time, but they cannot fool all of the people all of the time.

PETTY POLITICS.

That joint Statehood bill which was to have been rushed through Congress before the holidays appears to have struck a snag. Seventy-five Republican "insurrectos" finally refused to vote for the bill which Senator Beveridge and Speaker Cannon tried to rush through as a partisan measure, prefering to consider the interests and wishes of the intelligent commonwealths affected. Whereat there is a realignment of the front of battle and change of plans. Frontal attack having failed, the enemy is to be taken in the flank.

Though the fact is not generally known, Congress has power to legislate directly upon the internal administration of Territories and to review and revoke any action of Territorial Legislatures. Now is threatened some direct legislation. In the hotel in Phoenix of the chairman of the Anti-Joint Statehood League there is a gambling table. So a bill has been introduced by Mr. Littlefield of Maine prohibiting gambling in the Territories. This is supposed to be an effective way of disposing of the influence of Chairman Adams, who perhaps deserves to be side-tracked, and who certainly is not, with a gambling table or without, the issue before Congress. Another bill, upon the basis of resolutions lately passed by religious bodies in Arizona and New Mexico, will prescribe prohibition of the sale of liquor. Thus the jointure campaigners think the gambling and liquor interests are to be whipped over for joint Statehood and, curiously enough, the support of the churches is to be gained at the same time.

Another bit of legislation proposed along the same line will be the taxation by Congress directly of the great mines of Arizona for amounts something nearer their real worth, a work which, incidentally, already has been started by Gov. Kibbey of Arizona. And the railroads, which are assessed at not more than $6500 a mile are to be raised "out of their boots" by the same method. Presto, according to the schemers, will vanish the opposition of the miners and railroad men, for with Statehood, of whatever class, would they not have a chance to perpetuate the present satisfactory conditions?

Utah's demand for the northwestern quarter of Arizona is to be supported and Arizona is to be made to suffer in all ways possible in return for her struggle against possible loss of independence. On the other hand, the support of the principal towns of the Territory is to be gained by offering Phoenix the joint-State capitol for half the time and Tucson the continuance of the Territorial University "in her midst." The grant of school lands is to be increased and more of the nation's coin voted for the cost of the starting of State government.

Faugh! It seems incredible that a half of the American Congress is permitting itself to be used simply to "save the face" of a single Senator. The omnibus Statehood bill should be split, as a starter. Oklahoma is absolutely entitled to Statehood if she wants it and her desires should not be blocked by any attempted harnessing of the two southwestern bronchos. Then, if the Arizona-New Mexico bill gets any farther, it should be passed with the provision that it must be accepted by a majority of the voters of each Territory, voting separately.

TEST FOR THE "INITIATIVE."

At last a test case to determine the validity of the "initiative" and "recall" provision of the Los Angeles city charter has been brought before the Supreme Court. It was filed yesterday in the form of an application for a writ of habeas corpus for Andrew Pfahler, who is accused of maintaining a slaughter-house within the district where slaughter-houses are forbidden by an ordinance adopted under the "initiative" plan, after the Council had refused to pass it.

The bringing of this case is a matter for public congratulation. The "initiative" scheme is right or it is wrong. It is in accordance with the State Constitution, or in violation of it. No time should be lost in determining its status. Its validity or invalidity ought to have been decided ere this. If it be unconstitutional, the people ought not to go on creating ordinances under its provisions, for such ordinances would, of course, be void. If the "initiative" is constitutional, everybody is entitled to know it. Every voter should know whether he is voting in conformity to the Constitution.

While no ground exists for anticipating the Supreme Court's action, it is rather difficult to perceive how the court can hold the law to be constitutional. The Constitution provides a plain method by which the people, through their chosen representatives, shall enact laws necessary to the conduct of orderly government. The national Constitution delegates certain powers to the States, and the States delegate certain powers to the counties and cities. The State has not specifically delegated to the city of Los Angeles any powers of direct legislation by the people. The question whether the State is competent to delegate such powers, under the national Constitution, need not here be considered. It is enough to say that the requisite authority has not been conferred. The right of the people to enact any law is undisputed, but they must enact laws, if at all, by the methods of procedure which they themselves have embodied in their organic laws—that is, through representatives duly chosen for the purpose.

It is not necessary, in this connection, to speak of the miscarriage of justice which the "initiative" or "recall" has brought about in Los Angeles. The thing to do is to ascertain whether the "initiative" or the "recall" is in violation of the Constitution or not, and to govern ourselves accordingly. The test case is timely.

A SOUTHERN PROBLEM.

In the Southern States at the present time the most widespread topic of discussion is the economic future of the negro. What is he going to do for a living? This is no mere discussion of a general and theoretical nature, surviving from the controversies as to race fitness and race advancement that have been ever with us since the old days of emancipation. Public attention is focused on the question because of practical issues arising from the introduction of an entirely new factor into the problem. This factor is the growing competition of white labor in the one occupation, work on the cotton plantations, that in the Southern States has until recent years been virtually the negro's exclusive domain. In plain words, the industry, efficiency, reliability, and thrift of the negro laborer are, in this particular field of labor, coming at last to be put to the test against the industry, efficiency, reliability, and thrift of a wholly new class of labor, namely, Italians from across the seas. This is no case of color prejudice closing the door of industrial opportunity against any one class of men. It is simply the economic results produced by one kind of labor weighed in the balance against the economic results produced by another kind.

The comparison was tersely and strikingly put by Alfred Holt Stone of Mississippi in a paper recently read before the American Economic Association. The illustrative case of the negro tenant farmer, he contended, is this: "Too much time spent out of his crop; too much waiting for the weather to improve; too much putting off to a more convenient season; a too constant and too successful besieging of those in authority for money accommodations and supplies; too little reckoning against the future day of settlement; too much 'leaning on the Lord,' and too little upon himself in things not spiritual; too much living for today and not for tomorrow." The contrasted case of the Italian tenant farmer was summed up in the following words: "A grim determination to have more at the end of this year than he had at the end of last, regardless of wind or weather; to wrest from every foot of soil he rents all that nature can be forced to yield; to get a visible, tangible return for every dime and hour he spends; to live on less than he makes, whether the latter be much or little; to hire nothing done that he can possibly do himself; to keep the future ever in mind, and to lay by a store against age and a rainy day."

The above statements are generalizations, but Mr. Stone bases them on a painstaking and elaborate analysis of facts and figures. He has taken a large group of cotton-growing Italians at Sunny Side, Ark., and compares the results achieved by these Italian families during a period of six years with the results attained by the negro tenant-farmers in the same district. The test is eminently a fair one, for we have here the two classes of labor working side by side, their lands indiscriminately allotted, each on the same tenure, each under the same conditions of soil, climate, and busines detail.

The figures are certainly pregnant with meaning. They show that on the Italian side the number of families, the number of working hands, and the cotton acreage have all largely increased, while on the negro side there have been correspondingly heavy diminutions under each head of comparison. Moreover, the Italian's production per acre exceeded the negro's by 170 pounds of lint, the Italian cultivated an average of 1.1 acres more per hand than the negro, the Italian secured an average cash value of $148.89 per hand, and $18.41 per acre more than his negro neighbor. In these figures lies the cold logic of the new conditions of competition the southern negro has now to face.

The warning is writ large upon the wall; men of intelligence among the negroes already fully appreciate its significance. Thus says Booker T. Washington: "In many respects the next twenty years are going to be the most serious in the history of our race. Within that period it will largely be decided whether the negro is going to be able to retain the hold which he now has upon the industries of the South, or whether his place will be filled by white people from a distance." For all the world—nations, races, and individuals—life is a ceaseless struggle for supremacy, and it is this very struggle that has brought out the finest traits, led to the most magnificent achievements, of humanity. From this competition the negro cannot hold himself exempt, even on his last special preserve, the cotton plantation. Will he rise to the occasion? Mr. Stone's figures go to show how increasingly momentous grows this question, both for the negro race itself and for the nation.

UNIONS A DAMAGE TO WORKMEN.

Advocates of and apologists for labor unionism are never weary of pointing out the alleged benefits of trades unions to "labor." When they say "labor," they mean, of course, the men who are organized into unions. They fail to recognize the important fact that the workmen embraced in union organizations comprise but a small proportion of the laboring men in the United States, and the other important fact that the unionists are aiming to establish a close monopoly, which is prejudicial to the interests of the great body of workmen, in proportion as the effort to establish a monopoly by unionists is successful.

When a few men are able to create a monopoly or "corner" in any commodity, whether it be wheat or labor, they are able to establish prices above the normal in that commodity, while their "corner," or monopoly, exists. The benefits of these abnormal prices (which mean abnormal profits) accrue solely to the persons "on the inside," and there is a corresponding loss to persons on the outside, which is composed of non-unionists and the public in general.

Thus, in the monopolies created by trades unions, those on the inside are benefited at the expense of those who are not in the combine. As there are more workmen outside of the combine than inside, it follows that the great majority of workmen, no less than the public in general, must suffer actual injury when the union pushes the price of its commodity, labor, above the normal rate fixed by the law of supply and demand.

Every closed shop is a monopoly. Every shop that is closed to the independent laborer, who is willing to sell his labor on its merits, is an injury to the community. It stands on the same plane as a corner in wheat, or in any other commodity essential to the use and well being of the human family.

Monopoly is the very essence of trades-unionism. If monopoly were not the vital principle underlying trades-unionism, the unions would have no sufficient cause for existence. They do not exist for the purpose of promoting the health of their members. If all the people were joined together in unions, the prime object of unionism would be destroyed. There would be no class in the community for the unionists to take advantage of. All would be on the same plane. If higher wages were established, correspondingly higher prices would be charged for all commodities, and no one would be benefited.

The often unreasonable demands of unions demoralize the markets, create injustice, unsettle values, and interfere with trade that ought to be untrammeled. Unions (as they are conducted) may appear to be, for a time, of great benefit to those on the inside of the monopoly. But they are, as we have said, an injury to the public in general—even if we leave out of consideration the matter of strikes and boycotts. There is no more justification for them than there is for corners in wheat, which temporarily benefit the few at the expense of the many.

But can they prove the story true?
Suspicion may arise from naught
But malice, envy, want of thought;
Why count yourself among the "they"
Who whisper what they dare not say?

They say—but why this tale rehearse,
And help to make the matter worse?
No good can possibly accrue
From telling what may be untrue;
And is it not a better plan
To speak of all the best you can?

They say—Well, if it should be so,
Why need you tell the tale of woe?
Will it the better work redress—
Or make one pang of sorrow less?
Will it the erring soul restore,
Henceforth to go and sin no more?

They say—Oh! pause and look within;
See how thy heart inclines to sin;
Watch lest in dark temptation's hour,
Thou, too, should sink beneath its power.
Pity the frail, weep o'er their fall,
But speak of good or not at all.

End of Silver's Career.

The Hon. George E. Roberts, director of the mint, reports that the last of the silver bullion, purchased under the Bland-Allison law of 1878 and the Sherman Act of 1890, has been exhausted, and the coinage of silver dollars has ended. No more silver dollars will be coined unless Congress orders it, and Congress will never do this. A demoralizing and discreditable episode of American politics ends rights here. Silver dollars began to be coined in 1792; but as there was an attempt in those days to preserve the coinage ratio at a market parity only 8,000,000 of those pieces had been issued by the mints by 1873, at the time of the demonetization act, which the silver men long afterward began to call the "crime of '73."

After demonetization in most of the great nations diminished the demand and Nevada's bonanza mines increased the supply, there was a powerful movement for the remonetization of silver, and this resulted successfully in 1878 under the bill in which Bland asked for free coinage, but which Allison and the Republicans changed in the Senate into a limited-coinage measure. The act of 1878 required the coinage of $2,000,000 of silver bullion a month, and permitted the coinage of $4,000,000. Still larger silver purchases were made under the Sherman Act of 1890, which displaced the Bland-Allison law. Then came the financial crash of 1893, which was largely caused by the dilution of the currency under those two laws, and in the extra session of Congress, called by President Cleveland in that year, the purchase clause of the Sherman law was repealed, and no more silver was bought by the government, for legal-tender currency afterward.

The Republican victory of 1896, on a gold-standard platform, revealed the country's purpose, and this was carried out by the Republicans' act of March 14, 1900, which placed the gold standard in the statutes. This was followed in November of that year by a Republican victory, which gave an emphatic indorsement to that idea, and the gold standard has not been seriously assailed since. We have, as a result of the acts of 1878 and 1890, about 570,000,000 silver dollars, more than half fiat. And this is the end.—[Leslie's Weekly.

Journals to be Ashamed of.

While on the subject of unionism a singular case of moral cowardice occurs to me.

Last Tuesday night Reese Llewellyn gave a dinner at the Jonathan Club to about one hundred industrial captains of this city, members of the Los Angeles Employers' Association, men who have created and are here maintaining pay rolls on which are the names of 5000 toilers. This gathering signaled an event of civic importance, of industrial moment, of economic weight. Its keynote was struck in the sentiment "Industrial independence; no yielding to organized dictation." Surely an American sentiment for American men! Certainly an event calling for prominent notice in the press.

Yet only one newspaper in six had the moral courage to publish the ringing utterances by several speakers in behalf of industrial freedom which were the feature of that event. Not one newspaper in this city of 200,000 people, besides The Times, saw fit to send a representative to that gathering to obtain and report the news. All of the others either made the briefest possible reference to the event or bowed in silent acknowledgment of their shackle bondage to trades-unionism and the precarious patronage it controls. What a disgusting confession of fear of the totem, of abject surrender to the yoke of the walking-delegate! What a humiliating exhibition of the bought-and-paid-for in journalism!

This was no getting together of a secret clique of capitalists, no assembling of doubtful interests for dubious aims, no meeting of a grievance committee to air its ailments; it was an open gathering for an avowed and dignified purpose, of one hundred of the most truly prominent men in this city and section, representing in all its various phases the throbbing industrial life of the community, and the prosperity and comfort of our homes; and I venture to say this: Had the tariff, the trusts, municipal ownership, the harbor situation, city-county consolidation or future water supply, been announced as the topic for discussion, the coming together of these five score men would have been hailed as a news matter of prime importance by the entire press.

Yet the subject of the evening, "Industrial Independence," was and is a question more vital by far to Los Angeles as an American community than each or all of those other topics combined.

There is no form of cowardice so despicable as moral cowardice. Exhibited in the individual, it evokes contempt. Displayed in the conduct of public journals, it merits unmeasured scorn and obloquy. Los Angeles supports some newspapers of which it must needs feel ashamed.

Oh, Come on! Try it!

This from the pale green columns of the Rekid:

> "We, the jury, find the defendant not guilty."
> With a heart-broken face, drawn and pinched and tear-wet eyes, Mrs. Fennel of 2034 E. State st. sat behind her boy "Jimmy" in Judge Smith's court Monday.
> The mother was the only woman in the room, and if the glances of a despairing mother could free her son the trial would never have taken place.
> Etc.

Far be it from the heart of The Lancer to jest with the sorrow of a boy's best friend, his mother. Perish the thought that the maker of this column should see anything droll in the grief of a woman weeping over her troublous son. The spectacle is too sacred to be slurred by frivolous thought or flippant phrase. But the pathos perpetrated of cubs is surely spelled with b.

Now a heart-broken mother—and God knows the world is full of them—is an object to set streams of pure pity flowing from the human heart. But a mother with a "heart-broken face" and eyes that are "drawn and pinched and tear-wet"—well, well, my son, I wouldn't if I were you. When these fits of overpowering emotion come on you, why not knock off for the nonce and trek around the corner into Franklin street and take heart of courage from a large piece of apple pie and a glass of cool, sweet milk? It is truly wonderful how a few mouthfuls of good pie and two swallows of cow juice will liquidate the transient woes of children and set their world on its feet again. A faint stomach maketh a sore heart in childhood, and when a cub's heart overflows through the sluice columns of little papers like the Rekid the whole edition goes sloppy and newsboys slobber on the street. Try pie, son. Do.

Mothers' Congress.

The Southern California Congress of Mothers and Child Study Circles met yesterday afternoon at the Grand-avenue school building, the purpose of the meeting being to consider the entertainment of the national congress which will meet in this city May 7, 8, 9 and 10, at the Polytechnic High School auditorium.

A problem confronts the members of the local congress as at that time the hotels in the city will be full to overflowing and the entertainment of the officers, speakers and delegates will necessarily be at the private homes in Los Angeles.

The meeting yesterday was a sort of ways-and-means discussion. The members intend to have the very best convention ever held by the national body, here in Southern California which enjoys the unique distinction of being the banner section of America in regard to the number and excellence of organization of the child study circles.

Efforts are to be made from now on to interest the club women of the city in this meeting of mothers in May.

Cambria Circle.

The Child-study Circle of the Cambria-street school met and Mr. Kenou, supervisor of the sloyd work in the city school, gave an excelelent talk on manual training. He told the mothers that the work is not intended primarily to make carpenters and joiners of pupils but to give them a definite knowledge and training in accuracy, and as such, a great factor in the development of character. Beautiful music was rendered by Mrs. Simpson and Miss Grial.

PUBLIC SERVICE.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

Replying to a Council order instructing the fire department to reduce its expenses Chief Lips yesterday morning sounded a word of warning against further retrenchment; he said that the department has not now enough men to handle the new apparatus and that two houses are without crews.

Street Superintendent Hanley has organized an emergency corps in his department to render first aid to damaged streets during the rainy season.

An extraordinary state of affairs was shown to exist in the Stratton household, when Judge York drew forth details regarding the husband and wife living in the same house, and each suing for divorce.

Prof. Judson of Garvanza has again begun suit to have the Lowe gas nuisance abated in the Arroyo Seco.

Two Ascot touts caught picking pockets by the police Friday night were arraigned yesterday before Justice Chambers and held under $1500 bonds. Charles Rhodes, another Ascot sport, was found guilty of chewing a Chinaman's ear in a saloon fight and fined $15.

AT THE CITY HALL.

PRAISE FOR THE FIRE FIGHTERS.

LOSSES ARE HEAVY BUT BOARD HOLDS FORCE BLAMELESS.

December Conflagrations Were the Worst in City's History—The Chief Sounds Note of Warning in Response to Council Order for Reduction of Expenses.

Loss by fire and water at the Douglas block blaze Thursday morning, according to the estimate made by the fire department, was $63,000. Chief Lips yesterday morning reported to the Fire Commission that twenty other alarms were received during the week and that the total fire losses were $63,500.

Fire department records for December show that the fires for that month were the most disastrous in the city's history. For the month 104 alarms were received and the total loss was about half a million dollars. The Broadway Van Nuys fire did the most damage; the department estimate places that loss at $210,000. Second came the Harris & Frank fire with an attendant loss of $140,000. The Coronado hotel fire and the lesser blazes swell the total to over $500,000.

Insurance men regard the December showing as especially unfortunate as it comes just at the time when the fire insurance companies are figuring on this year's rate. And the agents are busy telling merchants and householders to get their applications in early before the rate goes up.

That the month was a trying one on the department is evidenced by the number of resignations from members of the force that are received. Most of these come from the youngsters who are just breaking into the business. They thought that a fireman's job is a sinecure but have changed their minds and are going to try their hands at something that looks less like work.

Although the fires have been many and the losses heavy the Fire Board has not lost a whit of its faith in the Fire Chief. The commissioners unite in asserting that the members of the department from hosemen to chief have rendered excellent service and they consider it a matter of congratulation that none of the fires have spread beyond the four walls in which the blazes originated. All but the one in the Douglas block were basement or first floor fires and in each case the buildings were of wooden construction and without fire walls.

MUST RETRENCH.

Following the report of the fires of the week came one from the Finance Committee of the Council to the effect that the department is exceeding its expenses and must retrench. The December expense bill of $23,000 exclusive of the pay roll was unusually heavy, and the department is now about $20,000 on the wrong side of the ledger.

The Council has asked that the fire department at least keep within its appropriation for the remainder of the fiscal year.

Mayor McAleer led off with the suggestion that the department pay roll be reduced by cutting off ten men until July 1. To this Chief Lips objected. He said that the department is now working short-handed, that there are not enough men to form companies for two new engine houses now completed, that the companies in the center of the city have only men enough to get the equipment out of the engine houses and that a further reduction would necessarily materially lessen the efficiency of the force.

Commissioner Betkouski suggested that an "old horse" sale might help some. Commissioners Wren, Robinson and Betkouski were appointed as a special committee to devise ways and means for reducing the expense of the department.

A portion of the equipment for which demands were presented last month was ordered by the former Fire Board.

FIRE BOARD DODGES.

NOT ABATING NUISANCES.

Residents of East Los Angeles who went before the Fire Board yesterday to protest against the operation of rock crusers in the Arroyo Seco were advised by the commissioners to make their protest direct to the Council. The commissioners take the attitude that they are not appointed to abate nuisances and that only the Council can give relief in cases where a business becomes obnoxious to a neighborhood.

The East-siders did not relish this change of venue. They called attention to the fact that the rock crushers are operated by steam and gasoline engines for the use of which permits were secured from the Fire Board. These permits read, "revokable at the pleasure of the Fire Commission;" the protestants wanted the commissioners to so please.

A reference to the records of the department brought forth the fact that the permits were granted by a former commission. The protestants were accordingly advised that their method of recourse is to ask the Council to establish a rock crushing district which will exclude the crushers from the Arroyo Seco.

Fire Board Miscellany.

Sixth Ward property owners protested so vigorously against the location of a fuel and feed yard at 1230 South San Pedro street that the Fire Commission yesterday morning referred a petition for a feed yard at that location to the committee of the whole for further investigation.

C. P. Cochran, a hoseman of Engine Company No. 3, pleaded guilty to the charge of intoxication preferred against him by Capt. S. A. Lennon. The commission continued sentence for one week.

To the surprise of the lobby a First Ward man yesterday lost an opportunity for a place on the pay roll. Three names were sent to the board by the civil service for places as driver. G. W. Simons, who resides at 5921 Pasadena avenue, stood at the head of the list; but the commission passed him by and selected T. H. Rogers, 1839 Hoover street, and T. E. Walker, 950 Lee street. Lee's rating is 11 per cent. lower than that of Simons.

W. H. Coleman tendered his resignation as hoseman of Engine Company No. 1.

So many property owners objected to the location of an electric motor at 1611 McGarry street that the board took the application of Rooke Bros. for permission to locate at that number under advisement.

EMERGENCY CORPS.

READY FOR RAIN.

Street Superintendent Hanley has equipped an emergency corps in his department to render first aid to the injured streets and alleys during the rainy season.

The corps was called into action twice yesterday. In each case the damage was comparatively light. The corps will be on duty all through the rainy season. If the sky continues cloudy today the corps will hold itself ready for Sunday emergency calls. In this way the Street Superintendent hopes to lessen the amount of damage which the streets would otherwise receive from storm water. The large number of new streets improved during the last year has considerably increased the territory which must be patrolled by the emergency corps. Last winter the damage to streets occasioned by storm water was estimated at $100,000.

Needless to remark, the storm water drains are not yet in working order.

AT THE COURTHOUSE.

NO ALIMONY FOR THIS WIFE.

SILENCE OF THE STRATTONS TOLD IN COURT.

Both Live in the Same House With Their Invalid Daughter, Yet Never a Word Do They Speak to Each Other—Both are Asking for Order for Divorce.

Not one cent for alimony or attorney's fees for Mrs. Lida Stratton was the decision of Judge York yesterday.

While she is suing for divorce on the grounds of cruelty and failure to provide and while her husband, Samuel M. Stratton, is asking a divorce on a cross complaint they live in the same house.

Neither speaks to the other but both minister to the wants of a 17-year-old daughter—almost a woman in age but a child in intellect.

When the case was in court yesterday the husband introduced affidavits from the meat man, the bread man and the dealer in tallow dips showing that he had always paid his bills promptly, and that his wife had a wide margin of reasonable credit for all the necessaries she needed.

Instead of absenting himself from his home Stratton said that he was at the house every night, until recently when the divorce proceeding and the recriminations to his wife made him so depressed and worn out that he had preferred to remain downtown until late at night. Then followed a description of the curious condition under which the divorce proceeding was begun.

It appears that Stratton owns about $6000 worth of property all of which he had placed in his wife's name. She has it all and he is without any money save what he gets in his employment as foreman for his brother, W. A. Stratton.

On account of the invalid daughter, Myrtle, both husband and wife continue to live in the same house at the corner of Darwin and Daily streets. Each morning the father rises first and starts breakfast. After seeing that the daughter is well fixed for the day he goes to his work, and at night the mother puts the daughter to bed.

Each Sunday is a day given up to this much loved invalid daughter. Father and mother take her out riding in a carriage, and it is the bright spot each week in the life of this young girl. But while she is taking her drive father and mother speak to her but never to one another. In the house they come and go and attend on the daughter but never converse together.

Under these conditions Stratton says that his health has broken down, and that he has done all that mortal man could do for his wife, and still she is crying for more money.

In announcing his decision Judge York said somewhat raspingly that, as Mrs. Stratton had everything in the way of property in her possession she could surely raise what money was requisite, and for all the ordinary necessaries of life it appeared that she was in no wise suffering.

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT.

BY THE BAR TO WRIGHT.

The Bar Association of Los Angeles county met yesterday at the Courthouse and paid a tribute to the late C. C. Wright. J. A. Gibson presided. The following-named members were appointed to act as honorary pallbearers at the funeral: Presiding Judge D. K. Trask, Judge Charles Monroe, Oscar Mueller, Roger S. Page, Oscar Trippet and T. C. Thornton. The funeral will be held at the residence, No. 218 West Seventeenth street, at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

As a committee to draft resolutions of respect to the memory of Mr. Wright were appointed Will R. Harris, J. L. Murphey, L. H. Valentine, I. M. Stewart and L. W. Moultrie.

An invitation was extended to attorneys in the county to join with the association today in honoring the memory of the deceased by attending the funeral.

CHARGES SLANDER.

DR. SAYLIN BRINGS SUIT.

Dr. Isaac Saylin of Garvanza filed suit yesterday against Abraham Singer, in which he claims $5000 as damages for slanderous statements alleged to have been made by Singer.

On January 10, it is set out, Singer, who is engaged in the real estate business, said in the hearing of Webster D. Haynes regarding the plaintiff: "He is a rascal, he is a crook, he is a swindler and I can prove it. Look out for him, I give you warning."

Saylin claims that when the defendant charged him with being a crook he meant to convey that he, Saylin, was a thief, and in that sense his words were accepted and understood; all of which he avers is false and slanderous in character.

GIRL'S STRANGE CASE.

MARRIED, TREATED AS CHILD.

Mrs. Ethel Herald was 17 years of age April 17 last, but her mother desired to have her sent to Whittier, and swore out a complaint, charging the daughter with being incorrigible, and the girl was arrested.

Now a novel question has arisen for Judge Wilbur to decide. He is confronted with the overwhelming difficulty that if the law is to treat all young married women as if they were children, then there must be an enlargement of the reform school, and a new batch of judges appointed to try the cases.

Mrs. Herald has been investigated behind closed doors, for it is claimed by Mrs. Blaemire, the mother, that the girl has been bad. Attorney Wilson, who appeared for the married minor—so-called—raised the point that it is none of the mother's business from a strictly legal standpoint what her daughter did; that she is married and the marriage of a minor dissolves the legal charge of parent over child.

The court took the case under consideration. The two points raised are both important in cases of the kind. First, is a girl of such age amenable to the control of the mother, and, if being over 16 years of age she falls under the law regulating the commitment to Whittier of incorrigible girls.

NEGLIGENCE CHARGED.

DR. WELLBOURNE IS SUED.

W. B. Pelton, an infant, by his guardian, Mrs. Sadie Pelton, has begun a damage suit against Dr. O. C. Wellbourne, alleging carelessness and unskillfulness in the treatment of the plaintiff.

It is set out that on October 17, 1903, the plaintiff broke both legs above the knee, and Dr. Wellbourne was summoned as physician and surgeon to treat the case. It is stated that on December 29 he pronounced the boy healed, and directed that he be taken about in a wheel chair; but that the child was only partialy healed, and on January I both legs were again broken in the same identical places as before, and, it is alleged, through the unskillfulness of the attending surgeon.

On April 7, 1904, Dr. Wellbourne is alleged to have again pronounced the child all right, and directed him to rise and walk about the room; that the right leg again gave way and was broken while he was being carried in his mother's arms. Furthermore, it is claimed that by negligence, a piece of gauze was left in the wound from April 8 to 12.

As a result of these repeated breakages, it is averred, one of the child's legs is shorter than the other, and one quite crooked, and that the boy will be a cripple for life.

A claim is set up for $25,000 as damages.

JURORS HAVE DOUBTS.

THOUGH COURT INSTRUCTED.

The jurymen in Judge Smith's court yesterday remained out of court an hour and a half, when it was expected they would return inside of five minutes. The court had advised them to return a verdict of acquittal, and intimated that though the facts looked bad against the defendant, Miles Burnett, yet there was a reasonable doubt, and he would not like to pass judgment in such a case.

Miles Burnett was tried for rape upon a young girl at Long Beach, and the testimony put forward by the prosecution, though not absolutely decisive, looked bad. But for the defense it was made to appear that the girl was wholly unreliable, and the sisters were constrained to say that they couldn't believe her under oath.

The jury takes its law from the court, but in this case there was a disposition to run counter to the instructions given. Nine ballots were taken before the twelve men lined up as instructed. On the first ballot six were for conviction, and the other six were disposed to do as they had been instructed. In the end, all came around, but with rather bad grace.

ABATE NUISANCE.

JUDSON AFTER LOWE.

Knocked out of Judge Bordwell's court because of the lightning-change character of the several gas companies manipulated by T. S. C. Lowe, a new suit for damages has been begun by William L. Judson to recover $5000 as damages for injury inflicted by the smell factory in the Arroyo Seco.

In this action the attorneys for the plaintiff, B. H. Donnell and Emmett Wilson, are not taking chances on the defendant company standing from under before the case is carried to trial and passing the onus of manufacturing gas on to another corporation. The Los Angeles Suburban Gas Company, the California Coke and Gas Company are made party defendants, and Thaddeus Lowe and T. S. C. Lowe are included.

The facts recited in this suit are much the same as in the previous complaint. Judson is at the head of the Art Institute at Garvanza, overlooking the Arroyo Seco, and is in a convenient location to appreciate the variety of bad smells and continuous noises that emanate night and day from the gas plant of the defendants. He avers that he has been deprived of the reasonable use and enjoyment of his property by reason of the nuisance created by the defendants and asks that the nuisance be abated, and damages and costs allowed him.

LOWE SUED.

OLD JUDGMENT RISES UP.

L. D. C. Gray yesterday filed suit against Thaddeus S. C. Lowe to recover $3053.25, with 7 per cent. interest from July 26, 1904.

It is alleged that in 1901 the plaintiff began suit in New York against the defendant, and in July judgment was rendered in the amount stated. The present action is to chase the money that proved elusive in New York.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.

BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

HELD AT LONG BEACH. H. Hedhorn was arrested at Long Beach on a telegram from the Chief of Police at Rochester, N. Y., charging grand larceny. Yesterday Hedhorn was before Judge Smith on habeas corpus proceedings, but inasmuch as the State agent had not arrived from New York, the attorney for Hedhorn was willing to let the matter go over. The court continued the hearing until Wednesday morning.

WANTS DAMAGES. Anne A. Howison has begun suit against George Peterman to recover $2270 for alleged injuries sustained. She avers she was standing at Seventh street and Grand avenue on May 25 last, when Peterman drove a carriage and team around the corner in such manner that the wheel struck and knocked her down. Her hip, spine and leg were severely injured, it is claimed.

REAL ESTATE DEAL. Charles W. Turton, in a complaint filed yesterday against Mrs. Nellie S. King-Goodin and F. C. Goodin, claims he was "done up" by the woman in a real estate deal. He wants the court to help him out.

THE INFERIOR COURTS.

ASCOT TOUTS HELD IN JAIL.

TWO CHARGED ROBBING PATRONS OF PRIZE FIGHT.

Third Ascot Sport Fined by Justice Chambers for Chewing Chinaman's Ear—Young Man Accused of Embezzlement Makes Pathetic Plea to Court.

Two more Ascot "sports" are in the toils of the law, and the authorities believe they will be forcefully kept away from the temptations of the race track for some time.

James O'Mally and George Hines, arrested at the prize fight Friday night as pickpockets, were arraigned before Justice Chambers yesterday morning.

The two touts were sullen. Each said he wished to secure an attorney and asked that his trial be deferred until such time as he could secure counsel. The preliminary examinations were set for Wednesday, and bail fixed at $1500 in each case.

These two touts were caught red-handed, according to the officers who made the arrest.

Another Ascot Tout.

Charles Rhodes, a member of the fraternity of tourists who follow the races, was fined $15 by Justice Chambers yesterday for battery. The specific charge was that Rhodes, while engaged in a saloon fight, chewed the ear of a Chinaman. Jung Ling exhibited the remaining half of the ear in court. Rhodes graciously informed the justice that he is a gentleman and that Jung had so objected to having his ear chewed that he had had to fight for the privilege.

Allowed to Go.

The pathetic plea of F. J. Crossley for permission to go home to care for his sick wife and baby so moved Justice Chambers that he allowed the young man to go on condition that he show up Monday morning. Crossley promised faithfully. He is charged with embezzling $10.85 cents from his employer and he denies it. The court first reduced his bail, but Crossley could not furnish any.

Gets Ninety Days.

George Williams was convicted in the Police Court yesterday on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon, and was sentenced to serve ninety days in the City Jail. Williams was discovered standing in an alley by a watchman several nights ago. He ran and when ordered to halt, went faster. A shot from the watchman's pistol into the air frightened him still more. It also attracted the attention of Patrolman McGann, who gave chase and captured Williams. When arrested Williams had a pistol and a mask in his possession.

ADDITIONAL SOCIETY NEWS.

SOCIAL NOTES OF WEEK END.

More Charming Events in the Pleasure World.

Pretty Parties, Dinners and Other Functions.

Club Meetings and Affairs Honoring Visitors.

One of the most charmingly-appointed affairs of the week end was a card party given last evening by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Beau de Zart of No. 1789 West Adams street in celebration of their twentieth marriage anniversary.

The entire home was brilliantly illuminated with many tiny electric lights. In the drawing room feathery ferns were banked, against which the delicate shell pink of many roses made a pleasing contrast. Pink and white peas spread their fragrance through the dining-room, and table and buffet were massed with the sweet blooms. The great fire-place was banked with Boston ferns and starred with pink blossoms. In the large reception hall pink and white carnations were combined with asparagus ferns in an artistic scheme. Score cards were particularly novel, being tiny Haviland plates adorned with the legend in gold, "1886 to 1906." The prizes were all of china, since the twentieth is the china anniversary. The women's first prize was a vase decorated with violets; second, a plate adorned with pink roses; third, a salt and pepper set adorned with crimson roses; and the consolation, a nasturtium jewel tray. FIGHT FOLLOWS WRECK.

Car Smashes Wagon and Kills Horse. Driver Blames Motorman and the Pair Do Battle.

An East Twelfth-street car Friday night ran into a laundry wagon at Twelfth and Main streets, killing the horse instantly and throwing the driver several feet in the air.

The driver, who refused to divulge his identity, recovered his senses within a few moments and in return for the damage resulting to his rig, the latter having been entirely demolished, engaged in a physical encounter with the motorman of the car. The passengers for several minutes were treated to a melodramatic scene seldom enacted without the glare of the footlights.

The laundryman, finding his cart and horse a total wreck, accused the motorman of negligence, and declared that he would not await the action of any court to settle the responsibility. The two men indulged in a heated argument for a brief time and then the motorman is alleged to have left his post of duty and started for the laundryman, armed with the controller handle.

According to witnesses, the victim of the accident proceeded to make good in a hurry by administering severe punishment to the motorman, the latter returning to his car after having been chased for a considerable distance.

The laundry driver, apparently satisfied, removed the débris and departed without volunteering any information as to his identity.

CHURCH DEDICATION.

Methodists Will Consecrate First One Built in the Suburban City of Huntington Park.

This afternoon at 2:30 the new Methodist Episcopal Church at Huntington Park will be dedicated by Rev. Dr. Robert McIntyre, pastor of the First Methodist Church of this city. As this is the first church of any kind to be built at the new town there is a wide interest in the project, and efforts will be made to make its dedication a notable occasion. Special cars will leave the Pacific Electric depot, Sixth and Main streets, over the Whittier line, at 2 o'clock, to accommodate those who wish to go. The building committee under whose supervision the pretty new church was built, is as follows: Dr. A. W. Adkinson, presiding elder; Rev. William F. Lusk, pastor; John Freeman, A. D. Burbank, J. R. Bouler, Frank H. Tate and A. E. Walters. The dedicatory sermon will be preached by Dr. McIntyre, and A. E. Walters, president of the board of trustees, will present the completed structure to the congregation. It will be accepted by the pastor.

THE LOCAL SCHOOLS.

MAKE UP FOR CLASS PLAYS.

High School Pupils Prepare for Stage Events.

Mid-Year Graduation Exercises at the Normal.

Teachers' Roster Reveals Remarkable Records.

The time for the class play draweth nigh. The Senior A's of the Los Angeles High School have made a good selection in that dear old love story of "Sweet Lavender," which will be produced at the Burbank Theater the afternoon of February 9.

Sweet sentiment is much more in the line of High School histrionic ability than some of the heavy tragedies attempted at times by ambitious immaturity, and a treat is promised by these really clever young players of the Senior A class.

Garnet Holme is staging the play, and Thurman De Bolt, who assumes one of the main roles, is manager. The title role of Sweet Lavender is taken by pretty Ruth Pitkin, and Lester Finlay is the successful lover in the cast. Harry Wyatt sustains the comic element in the barber who is enamored of Sweet Lavender's mother, Mrs. Rolt, the latter portrayed by Hazel Dell.

Thurman De Bolt is the aspiring young lawyer who is an American, the scene being laid in London. Carroll Stilson is the physician of high degree and profitable practice, and there are a number of other parts sustained by various members of the Senior A Class.

The Senior B's are coming out with a drawing card, and the joys of "H.M.S. Pinafore," will be revived by them for the dear delight of all who hear this one-time furore of comic opera. It will be given February 8, which will be Senior B Day, when the large class of Senior A's will receive the star and crescent pins.

STATE NORMAL'S MID-YEAR.

From January 26 to February 1 is the graduation week for the mid-winter class at the State Normal School, and fifty-five students will receive their diplomas at this time. The schedule is as follows:

Reception by Senior B Class, Friday January 26, at 8 p.m.; graduation sermon by Rev. Baker P. Lee, D.D., at Christ Church, January 28, 11 a.m.; class night exercises at Normal School January 30, 8 p.m.; class reception at president's residence, January 31, 8 p.m.; graduation exercises at Normal School, Thursday February 1, 8 p.m.

The president of the graduating class is Miss Irma Wilkerson; vice-president, Miss Irma Creigh; secretary and treasurer, Miss Jessie Kenyon.

SENIOR RECITAL.

A happy affair in lighter vein was the Senior recital given Friday afternoon in the auditorium at the State Normal School under the direction of the teacher of expression, Miss Gill. Selections from Field, Riley, Dunbar and Burdette made up the laughable and highly enjoyable programme.

"Sister's Cake" (Field) was given by Miss Octavia Cobb; "Utopia" (Burdette) by Miss Minnie Porter; "Seein' Things" (Field) by Miss Alice Cartwright; "Mr. Billings of Louisville" (Field) by Miss Elizabeth Steinburger; "When Folks is Gone, (Riley) by Miss Lillian Harrison; "The Fishin' Party" (Riley) by Miss Elva Wenger; "The Cornstalk Fiddle" (Dunbar) by Miss Maude Patterson; "Like Mother Used to Make" (Riley) by Miss Eveleen Sullivan; "Grigsby Station" (Riley) by Miss Sarah Davis; "The Boys" (Holmes) by Miss Ada Chess; "Deacon Jones's Grievance" (Dunbar) by Miss Jessie Barnes; and "That Old Mare of Mine" (Dunbar) by Miss Lillian Bradford.

BASKETBALL EVENTS.

Pretty Anette Burke plays no more with the Los Angeles High School team, which she managed so successfully for two seasons, and on which she played the part of a star forward. Sad to relate, Miss Annette has gone over to the enemy in the shape of the J.U.G. team with which she will play this season's series of games. Her place on the team of the Los Angeles High has been taken by Widde Kendrick, who is pronounced a coming power, while the business management has been assumed by popular Mary Plummer.

The team as it stands for this year consists of Mildred Hunter, captain and center; Mary Plummer and Widde Kendrick, forwards; Sue Hunter and Ella Winstanley, guards. Thurman De Bolt is the coach for this season.

Interest in basketball is picking up just now and on every hand engagements are being made for play. The ruling this year demands a ninety-foot court, which makes it a strenuous game unless two centers are employed. A new court of the required length has just been made at the Los Angeles High School.

The first of the second teams at the Los Angeles High has the following members: Lovena Harkness, center; Grace Breedlove and Josephine Vickers, forwards; Elsie Lafferty and Orell Bigelow, guards.

"QUEER QUIZ" EXPLAINED.

The "queer quiz" in the shape of blank question forms sent out by the Board of Education to the puzzlement of teachers of the public schools a few weeks ago, has its solution in the form of the neat little directory of the city schools just issued. This condensed and modest little pamphlet is full of interesting information as to the experience and qualifications of the more than 800 teachers employed in the Los Angeles schools. In fact, it is pretty nearly a genealogical table of their lives—so far as their teaching experience goes.

If Los Angeles, like New York and some other cities, practiced the pension custom concerning length of service of its public school teachers then one of them, Mrs. C. G. DuBois, would be entitled to retire on her pension percentage, as she has taught thirty-two years in the city schools. Mrs. DuBois is the only one in the list of 826 teachers who has reached the thirty-year notch. For eighteen years she was principal of Castelar-street school and in all the thirty-two years of her service she has lost but five months' time. She has taught the children of her former pupils, and many of the business men and matrons of Los Angeles were among her pupils. But this thirty-two years does not include all of Mrs. DuBois's teaching experience, for she taught ten years before coming to Los Angeles, so her total record foots up forty-two years.

There are half a dozen others who have taught in excess of twenty years, while thirty-eight have taught fifteen years or more and ninety-one have been instructing the youth of Los Angeles for a period of ten years and upward. The general average of the whole bunch of 826 teachers is almost five years per capita. Therefore, when your Jennie or Johnnie comes home complaining of bitter injustice, do not attribute it to inexperience on the part of the teacher.

The above reckoning applies to actual experience in the Los Angeles city schools only. As for experience before coming here, the general average is in excess of ten years per capita. William Havemann, teacher of German in the High School, leads in length of teaching experience, having been in the ranks forty-five years and in his present position eleven years.

J. M. McPherron of the mathematical department of the High School was a teacher of twenty-three years' experience before he assumed his present position eleven years ago. Mrs. Emma W. Edwards of the Sentous-street school taught for twenty-two years before she came here eight years ago. There are, in all, eight teachers who have exceeded the thirty-year limit in experience, without reference to one particular locality, and four others who lack less than a year of that mark, while there are seventy-three who have been in harness twenty years and more.

More than one-third of the teachers in the Los Angeles schools hold life diplomas. In addition to the 826 regular teachers, there are fifteen substitutes. Less than 10 per cent. of the teachers are men and two-thirds of these hold either principalships or positions in special departments of the High School.

BRUSH ON COURT.

The second and the picked second teams of the L.A.H.S. had a lively brush on the High School court Friday afternoon, the light sprinkle of rain producing a perceptible coat of mud to add to the fun. The "Whites" were the second team, and the "Blues" were the picked second. The line-up was as follows:

Whites.		Blues.
A. Shepherd	center	L. Harkness
E. Winstanley	forward	G. Breedlove
B. Hill	forward	J. Vickers
O. Bigelow	guard	E. Lafferty
M. Ford	guard	E. Payne

The score at the end of the first half was 3 to 5 in favor of the Whites; at the end of the second it was 8 to 16 in favor of the same side. Mary Plummer acted as referee, and Mildred Hunter as umpire.

The two forwards for the Blues played a strong game and stood the opposing forces in fine fashion, Miss Vickers sustaining a slight injury to her eye during the play and left the game for a few moments, but was revived and finished in fine shape.

IONIAN SOCIETY MEET.

The regular meeting of the Ionian Society was held at the Polytechnic High School Friday afternoon. The programme given was a credit to the ability of the chairman of the committee, Miss Edna Merz, who is also vice-president.

The numbers given consisted of a piano selection played by Zilpha Reames; a reading by Miss Walburg, entitled "An Unexpected Guest;" a vocal solo by Miss Dutton; an oration by Lawrence Levin, and a piano solo by Ioka Tresovitch.

VISIT. MAYOR, SANS PANTS.

Recherche Leg Show in Office of Mr. McAleer.

Hot Pow-wow of Three Bow-wow Chiefs and Ours.

Igorrotes Give Ax and Ideas for Running City.

Three august and dignified Igorrote Mayors without any pants paid an official visit to the City Hall yesterday.

Domingo, the dignitary with hairy legs, was announced as the former executive of the metropolis of Bontoc. Anausal, with show-girl top-knot, is Mayor of Tacuan, on leave of absence; Moling is the present Mayor of Bontoc, successor of Domingo. Domingo still has the scar on his solar plexus.

They were accompanied by a young Igorrote to interpret.

They brought Mayor McAleer, as a present, a big, shiny, sharp headsman's ax and politely offered to kill any Councilman he would select.

Out of pure friendliness they wished to show him how an Igorrote Mayor would deal with a Councilman who wouldn't confirm appointments to the Board of Public Works.

They said, through the interpreter, that they understood that Mr. McAleer's counsellors are in insurrection; they thought Mayors of cities ought to stand together.

READY TO SHOW HIM.

They said if he would trot in any City Councilman who is not behaving, the man with the ax would be pleased to show him what happened some time ago to the hostile chairman of the Committee on Dog Meat in the village of Bontoc.

McAleer magnanimously declined even to have the poinsettia top piece of Howton severed from the rest of his shape.

So the three duly-accredited Mayors from the Igorrote country were disappointed.

But they presented him with the ax in case the City Council does not behave to his satisfaction, and showed him how to don the war costume suitable to such little incidents, and how to swing the ax without spoiling the meat.

Upon examination, the Mayor found his new angry clothes to consist of a saucy little breech clout, a dinky, rakish cap designed to perch somewhere over the human ear; also a fascinating smile.

STARTED THE RECALL.

Domingo, the former Mayor of Bontoc, confided in McAleer on the quiet, that the city government of Bontoc isn't what it used to be. But he said there used to be a Mayor who was the real goods.

He admitted that at one time, a number of malcontents attempted to put the recall in force against him while he was in office.

But he noticed at once that the dog meat that evening tasted queerly and happened to wake up just in time in the dark of the moon that night. He thoughtfully showed McAleer the knuckle joints and one shin bone of the man who started the recall.

Domingo is the man who manufactured the ax that was presented yesterday. He said the most important thing to remember in conducting a municipal campaign is the tender place under the ear.

He wanted to make McAleer an extra present, as between Mayors of the front teeth and the dried ear of one of the Igorrote library directors who tried to do some funny business with him and then refused to get out when he was fired.

McAleer declined the gift very politely, having plenty of available material of his own to make similar collections.

THEIR "BUTTINSKY."

Domingo said that they once had a red-headed Councilman in Bontoc who kept trying to butt into the public eye all the time.

He didn't say what became of him. He did mention, however, that the log trust boosted the price of meat to a prohibitive price at one time and they were obliged to resort to other menus.

"Poor Howtow," he said, "we had to pass pure food laws right after that. I have never got my stomach back."

He added, confidentially: "Take the advice of an experienced colleague, Your Highness, it was a poor idea. The beast was like India rubber."

The Mayor presented several little exchange courtesies. The feature of his entertainment that made the great big hit was sitting on top of his steam radiator—a somewhat perplexing feat for any gentleman without pants.

INDIANS TO MARRY.

DILLON WINS A BRIDE.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

CARLISLE (Pa.) Jan. 13.—At a dinner party for the Carlisle Indian football players and ladies last evening, given by Superintendent Mercer of the Carlisle School, Miss Rose LaFarge, a Blackfoot Indian and a last year's Carlisle's graduate, now acting as an assistant matron here, announced her engagement to Charles Dillon, the Cheyenne guard on the Carlisle football eleven for the last few years. The couple will be the first to have an elaborate ceremonial wedding at the Carlisle School. They will be married before 1000 Indian students and other guests in the newly-completed auditorium on January 22. Dr. George Norcross, lately Presbyterian Moderator of Pennsylvania, will officiate.

Big Manufacturers Oppose The Trust

LATEST DEVELOPMENTS IN THE FIGHT—More than twenty of the largest furniture manufacturers in the United States have entirely withdrawn their products from all trust stores, giving to Brent's the exclusive right to sell their goods. This was done because the Trust stores placed such prohibitive prices on the goods that people refused to buy them; consequently the manufacturers were able to sell very limited orders. At Brent's these same goods were sold at such low prices that the quantity of goods sold every day is enormous. Save 25 40 per cent. by trading at Brent's.

The Fight Concerns Every American Family

Many a death struggle has been enacted within a few feet of people who know nothing of it.

Although the greater part of Los Angeles, and in fact all Southern California, is fully aware of the desperate condition of the furniture Trust and the victorious battle that has been waged by Brents. Yet there are here and there people who have kept themselves in ignorance of the condition.

You must realize, then, that here is a monster independent furniture concern, which alone and single handed, has compelled the Trust to retreat and to take up a defensive warfare instead of an aggressive warfare.

Think a minute and realize with personal feeling that here is a firm which is actually selling furniture, carpets and all other articles used in the house or hotel for less money than most stores pay at wholesale.

This concerns you and your own pocket-book.

If you wish carpets or a dresser or a new dining room table, or fittings for your library, or equipments for your office, here is a store that will supply the goods at 25 to 40 per cent. below the Trust.

I have read in the columns article under the head Strike," in which, par- you have done a citi- a very cruel injus- would be greatly obliged to grant me the privi- before your readers to be no more than this subject.

In the West, in Los An- any signs of strife be- printers and their Following this you statement as to the between the print- employers. That is a sub- in the contention familiar with. Inciden- that "Los Angeles is the in the printing trade in America." In this we all agree. whatever difference between the printers at the present time in this city, you say in conclusion:

"The responsibility is on Gen. Otis.

"The union men and other workmen who sympathize with them are taking every precautionary step that self-respect will permit, to steer them clear from the strife. But Gen. Otis, because he hates them, and because he has succeeded in intimidating employers of labor, is forcing an issue that, if more reasonable heads do not intervene, must lead to serious consequences."

Now, sir, you will permit me to say that in this you do a grave injustice to Gen. Otis, and you furthermore insult every employer of labor in the city of Los Angeles. Gen. Otis insists upon doing what every other person who conducts any business has a right to do, and should do. He proposes to conduct his business as he sees it to be best for those interested in it. He entertains no antagonism to labor, and is far from bearing any hatred to laboring men, employing a large force of laborers himself in the many branches of the business he conducts. So far as I am instructed in the matter, and I think I know, the wages paid by The Times are higher than those paid by any other similar concern in this city. Gen. Otis has never shown any disposition to have any quarrel whatsoever with laborers, unionized or otherwise. He has always conceded the right of every wage earner to follow his own judgment as to the person for whom he should work, as to what hours he should work, and as to what wages he should work for. He concedes to every man the right that he claims for himself and claims no peculiar privileges over other men. I happento know that the men in his employ, those in the mechanical departments as well as in the news gathering and editorial departments of The Times, are the best satisfied men and the most loyal to their employer of any men in the city of Los Angeles

In the quotation made above, you say that "the union men are taking every precautionary step that self-respect will permit to steer them clear from strife." Let me say that picketing is not a "precautionary measure to steer clear from strife." Let me say that persistent, impudent intermeddling on the part of strikers with men who are going about their own business and earning a living as they think best is not a "precautionary measure to steer clear from strife." Let me say that besetting one unprotected boy by two thugs and knocking him senseless in the street with a pair of brass knuckles is not a "precautionary measure to steer clear from strife." Let me further say that none of these acts of interference with people going about their legitimate business, and none of these acts of intimidation and of violence are to be laid at the door of Gen. Otis, or at any other door than that of those engaged in the strike.

But you go a long ways out of your way and a long ways away from the truth when you insult every employer of labor in the city of Los Angeles by saying that Gen. Otis "has succeeded in intimidating all employers of labor." Gen. Otis is possessed of the great virtue of attending strictly to his own business, and permitting others to do the same if they will. The employing printers of Los Angeles and all other employers of labor are not made of the kind of stuff to be intimidated by any one. We propose to do in the future as we have done in the past; to mind our own business, to conduct our own business as seems best to us, and we will brook no dictation, no interference on the part of any person or any aggregation of persons. I do acknowledge that largely through the wise and just course pursued by The Times during the last twenty years, that we, employers of labor in the city of Los Angeles, have been freer from strikes, confusion, violence, bloodshed, and murder than any other community with which I am acquainted in the United States. Every employer of labor and every honest and industrious wage-earner in the city of Los Angeles and all through Southern California, indeed in all parts of the United States, owe a deep debt of gratitude to The Times, under Gen. Otis's management, for the conditions of comparative peace which have prevailed in this city during all these years. This city is not a city of strife between employers and employés. There is more good will, good feeling, good fellowship, and contentment here between these two opposite wings of industry than anywhere else in America. Every attempt to disrupt this peace as come from the unwise action of those who lead astray honest workingmen and induce them to join the strikes where there is no occasion for trouble, to the detriment of every wage earner who follows them in these foolish movements. I am, sir,

Very truly yours,

C. K. WALWORTH,

BITTER FIGHT ON INITIATIVE.

Attack on Its Constitutionality is Launched.

Supreme Court of State Will Hear Case Soon.

Movement Aimed to Block Anti-Saloon Elections.

The constitutionality of the "initiative" provision of the city charter was challenged yesterday in the Supreme Court of the State by Attorney R. A. Todd, representing Andrew Pfahler, who is in the City Jail awaiting trial on a charge of violating the slaughter-house ordinance. The matter will be heard by the Supreme Court, en banc, on February 5.

Pfahler was arrested here Friday afternoon on a complaint alleging that he was killing hogs outside the slaughter-house district. The boundaries of this district were fixed by an initiative ordinance adopted at the last general election.

Before leaving Los Angeles Friday, Attorney Todd said that the cost of defending Pfahler will be defrayed by the Mathie Brewing Company and that the real object of the suit is not so much to reëstablish the old slaughter-house district as to put an end to the special elections over the regulation of the sale of liquor.

Initiative Gothenburg petitions have been in circulation here for the last three weeks. Almost enough signatures have been secured to compel the Council to call a special election to decide the question of reducing the number of saloon licenses from 200 to seventy-five.

It is to put a stop to these anti-saloon special elections that the Mathie Brewing Company has taken up Pfahler's case.

The last anti-saloon initiative election cost the city $10,000, and the liquor interests $75,000. If the Gothenburg election is called the expense will be equally great, they say.

GROUNDS OF ATTACK.

Atorney Todd, in his petition for a writ of habeas corpus, attacks the "initiative" on the ground that it violates the Constitution of the United States in that it attempts to provide for legislation by a direct vote of the people instead of by the representatives elected for that purpose.

In the brief, Mr. Todd alleges that the initiative also violates Article XI of the Constitution of the State, which provides that, "Any county, city, town or township may make and enforce within its limits all such local police, sanitary and other regulations as are not in conflict with the general laws."

Article XI further provides that the Legislature shall not delegate to any special commission any municipal function whatever.

The petition explains that the application for a writ of habeas corpus is made directly to the Supreme Court instead of to the Superior Court of Los Angeles county, for the reason that the main question involved is that of the initiative and that the petitioners would be unwilling to accept the ruling of the Superior Court if that ruling should be a denial of the application, and, further, that several other municipalities of the State have embodied the initiative provision in their city charters and the validity of the section is of more than local importance.

The apparent intention of the petitioners is to secure a decision directly on the legality of the initiative provision.

WILL FIGHT TO THE END.

Attorney Todd asserts that if the Supreme Court of the State renders an adverse opinion the case will be carried to the Supreme Court of the United States.

"My clients are determined" said Mr. Todd, "to have a decision on the legality of that initiative section. They are newcomers here. The old breweries were afraid to take hold of it. They preferred to stand the expense of the special elections. The Supreme Court in a Ventura case rendered a decision which, if followed here, will result in knocking out the initiative."

The initiative provision of the charter is a device by means of which the Council is compelled to adopt without amendment any proposed ordinance containing signatures equal to 15 per cent. of the entire number of votes cast for Mayor at the last general election, or to submit the ordinance to a vote of the people at a special election called for that purpose.

The provision contains a clause to the effect that if the petition is signed by more than 5 per cent., but less than 15 per cent. of the entire number of votes cast for Mayor at the last election, it must then be submitted to a vote of the people at the next general election. It was at the last general election that the initiative slaughter-house ordinance was adopted.

If the initiative should be declared unconstitutional it would leave the Hauser Company's big plant in the Sixth Ward outside the district. It was by the initiative that the territory in the Sixth Ward was included in that inside of which the slaughtering of animals for meat is permitted.

The location selected by Pfahler is inside the limits of the ordinance passed by the Council, but outside that of the initiative.

"SEEING AMERICA FIRST."

Slogan of the Real Estate Men of the West Echoes Over the "Rockies."

At the last meeting of the Los Angeles Realty Board, it was resolved to extend to the Salt Lake City Real Estate Association an invitation to visit Los Angeles next February, with the understanding that the Los Angeles Realty Board will make an endeavor to return the visit some time during the coming fall or winter. A subscription for the purpose of entertaining the visitors was opened with most gratifying results and a fitting reception to the visitors is assured. Delegates from Ogden and other Utah cities will probably be included in the delegation and it is considered probable that a Utah State Federation, similar to the California body, will be organized during the trip.

A convention has been called for January 25, at Salt Lake City, having as its object the diversion of a portion of the money spent annually on European travel into western channels, and the Commercial Club of Salt Lake, an organization with which the Real Estate Association is affiliated, has chosen as its slogan, "Seeing America First." The success of the movement is said to be assured, Secretary Fisher Harris of the Commercial Club being authority for the statement that 250 representatives of the Trans-Mississippi States, Hawaii, Mexico and British Columbia will be present. The Governor of each State or Territory is entitled to appoint two delegates to the convention, and each commercial body, railroad, or transportation company will be allowed to send one.

During the recent visit of the Secretary of the Los Angeles Realty Board to Salt Lake City the importance of the convention was impressed upon him, and since his return home he has lost no time in bringing the matter before the notice of local realty bodies, and, as a result, President Merrill of the Los Angeles Realty Board and Charles W. Coe of the San José Real Estate Agents Association have already been appointed delegates. President Ferrier of the State Federation has been asked to appoint a delegate to represent it as a whole, and realty organizations of Oakland, Berkeley, San Francisco, San Diego, Fresno and Riverside have been asked to appoint representatives.

At the convention, the question of holding another and greater convention, to include delegates from all of the trans-Mississippi States, will be considered with the view to securing uniform legislation in regard to real estate and kindred matters, and to cover much the same field as the California State Realty Board, but on a much larger scale.

"Seeing America First" is the slogan of these real estate men.

SUGAR OCTOPUS SPREADING OUT.

COMBINE PLANNED THAT WILL STAGGER ALL OTHERS.

Report That Standard Oil People are Back of Move for Absorption of the Biggest Concerns Throughout the Country, Controlling Prices and Yet Reducing Cost to Consumers.

Sugar eaters and local stockholders in Eastern sugar companies are agitated over a giant combine in sugar about to be effected.

It is claimed that the Standard Oil people are to be the controllers of the sugar market. This would affect the beet sugar industry and sugar prices in general.

Many Los Angeles people are further interested in that they own stock in some of the large sugar companies to be absorbed into the trust, according to report.

The trust is to go into effect March 31 and be known as the Corn Products Refining Company. It will not only control sugar, but molasses, saccharine, glucose and tar products.

The combine will include the New York Glucose Company, Warner Sugar Refining Company, St. Louis Preserving and Refining Company and the New York Sugar Company.

It will be chartered under the laws of New Jersey with $30,000,000 preferred stock and $50,000,000 common stock.

The plan has the indorsement of Norman B. Lane, Conrad Mathiason, Marshall Field and other big sugar men.

The belief that Standard Oil is back of the combine is induced by the fact that the New York Glucose Company is said to be controlled by Standard Oil men.

Sugar men say the combine is likely to lower rather than raise sugar prices for the reason that it will lessen the freight charges on sugar from distant points, the market to be supplied from the nearest depot of the combine.

The market to be controlled by the combine will be so enormous that the beet-sugar industry will have little effect on it. The beet-sugar prices are expected to be controlled by its prices.

CORNETIST IS SHOT.

Policeman Varey Thought Thomas Antonelli Was a Burglar, Latter Took Cop for Hold-up Man.

A comedy of errors was enacted in the vicinity of Seventeenth street and Grand avenue early yesterday morning that came near ending in a tragedy. Thomas Antonelli, a cornetist in Chiafferelli's band, was returning home at about 2 o'clock with another member of the band.

At Seventeenth and Grand Patrolman Varey saw the men walking across a vacant lot, each carrying a bundle under his arm. Believing them to be burglars, Varey ordered the men to halt. Thinking Varey a highwaymen, the two Italians ran for their lives. Varey repeated his order and fired a shot into the air. Faster sped the musicians.

Varey then gave chase, sure he was after burglars "with the goods." For six blocks the chase continued, when Varey again ordered the men to halt. Instead of complying, they separated and Varey fired at Antonelli, the shot taking effect in the arm and bringing him to a full stop.

The injured man was taken to the Receiving Hospital and his wound dressed, after which he was sent to his home. He says they could not see the policeman's star and supposed he was a robber and so ran. Varey regrets the shooting, but says it was the only thing to do.

"I regret the fact that the man was wounded," said Chief of Police Auble yesterday, "but Varey did his duty. I think if I saw two men walking across a vacant lot at 2 o'clock in the morning with a bundle apiece I would think they were burglars. If the wounded man had stopped when he was ordered to halt there would have been no trouble, but he ran and it was Varey's duty to stop him."

IN JAIL—SO GLAD!

Henry Lyons, After Much Difficulty, Secures Entrance to the County Bastile.

Aided by his counsel Henry Lyons broke into jail yesterday. He unwound a great skein of red tape in the operation.

On Friday night Lyons was arrested and arraigned before Justice Young, charged with cruelty in connection with coursing, and then released on $50 bail. Yesterday morning Attorney Wideman swore out the writ in the Appelate Court and it was made returnable forthwith before Judge James. But then occurred a hitch.

The blessed privilege of habeas-corpus is for some one illegally restrained of his liberty but, as a matter of fact, Lyons was on the street enjoying life much as usual. A rush was made to forfeit his bail and run him into jail, but Sheriff White would not admit him as a prisoner as there was no commitment.

The attempt to break into jail was a failure, and the habeas-corpus business was hung up between wind and water.

After a great deal of scurrying the tangle was finally unravelled. The bail was recovered, Justice Young made out the commitment, the Sheriff accepted the prisoner and was then ready to make return on the writ in Judge James' court. When the matter was called Chief Deputy Dist.-Atty. Shaw and Deputy Dist.-Atty. Fleming appeared to contest the petition, and, after the defendant attorney had argued the matter, they answered. By agreement, however, arguments were suspended, and the legal points involved will be contended for in briefs to be filed in Judge James's court.

This store is not connected, either directly or indirectly, with any other furniture store in Los Angeles.

A WORD about the best stock of new furniture on the Pacific Coast. When the idea of this store was conceived we planned not only to make purchases sufficient to stock the entire establishment, but at the same time to make contracts with the best factories in America—large enough to anticipate our need for some months ahead. Instead of merely "sorting in" at broken-lot prices, as an older established house would necessarily have to do, we gained the leverage in the market of practically purchasing two large stocks at one time.

In making contracts of such magnitude we have been able to obtain extremely favorable buying terms, and consequently feel that the prices at which this New Furniture and Floor Covering is marked cannot, and will not, be duplicated in any Pacific Coast market.

The variety of styles in every line is broad enough to afford the finest possible opportunity for happy selection. The variety of prices at which the pieces are marked also gives equal opportunity to the small or large purse.

These are the conditions which confront the furniture buyer from our standpoint, and while we may be biased in favor of our own stock, we still believe that from the standpoints of the "best for your money" or of a "choice selection" the careful buyer will thank us for stating the case in public print. This is written for those who want a single piece or those who desire to furnish a house of any size complete—we ask your careful investigation before you decide upon the furniture question.

Remember that the California Furniture Company is located on BROADWAY.

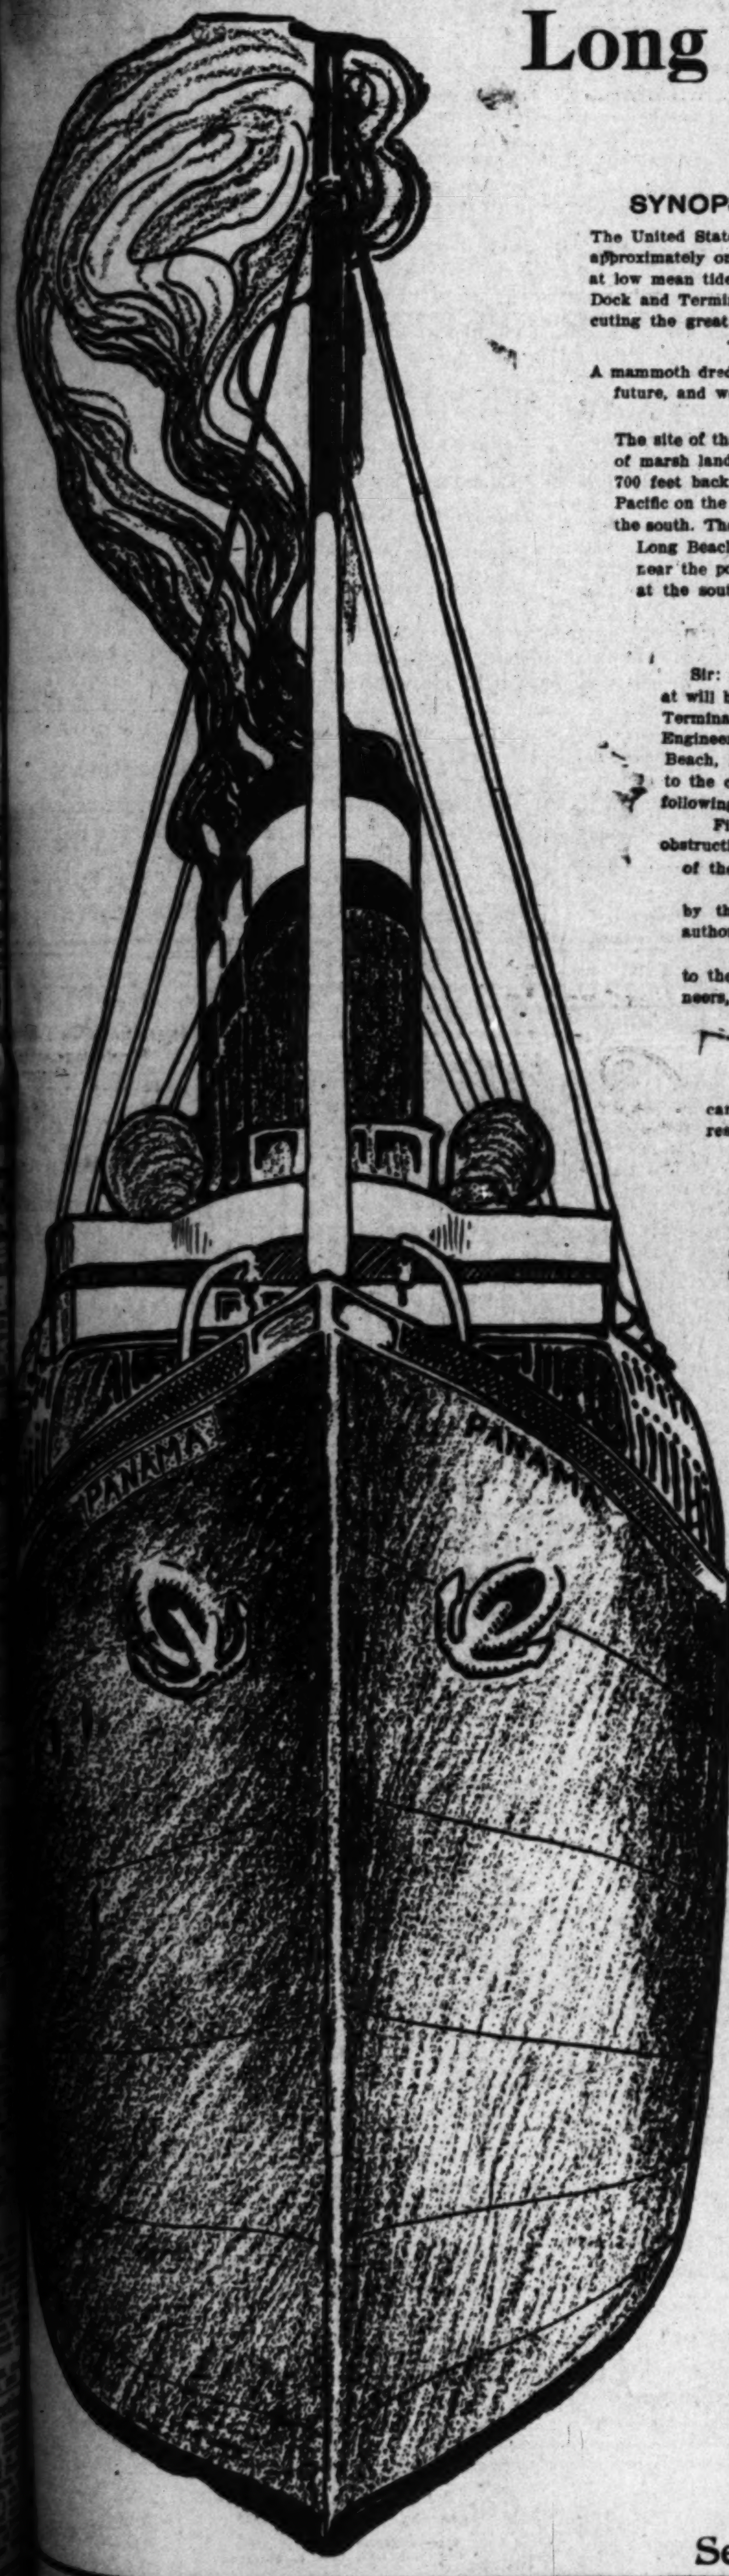
INDEPENDENT HARBOR

Long Beach Destined to Become One of the World's Greatest Seaports.



SYNOPSIS OF THE GREAT HARBOR PROJECT.

The United States Government has consented to the construction of an inner harbor, approximately one mile square, and channels from twenty-one to thirty-two feet deep at low mean tide, within the limits of the City of Long Beach. We, the Los Angeles Dock and Terminal Company, a corporation with ample capital, are vigorously prosecuting the great work.

THE ACTUAL WORK OF DREDGING HAS BEGUN.

A mammoth dredger is now in operation, and more dredgers will be added in the near future, and work pushed to completion with greatest despatch.

THE EXACT SITE OF THE HARBOR.

The site of the harbor is immediately north of Seaside Park. It comprises 800 acres of marsh lands, partly submerged, lying three miles east of the city of San Pedro, 700 feet back from the ocean, and between the main line tracks of the Southern Pacific on the north and the main-line tracks of the Salt Lake and Pacific Electric on the south. The City of Long Beach overlaps the whole with its western boundary line.

Long Beach Bay (at present an unimportant widening-out of the slough waters near the point where the San Gabriel River channel opens into the Pacific) lies at the southwest extremity of the harbor site.

OUR PERMIT FROM THE GOVERNMENT.

WAR DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON,
November 27, 1905.

Sir: In answer to your application of the 15th instant, permission, revocable at will by the Secretary of War, is hereby granted the Los Angeles Dock and Terminal Company, in accordance with the recommendation of the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, to dredge certain navigable channels at Long Beach, Los Angeles county, California, at the location shown, and subject to the conditions marked in red on map attached hereto, and subject to the following additional conditions:

First. That this permit shall not be construed as authorizing the obstruction of any existing navigable channel, nor the invasion or impairment of the property rights of any person or corporation.

Second. That there shall be no restriction whatever on the free use by the public of any navigable channel dredged and improved under authority of this permit.

Third. That the work herein permitted to be done shall be subject to the supervision and approval of the local officer to the Corps of Engineers, United States Army, whose address is Los Angeles, California.

Very respectfully,
[Signed] ROBERT SHAW OLIVER,
Assistant Secretary of War.

The War Department has stipulated that our work shall be carried on under the direction and approval of Captain McKinstry, resident engineer, United States Army.

THE IMPORTANT DETAILS.

The total dredging for the harbor will amount to approximately 6,500,000 yards.

There are planned 23,000 lineal feet of wharfage in the channels and 7000 lineal feet in the slips, making a total wharfage of nearly six miles.

The main channel (No. 1) leading from the ocean (eastern end of San Pedro Bay) is to have a depth of thirty-two feet at mean low tide, and is to be 400 feet wide. The lateral channels (Nos. 2 and 3) are to have a depth of twenty-one feet at mean low tide, and are to be each 300 feet wide. The depth of the present slough channels varies from four to ten feet, and a considerable portion of the area to be dredged is unsubmerged at low tide.

The objective of the main channel is trans-oceanic shipping, hence the proposed depth of thirty-two feet, which is ten feet more than the present channel depth in the outer harbor at San Pedro. A vessel of the Deutschland class draws about twenty-seven feet. This main channel (No. 1) is to have a total wharfage of 10,000 feet, or nearly two miles, counting both sides of the channel. This space would give broadside wharfage to fifteen or more of the largest vessels afloat.

The lateral channels and slips are designed for the dockage of coastwise vessels, and the smaller-sized trans-oceanic ships, drawing as deep as twenty-one feet.

We roughly estimate that the dredging will cost $800,000, light bulkheads $150,000, and jetty work $600,000; a total of $1,550,000. We are, however, prepared to spend $2,000,000 on the harbor, and propose to make it thoroughly modern. A turning basin is also to be constructed.

A BELT LINE SURVEYED.

A traction belt line around and through the harbor lands, for the handling of freight, has been surveyed.

With the Southern Pacific traversing the north edge of the harbor site and the Salt Lake and Pacific Electric the southern edge, belt-line shifting to transcontinental roads can be easily and quickly made.

WILL BE AN ABSOLUTELY FREE HARBOR.

The waterfront and wharves will probably be owned by two hundred or more individuals and corporations, instead of being controlled by one or two. Therein lies the reason for calling the harbor a "free" harbor.

With respect to width of channel and area of water frontage, the harbor, when completed, will compare favorably with some of the leading ports of the world. The Chicago River, which in annual number of arrivals and departures of vessels leads the United States, is at no point more than 300 feet wide. The main channel will be 400 feet in width, with an ample turning-basin. The commerce of Baltimore is carried on in a dredged channel more than twenty-five miles long, having an average width of 250 feet. Other important harbors might be cited to prove that this great landlocked free harbor, when completed, will accommodate a vast commerce.

Sites for business and small manufacturing in the Back Bay Tract are now on the market at reasonable prices.

These sites are in close proximity to the great harbor development.

Three hundred and fifty sites have been sold since the opening of the tract, the sales aggregating more than $400,000.

There will be no building restrictions—the sites are solely for business purposes.

Streets will be oiled, curbed and sidewalked.

Where can you place your money to greater advantage? Think of the brilliant future ASSURED for this district! Think of the vast speculative value of this property!

Do you realize that work on the proposed harbor is now in actual progress!

Is not the selling of $400,000 worth of property in a few days MIGHTY SIGNIFICANT?

The Los Angeles Times says: "Long Beach has awakened to the magnificent possibilities of a commercial future—a future big with maritime promise, bright with business prosperity, backed by instant undertaking and framed in early fulfillment."

Long Beach is not only a city with a WONDERFUL FUTURE—it has a remarkably brilliant PRESENT.

The sales of property in Long Beach in one month have aggregated over $1,000,000.

This unprecedented activity is based upon the rapid increase in population—the magnificant location—the climatic conditions and other features peculiar to this city alone.

The present population is 18,000. Don't wait until prices soar to the "prohibitive point." Buy in the Back Bay Tract NOW!

You know that property values will speedily increase as the harbor work progresses. Why wait a week, or even a day?

Consider the value of properties adjoining the harbors of New York, San Francisco and Seattle?

VALLEY AND BEACH BANKS.

Over Twelve Millions in Suburban Institutions.

Increase Over Four Millions, or More Than a Third.

Harbor Cities' Growth Over a Hundred Per Cent.

Suburban banks in Southern California are gaining in wealth at the same fast pace as the city banks.

Total deposits of over $12,000,000 constitute the hoard of the banks of Pasadena, Long Beach, San Pedro, Santa Monica, Ocean Park and Santa Ana at the close of the year 1905.

At the close of 1904 the total deposits in twenty banks in these six cities were $7,581,417.68. For the same banks and five new institutions, from which figures were obtainable for 1905, the amount, stated in as exact figures as possible, was $11,623,468.37, an increase of $4,042,050.63. To this must be added approximate figures for several other institutions which will easily make the total in excess of twelve millions, very nearly thirteen in all probability.

There were seven banks opened in these cities during the past year, showing that the banking business is an attractive one. From some of the new institutions figures were obtained and are given with proper explanation, others have issued no statements as yet. Two-thirds of the deposits are in the banks of Pasadena and Long Beach.

DIVIDENDS FOR YEAR.

Dividends, so far as obtainable, amount to $111,150. The highest total disbursed was at Santa Ana, the second highest at Pasadena and the third at Long Beach. These are to stockholders only. To depositors in savings banks was paid during the year over $100,000, exact figures on this point not being available from a number of banks.

With the majority of banks there is little or no increase shown in stockholders' dividends, where the same has been paid for years past.

The total payments by banks in the cities included is in round numbers not less than $225,000.

PASADENA FINANCES.

At Pasadena the total deposits in six banks amounted to $5,215,140.51. The the close of the previous year they were $3,769,110.88, so that the increase is $1,445,729.63. Dividends to stockholders were $32,500. In addition to its increase of over 25 per cent. for the year the Pasadena National Bank reports an increase of $800,000 during the first week of the new year. The Union Savings Bank's payments to depositors were $25,000 and the Pasadena Savings and Trust Company's $40,000.

The American Bank and Trust Company begun business late in the year and has given out no statement as yet. The Bankers' Savings Bank has been in existence about a year and a half. The only figures obtainable are the total deposits at the close of 1905.

The following table shows the figures for six Pasadena banks:

Bank—	Total deposits, Dec. 30, 1905.	Total deposits, Dec. 31, 1904.	Increase.	Dividends.
Pasadena National	$1,307,000.00	$ 910,000.00	$ 397,000.00	$12,000

Union Savings	1,545,218.24	1,109,597.12	435,621.12	15,000
Pasadena Savings and Trust Company	1,255,728.98	1,053,733.76	201,995.22	1,500
Bankers' Savings Bank	273,849.53	....	273,849.53	......
Totals	$5,215,140.51	$3,769,410.88	$1,445,729.63	$33,500

*Commenced business May 15, 1905.
No figures for 1904 obtainable. Bank began business April 15, 1904.

HARBOR AND BEACH BANKS.

At Long Beach the increase is phenomenal. At the close of 1904 there were four banks doing business, with deposits of $1,727,595.89, at the close of 1905 these same banks had $3,243,374.56 carried on their books for depositors. In addition two new banks began business during the year, and after six months, report deposits amounting to more than $250,000. In exact figures, as near as obtainable, the total is $3,493,374.56, increase over 1904, of $1,765,595.89. As one of the new banks gave only a minimum figure of $100,000, it is safe to give not less than $4,000,000 as a total in round numbers for 1905, or about 110 per cent. increase.

The National Bank of Long Beach, with $150,000 and surplus of $50,000, reports an increase of over half a million or over 100 per cent. It pays a regular dividend of 3 per cent. semi-annually, or 6 per cent. annually, payable in January and July, amounting to $6000. During 1905 a special dividend of $750 was added.

The Long Beach Savings Bank, conducted in the same building and under largely the same management, although a separate institution, reports an increase of $224,059.53 in deposits. In addition to stockholders' dividends, it has paid to depositors as interest approximately $9600 during the year.

The First National, with an increase of over 90 per cent. in deposits, has a capital paid in of $100,000, surplus of $50,000, and undivided profits of $34,612.50.

The Citizens' Savings Bank, conducted in the same building and under similar management, reports an increase of over 30 per cent. in deposits, paid in capital of $25,000, reserve fund of $13,000, undivided profits of $24,755.17.

At San Pedro figures were obtainable from the First National and State banks. These show an increase on December 30, 1905, over the close of the previous year of $202,833.65, or over 100 per cent. The first of these banks began business during 1904 and shows an increase of 200 per cent. during 1905 in deposits. At the close of 1905 undivided profits were $2500. No dividends have yet been paid.

The State Bank of San Pedro shows increase in deposits of $120,000, or over 80 per cent. Its capital stock is $25,000. Dividends are at rate of 8 per cent., payable semi-annually.

At Santa Monica and Ocean Park deposits in three banks show increase over 1904 of $321,332.30, or less than 50 per cent., but as there are three other institutions whose figures were unobtainable the total is really much greater. With these included the two beach cities would show up as well as almost any other. As an instance of this it may be pointed out that the Merchants' National of Santa Monica showed an increase of approximately 130 per cent. during the year. The Bank of Santa Monica's increase is larger by $15,000, but a smaller per cent. of the whole.

At Venice and Ocean Park three new banks have been started during the year. They report a good showing for the time they have been doing business.

The last statement of the Farmers' and Merchants' National Bank of Redondo shows individual deposits on November 9 last of $140,295.72. The paid-in capital stock is $50,000, with surplus fund of $4,171.60, and undivided profits of $2229.73.

UP FROM SOUTH ON LONG TOUR.

COL. ALEXIS DE CLAIRMONT HERE FROM GUATEMALA.

Chief of Staff and Aide-de-Camp to President of the Republic, He Brings With Him the Two Young Sons of Country's Leader, Who Will See "the States."

Staying quietly at the Hotel Lexington is Col. Lorenzo Alexis de Clairmont, chief of staff and aide-de-camp to the President of Guatemala. With him are two black-haired, black-eyed, bright-faced little boys—the President's sons—who are seeing the United States for the first time

Although tall and decidedly military, Col. Clairmont is not at all of foreign appearance, and fully looks that which he really is—a native son of California. He is one of the soldiers of fortune that fortune seems to have taken for her own.

Already, although a young man, Col. Clairmont holds the highest position that the Presidente could give him in his household, and his friends rumor that he is soon to be made a general. His residence in Guatemala has been brief, for he first went there in 1902. Before that he had served with distinction in the American service in the Philippines. He was three times severely wounded.

Returning as a lieutenant and in a weakened physical condition, he went to South America to recuperate, and while regaining his health fell into the personal favor of Guatemala's President. He was made a captain in the bodyguard, and rose rapidly.

Then there came diplomatic service. He was special Ambassador on many missions. He speaks English, Spanish and French with equal fluency, and was more indispensable in the ministerial service than in the military.

The two little boys with Col. Clairmont are Francisco Estrada-Cabrera and Joaquin Estrada-Cabrera. This is their first trip abroad, and they are intensely interested in all that is going on. Of course, they speak classic Spanish, and are learning other languages with facility.

Their conductor will take them all over the United States. They have just come from San Francisco, and for some days have been guests of the Frankel and Zobelein families here. At the persuasion of their friends the party will remain over until the first of the week, going forward then to Del Monte, where they will rest for some days and make ready for an eastern tour. Washington is an early object in their travels, where by appointment the little fellows will meet President Roosevelt.

Col. Clairmonts' sister accompanies him, taking charge of the immediate tuition of Francisco and Joaquin.

Their father is Señor Licenciado Don Manuel Estrada-Cabrera, one of the youngest Presidents and most able lawyers that Guatemala has known.

President Estrada-Cabrera is well liked by his subjects—thanks to his own kindly spirit and his political fortune, and is now upon his second term of office, bidding fair to continue there. He has been decorated with four orders—one each from England, France, Germany and Chile.

Col. Clairmont believes that shortly the President himself will take a trip northward. He has announced, in fact, that he hopes to visit the United States within the next two years. His itinerary will include the whole of California and especially the southern part of the State, in which he is much interested.

"Guatemala is a small country," said Col. Clairmont, "but a pleasant and prosperous one. Her relations with the outside powers have been extremely pleasant, and her people are industrious and peaceable. In that way she has attained a comfortable security that many of the smaller States of South and Central America have failed to find. and with a Presidente who seems universally popular the prosperity bids fair to continue.

"It is quite an unprecedented thing that the Presidente should send his children out of the country, but for years he has been so anxious for them to get a glimpse of the United States, and obtain at least a part of their education by travel.

"We are especially interested in Southern California, and I have devoted an unusual amount of time to it. The boys are delighted with it, but they look forward eagerly to seeing a country under the snow."

Col. Lorenso Alexis de Clairmont, Chief of Staff to President of Gratemala.

coats. But the quickness with which they learn the real estate habit would surprise you. In about two years they have found that it is cheaper to pay interest than rent. Many a push-cart peddler has a precious deed at home under the mattress.

The Jew has had so few opportunities that he appreciates one the moment he sees it. Open the door two inches, and he is inside. Self-help was a Jewish habit long before Emerson made it a philosophy. The Jew has taken the sporting instinct and turned it to higher uses. While others are hunting with microscopes for "sure things," he will take a chance and win.

The Jew wins because he works. He believes in the eight-hour day, yes—eight hours before noon and eight hours after. In a Jewish community you will see no corner loafers, no beggars, no drunkards. There is enough tea drunk on East Side every day to float a ship, but not enough whisky to trouble prohibitionists.

He knows how to make money, and, what is more uncommon, he knows how to spend it. No matter how small his income is, he will live inside it. He will eat dry bread and sleep on the floor with a cheerful heart; but as soon as he has money to spend, he spends it like an emperor.

LIKE THE REST OF US.

Of course the Jews are not stained-glass angels. They have never said they were. In the main they are white and spotted like the rest of us. There are few of them in our police and divorce courts. There are less than two thousand in all our government institutions.

Whenever the country has been split in two by a political question, there have been Jews on both sides. Judah P. Benjamin, cabinet officer in the Confederate government supported the gray as stubbornly as Joseph Seligman did the blue. And in the largest sense we may say that international capital marches under the banner of Rothschild, and international labor under the flag of Karl Marx—Jews both, and irreconcilable.

The truth is that the Jews have become part and parcel of the United States to an extent that is seldom realized, even by themselves.

We are said to have 115 Jewish millionaires—one out of every thirty-five. The total amount of Jewish capital invested here is unknown; but we are told that in New York alone they own more than nine hundred million dollars' worth of property and do a yearly business of a billion in the wholesale trades. To read the names along Broadway reminds one of a chapter in Leviticus.

CAME WITH COLUMBUS.

Nor is it fair to call the Jews usurpers or intruders. As I have been surprised to find, they have the best of rights to be in America. They were here first. The epoch-making voyage of Columbus would not have been possible without the aid of a Jew, Luis de Santangel. Santangel was King Ferdinand's tax-collector. He advanced the necessary money for the expedition, $160,000, as a personal loan to the King and Queen.

The pretty story about Queen Isabella pawning her jewels was invented years afterwards by some Spaniard who wished to please the worthy lady.

Nor is Santangel the only Jew who figures in the records of Columbus's expedition. The great navigator's map was drawn by Ribes, called the Map Jew. His astronomical tables were compiled by the Jew Abraham Zacuto. His astronomical instruments were made by another Jew whose name has not been preserved. His ship's doctor was Bernal, the Jew. His superintendent was Rodrigo Sanchez, the Jew. The first sailor who saw land was Rodrigo de Triana, the Jew; and the first European to set foot on American soil was the interpreter, Luis de Torres, the Jew.

After all, Columbus only discovered the land. It was a Jew who discovered its business possibilities. When Columbus announced his success, the words were scarcely out of his mouth before Gabriel Sanchez, the Jew, hurried to King Ferdinand and got a franchise permitting him to sell cattle and grain to the Indians.

IN PILGRIM DAYS.

The Jews were knee-deep in the sugar trade of Brazil before any of the passengers of the Mayflower were born. Incredible to the Standish and Mather families, perhaps, but true! And so far as New York is concerned, ever since the making of the city began, there have been Jews at the job. Old wooden-legged Peter Stuyvesant was the boss of Manhattan when the first batch of Jews arrived—twenty-four of them, from Brazil in September, 1654. Stuyvesant stormed and threatened. He thought two dozen were too many.

The Jews were not troubled by his abuse. They were used to it; barred from the retail trade, they became wholesalers, and grew richer than the retailers.

At the time that George Washington cut the British rope, there were not many Jews in the colonies—about seven hundred, it is estimated; but they helped to do the rope-cutting. Washington had at least three on his staff. Forty-five are known to have been in his army. And when the outlook was darkest, when the flame of independence seemed to be flickering out, it was a Polish Jew, Haym Solomon, who rushed up with more fuel. He invested all his fortune, some $650,000, in the young republic; and while it paid back not a cent to him—nothing but imprisonment and poverty—that money has yielded big dividends ever since to his race and to humanity at large.

HIGH IN PATRIOTISM.

When Washington was inaugurated as President, there were fourteen clergymen present, and one was Rabbi Seixas, "the patriotic Jewish minister of the American Revolution," as he is termed in a memorial tablet erected in his honor a few years ago. One of the pleasant incidents of the War of Independence happened when the State of New York, barely one year old, paused in the middle of its fight for independence and gave full religious liberty to the Jews. It is a curious fact that the first statue ever presented to the United States was one of Jefferson, offered to Congress by a famous Jew, Commodore Uriah P. Levy, who was the highest ranking officer in our navy at the beginning of the Civil War. It was Commodore Levy, by the way, who abolished corporal punishment on American warships.

It has often been said that "the Jews will not stand by the flag."

There were more than seven thousand who wore either the blue or the gray in the Civil War, and about four thousand who enlisted, in 1898, against their old enemy, Spain.

IN PUBLIC SERVICE.

We have had twenty-four members of this remarkable race in Congress. High in the diplomatic and consular service we have had Mordecai M. Noah, at Tunis; B. F. Peixotto, at Bucharest; Simon Wolf, in Egypt; Solomon Hirsch and Oscar Straus, in Turkey. All manner of public services have been rendered by the three Straus brothers. Oscar Straus secured legal rights for American schools in Turkey, and suggested the Civic Federation as a meeting-place for labor and capital. Isidor made his mark in Congress as a tariff reformer, and does much for the cause of charity and of education. Nathan originated the pure milk enterprise which distributed nearly three million quarts in New York last year.

FAIR PLAY SUCCEEDS.

The Americanizing process is in full swing in all our Jewish communities, painful to the older people, no doubt, but as resistless as the coming of the seasons. The Jews make good raw material for citizenship, because they are the only immigrants who come to us without a country, without a flag.

It seems as if the American plan of giving the Jews fair play was succeeding. At any rate, all the other plans failed. "No nation prospers that persecutes the Jews," said Frederick the Great. Egypt tried persecution, and the Jews went to its funeral. Assyria made the same blunder. So did Babylon, Persia, Greece, Rome, Spain. Say the Jew is not a fighter!

When was there ever such a five-thousand-year battle for life? Tied hand and foot, he fought on, and today he is more alive than ever. He has never been as much as one per cent. of the world's population. The odds were against him more than a hundred to one. Yet, according to his almanac, he has been on the stage for nearly four thousand years.

In the face of his pedigree, how recent are the Knickerbockers, the Guelphs, the Hohenzollerns, the Romanoffs. Think of the Levys—sons of the Levites—or the Cohens—sons of the Cohanim, priests of the synagogue.

"One of my ancestors signed the Declaration of Independence," said a Bostonian to a Jew.

"Yes," said the Jew. "One of mine signed the Ten Commandments!"

With such a past as the Jew's, what may not his future be?

MEN! LOOK HERE!

DR. M'LAUGHLIN'S ELECTRIC BELT

Do you suffer from Lost Strength, Nervous Debility, Varicocele, Early Decay and Waste of Power? They are quickly and forever cured by the grand product of nature, Dr. McLaughlin's Electric Belt, with Free Electric Suspensory for Weak Men.

This Electric Suspensory carries the current direct to the weak parts and cures all weakness of men, varicocele, etc. It develops and expands all weak organs, and checks unnatural drains. No case of Failing Vigor, Varicocele or Debility can resist the powerful Electric Suspensory. It never fails to cure. It is free with Belts for weak men.

No man should be weak; no man should suffer the loss of that vital element which renders life worth living. No man should allow himself to become less a man than nature intended him; no man should suffer for sins of his youth, when there is at hand a certain cure for his weakness, a check to his waste of power.

Most of the pains, most of the weakness of stomach, heart, brain and nerves, from which men suffer, are due to an early loss of nature's reserve power through mistakes of youth. You need not suffer for this. You can be restored. The very element which you have lost you can get back, and you may be as happy as any man that lives.

My Electric Belt, with Special Electric Suspensory (free,) will restore your power. It will check all unnatural drains and give back the old vigor of youth.

J. S. Fulkerson, Oxnard, Cal., writes: "Your belt gives perfect satisfaction in every way. After having worn the appliance only a month I am almost cured."

This drain on your power causes Kidney Trouble, Rheumatism and Stomach Ailments. You know it is a loss of vital power and affects every organ of the body. Most of the ailments from which men suffer can be traced to it.

I have cured thousands of men who have squandered the savings of years in useless doctoring.

My Belt is easy to use. Put it on when you go to bed; you feel the glowing heat from it (no sting or burn as in old-style belts,) and you feel the nerves tingle with the new life flowing into them. You get up in the morning feeling like a two-year-old.

G. T. King, Fresno, Cal., writes: "I used your belt for ten weeks and am glad to tell you that it cured me of lame back, kidney and bladder trouble. I am now sound and well, in perfect health and weigh more than I ever did. My appetite is better than it has been for years. Your belt is all and more than you claim it to be."

An old man of 70 says he feels as strong and young as he did at 35. That shows it renews the vigor of youth.

It cures Rheumatism, Sciatic Pains, Lumbago, Kidney Trouble. It banishes pain in a night never to return.

E. B. Miller, Compton avenue, Los Angeles, Cal., writes: "I have used your high grade belt for two months for lame back, rheumatism, and weakened nerves, and am now a well man. I have gained six pounds in weight and feel as strong and hearty as I ever did. All my friends acknowledge that I have had a miraculous cure, as I was almost a wreck when I began to use the belt."

What ails you? Write and tell men, and no matter where you are I think I can give you the address of some one in your town that I have cured. I've cured thousands, and every man of them is a walking advertisement for my Belt.

Every man who ever used it recommends it, because it is honest. It does great work, and those whom I have cured are the most grateful because the cure cost so little.

Try my belt. Write me today for my beautifully illustrated book with cuts showing how my Belt is applied, and lots of good reading for men who want to be "The Noblest Work of God," A MAN. Inclose this ad. and I will send this book, sealed, free.

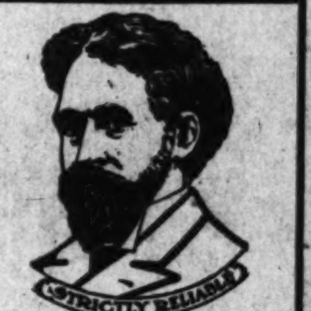
MEN

Are Treated by Us With the View of Making

PERMANENT CURES

They Are Treated By Educated Physicians of 25 Years Experience



WE TREAT NO INCURABLE CASES. OUR ADVICE IS ALWAYS HONEST AND GIVEN UNDERSTANDINGLY. WE ASK FROM THE PUBLIC THE CLOSEST SCRUTINY OF OUR WORK AND ARE CONTENT TO ABIDE BY THE RESULT OF THAT WORK.

What Dr. Harrison & Co. aim to accomplish in their treatment of Diseases of Men:

FIRST—The curing of curable troubles that have become chronic through poor and careless treatment by incompetent, so-called specialists.

SECOND—The proving of our ability to treat successfully troubles peculiar to men that have not reached an incurable stage.

THIRD—The restoration to strong vigorous manhood of the weak, nervous wrecks who have virtually ruined themselves by excesses of every description.

FOURTH—THE RELIEF AND CURE OF VARICOCELE, HYDROCELE, STRICTURE, PILES, FISTULA, BLOOD IMPURITIES, CONTRACTED AILMENTS, LOSS OF VITAL POWER, KIDNEY AND BLADDER TROUBLES.

These conditions we treat as we find them; the EXACT cause of these troubles has done its work only too well, and become extinct. The result remains and the existing condition is what we have to treat. To cope successfully with these conditions the physician must have had a special training—a thorough medical and surgical education, supplemented by years of experience. Dr. Harrison and his associates have been engaged in the work of curing men for nearly a quarter of a century. Their work is legitimate and regular in every respect. They offer no free treatments—no offering of ridiculously small fees to catch the unwary. Their claim for superiority is based on THOROUGH MEDICAL EDUCATION, SKILL, EXPERIENCE and the proving of the efficiency of their special treatment in the large number of cures they have made in cases which so many physicians have failed. Correspondence invited.

Our Medical Journal Free

Downstairs at our entrance, 202½ South Broadway, you can help yourself to our medical journal; an extensive description of our special work is given. It contains full information, which we cannot publish in our advertisement. If you live out of the city, write for one.

Varicocele

Every man having varicocele can be cured, but any and every external application—medicines internally, electricity, electric belts—ARE ALL ABSOLUTELY WORTHLESS. There is but one method that will cure varicocele. Dr. Harrison is the only specialist in Los Angeles using that method. Dr. Harrison guarantees an absolute, permanent and perfect cure. We will show dozens of men right here in Los Angeles we have cured. We cordially invite men to call.

Contracted Disorders are cured by us. Every patient coming to us consults no one but Dr. Harrison or his associate, both reliable physicians. Each and every man coming to us for consultation has his case carefully and understandingly looked into. Every case we treat receives our personal attention.

Stricture

This trouble we treat successfully by our improved method which seldom fails to bring about a cure. Electricity or electric belts cannot do this trouble any good. When you employ either you throw your money away. Call and let us explain the nature of the trouble and how you can be cured.

"Weakness"

Affections of men commonly described as "Weakness," according to our observations, are not such, but depend upon reflex disturbances, and are almost invariably induced or maintained by appreciable damage to the prostatic gland. As this may not be perceived by the patient, it is very frequently overlooked by the physician.

The dignity of our profession does not permit us to speak too freely of our accomplishments, yet it is the duty of a recognized and legitimate physician to say sufficient that the public may distinguish him from the imposter. This we are entitled to state: Our practice is the largest on the Coast, built up by the personal recommendation of one patient to another. It can be stated, too, without fear of contradiction, that previous to our announcement of the importance of urethral and prostatic inflammation as factors in the disorders of men, that treatment was conducted in an unsuccessful manner.

DEAFNESS CURED AT LAST

Wonderful New Discovery for the Positive Cure of Deafness and Head Noises

At last, after years of study and research, the wonderful Nature forces have been harnessed together and deafness can be cured. If I did not know positively that my method could cure, I would not allow my name to be connected with this treatment. My standing is such that I cannot afford to misrepresent or distort the facts. I know what this treatment will do and what it has done and can safely say, "It is the greatest, grandest and simplest in the world today." It seems to make no difference with this cure as to age and how long standing or deep seated the deafness is, its cures are permanent. Test your hearing with a watch. If you do not hear it five feet away, you are deaf. Write me giving age, sex, cause, how long deaf, if you have Catarrh, Rheumatism or Nervous trouble, and if you hear better in noisy places, and all particulars bearing on your case, and I will give you my truthful opinion as to whether your case is curable or not. I give an absolutely scientific opinion with a full explanation of your case and a Booklet on Deafness and Head Noises free without charge. The advice contained in this book has been the means of saving the hearing of hundreds of people. Write today to the discoverer, Guy Clifford Powell, M. D., 588 Bank Bldg., Peoria, Ill., for free information including his valuable free book.

2000 Pairs of $3.00 Curtains $1.50

Some folks will say that they would not think of putting lace curtains in their homes that cost so little as $1.50 per pair. As a matter of fact, however, these rich draperies which would sell regularly at $3, are just as pretty and effective as though you went to a furniture store and paid $5. Of course we don't mean to say that you should compare them with curtains that sell at $20 to $50 the pair—of course not. But we do say that they are nice enough to grace any home and every housekeeper who is fortunate enough to get some of these curtains will treasure them as one of the best bargains ever bought. Mind you, they measure from 50 to 60 inches wide and 3½ yards long, and there are over fifty patterns to select from in white, ecru or Arabian. January Clearance Sale just half price of $1.50 per pair.

PERSONAL—HAVE YOUR HANDS HONestly read and the many future events of your life accurately prognosticated by the celebrated, skillful SCIENTIFIC PALMIST, acknowledged by hundreds of the best intellects—his patrons—as the finest and most remarkable reader of hands in this country, and pronounced superior to Cheiro.

PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE,

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S readings, which are thorough and scientific, have nothing in common whatever with the fictitious readings of illiterate humbug palmists, psychics, fortune tellers, etc., who scarcely know one line or mount from the other. A satisfactory reading can only be had from one who has thoroughly mastered the laws of this science through years of critical study of planetary influences on the lines of the hand, combined with large experience, trained judgment, etc. All kinds of diseases accurately diagnosed. Careful advice given in domestic, love affairs, etc., also of financial success or failure, changes, deaths, investments, vocation in life, and many other important things you should know.

PROF. ALTHOUSE stands at the very head of his profession, having positively read—FROM LIFE—all those claimed to have been read by him—i.e. more celebrated people than any other palmist in this country; he does not deceive the public in this respect. PALMISTRY AND ASTROLOGY, TOO, LIKE OTHER LEGITIMATE PROFESSIONS, ARE NOT ADVERTISED IN ANY SENSATIONAL MANNER BY GENUINE READERS. THE TRUE READER HOLDS HIS PROFESSION AS SACRED AS THAT OF YOUR FAMILY PHYSICIAN. E. H. Sothern says: "I find your reading coincides with Cheiro's." Paul Gilmore, actor, says: "I want to express to you my keen appreciation of your reading; it is by far the most scientific I have ever had." Juliet Crosby, actress, says: "Prof. Althouse has given me a most helpful, complete and satisfactory reading." Tod Sloan (famous jocky) formerly read by Cheiro, says: "Your reading is the most complete I have ever had, and can say for your work that it is wonderful." Also read hands of Admiral Schley, Senator Clark, Gen. Chaffee, Louis James, Mrs. James, Baron Rothschild, Huntington, Ysaye, Joaquin Miller, Sousa, Innes, Chiffarelli, Creatore, Susan B. Anthony, Modjeska, Julia Marlowe, Caruso, Sembrich, Gadski, Warde, Kidder, Jefferson, Edison, Nat Goodwin, Maxine Elliott and hundreds of others.

Intelligent, high-class patronage solicited—those capable of appreciating the superior qualities of a fine reader. ALL READINGS ARE STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL.

ASTROLOGY AND THE HOROSCOPE.

PROF. ALTHOUSE has also given many years of critical study to, and is an experienced practioner in, the science of MODERN ASTROLOGY—the casting of horoscopes, etc. THE HOROSCOPE is decidedly a guide in life, showing remarkable things when PROPERLY CAST. Scientific predictions—on all questions of life—by this science, as calculated through the trained judgment of Prof. Althouse—WILL STAGGER THE SENSES.

PROF. ALTHOUSE, in his large and successful practice, has acquired a varied experience of his fellow men in life. HIS WONDERFUL PROFICIENCY IN HAND READING AND CASTING OF HOROSCOPES enables him to see for the future, both the good and evil. The most private confidences are reposed in him, and his advice is sought in the most difficult and critical circumstances. Daily and evenings. Sunday 11 to 3. STUDIO PARLORS, 245½ S. SPRING ST. 14

OTHERS COME AND GO, BUT VAN CORTLAND ALWAYS REMAINS.

IF YOU ARE GOING TO SEE A PSYCHIC, WHY NOT SEE THE BEST?

AS THE BEST IS ALWAYS THE CHEAPEST IN THE END. BETTER CONSULT NO PSYCHIC AT ALL THAN ONE WHO IS UNABLE TO HELP YOU, AS FALSE PROPHETS DO MORE HARM THAN GOOD AS THEY LEAVE YOU IN A WORSE CONDITION THAN BEFORE BY THEIR FALSE ADVICE, BASED UPON GUESSES; BUT VAN CORTLAND HAS AN ESTABLISHED REPUTATION; TESTIMONIALS AND CREDENTIALS FROM THOUSANDS OF YOUR OWN CITIZENS AND FRIENDS.

Van Cortland has made a life study of his work and is prepared to advise and assist you, no matter what your troubles are; in his capacity there is no guesswork; every procedure is definite and exact and the result is certain.

If you have already made a mistake, thrown away your money and lost confidence through dealing with much-advertised and self-styled palmists and psychics and their cheap claptrap methods, start from the beginning and consult Van Cortland. He will tell you frankly your condition and what you may expect; if nothing can be done for you he will not take one cent of your money. Has not this honesty on the face of it?

During the last ten months I have brought around through this wonderful power of personal control 721 marriages, 142 separations, without any after trouble, came by the mutual consent of opposing parties; located 16 buried treasures, located 19 wills and 11 deeds; success in gaining 810 pensions; reunited 118 separated; have helped 182 investors; there have been 714 cases of such private nature I do not feel like classifying; in fact, it suffices to only say there is no heart so sad or wish too great that your hopes cannot be speedily realized by the force of this wonderful power.

A SECRET YOU SHOULD KNOW.

THE POWER OF CONTROL—HOW TO BE MASTER AND RULER OF YOUR OWN HOME AND AFFAIRS. IS YOUR HUSBAND, WIFE OR SWEETHEART INDIFFERENT TO YOU? ARE YOU OCCUPYING THE POSITION IN LIFE YOU ARE ABLY QUALIFIED FOR? DO YOU WISH TO POSSESS THE KEY TO THE VAULTS OF LOVE FRIENDSHIP, SUCCESS AND FAME? KNOW THE SECRET OF CONTROL—THE POWER TO INSPIRE SUCCESS IN BUSINESS, SOCIAL OR FINANCIAL LIFE? "ARISE, THROW OFF THY SHACKLES." EXCHANGE SORROW FOR JOY, DARKNESS FOR LIGHT. "BE MASTER OF YOUR OWN DESTINY."

Van Cortland is the only medium in this city who has appeared before the London Psychic Research Society, as well as Boston and Detroit.

How to Overcome All Troubles.

Your past, your present life and your entire future and everything can be told by consulting Van Cortland, the world-eminent psychic and spirit medium, who is the greatest master of occult science and psychic force the world has ever known.

His predictions are always correct and never fail to come true, as thousands of people will testify.

Does everything seem to go wrong and has fortune ever smiled on you? Has your life been full of "ups and downs?" Do not despair, as you can learn the true road to success and happiness, for both await you if you will only know how, when and where to find them, which will be revealed to you. You will also be told how to have your wants and wishes satisfied. How to obtain your object in life or your heart's desire.

How to live happy and contented the rest of your life and be fortunate. How to obtain the money you want and what you are best adapted for. Tells what you have done, what you are doing now and what you are going to do. All told without asking a single question.

MRS. MASSON,
the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 322 S. SPRING ST. (Suite 17.)
by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND RELIABLE HAND-READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

Mrs. Masson's knowledge of palmistry is founded upon SCIENTIFIC PRINCIPLES, aided by years of EARNEST STUDY and PATIENT PERSONAL INVESTIGATION. Her statements do not consist of vague generalities, which tell you nothing, but are EXACT, PRACTICAL AND TO THE POINT—give PAST as well as FUTURE events, and cannot fail to be of the greatest benefit to you.

They will assist you in the struggle for recognition by teaching you your possibilities and limitations; save you years of fruitless struggles in the wrong vocation by pointing out the line of work you are best fitted for and LEAD YOU TO WEALTH THROUGH INFORMATION AS TO INVESTMENTS AND ENTERPRISES QUITE UNOBTAINABLE THROUGH OTHER SOURCES.

Changes of business, losses and gains, lawsuits, deaths, marriages, separations, and in fact, all that life holds for you is plainly written in your hand; it is simply a question of correct interpretation.

(Mrs. Masson's methods of hand-reading do not require that the names of her patrons shall be disclosed, nor does she seek to discover the identity of her clients; they may, therefore, rest assured that no publicity whatever attends upon her readings and that their confidence will be maintained inviolate.)

PROFESSOR SHELDON,
THE WORLD'S GREAT PSYCHIC.

As the sea is deeper than the brooklet, so is the minds of some persons deeper than the minds of others. As the peaceful calm succeeds the storm, so does the gentle nature of one individual compare with the brusk, unsympathetic disposition of another. It is the peaceful calm, however, that wins the human heart, and the gentle nature that permanently succeeds in life.

Prof. Sheldon, the man who so wonderfully portrays the future of humankind, is of the class that wins the affectionate regard of all with whom he comes into communion. His kindly nature loving to do that which is good for those enthralled in the meshes of desolation or despair.

Every day, almost, manifestations of the man's goodness came to the knowledge of those who follow him in his course of life's eventful journey. Once he is known, the troubled heart clings to the mother for whom it knows no other thought but love. And without the least particle of hesitation Prof. Sheldon feels the pangs of agony that disturbs the one who has come to him for consultation. And as readily as one may read a book does this supremely wonderful psychic perceive the future of the one who sits before him. Time to him is but a thought. He reads its lines as if it were the news of the morning. It contains no secrets hidden from his vision, no mysteries he cannot divine.

Are you in trouble? He can point you the way to the clear skies beyond the gloom that overshadows you.

Has a trusted friend proven false? Prof. Sheldon will tell you why and how to reclaim the friendship that has been lost.

Has your husband or wife grown cold? This talented man will reveal the cause of that coldness.

Has deception been practiced upon you? Prof. Sheldon will tell you if it has.

In fact, his powers are so illimitable that his counsels will unite the separated, bring tranquility and peaceful order out of unhappy chaos, and plant the seeds of joy where there was not joy before.

Indeed, he is a star in the diadem of his profession. Few have achieved the renown that he has earned, or acquired the distinction than has been awarded him. In the circle in which he moves his station is as lofty as the snow-capped mountains which tower above the hillocks nestling at their feet; yet the sunbeam of gentility mantles his every act, and when he has removed the veil of mystery from some beclouded life, he makes no more of the blessing conferred upon his visitor than if the act were of the most ordinary everyday affair. He takes the great gift he has locked in his breast as really commonplace, indeed, notwithstanding that his unparalleled powers are a grace that is priceless and that if possible to sell would make him rich as Croesus of the delightfully fabled past.

Such is Prof. Sheldon, one of the most celebrated psychics within the present purvey of human knowledge. He is gracious in his demeanor, honest in his every act or expression, sympathetic by nature and pure in his motives as the dewdrops upon the petals of the springtime buds. He leaves rejoicings in his wake, if such may be had at all, but he will speak the truth even if a tear should be the result.

Callers will find him a person of almost supernatural powers. He will surprise all who consult him on any subject that may interest the life of busy man or anxious woman. He is the phenomenal wonder of his day.

I do hereby solemnly agree and guarantee to make no charge if I fail to call you by name in full, names of your friends, enemies or rivals. I promise to tell you whether your husband, wife or sweetheart is true or false; tell you how to gain the love of the one you most desire, even though miles away; how to succeed in business, speculation, lawsuits; how to marry the one of your choice; how to regain youth, health and vitality. Locates treasures, cures all nervous diseases.

Others may come and others may go, but Prof. Sheldon always remains.

He has been a native of California for the last eighteen years, and is legally ordained to one of the oldest Spiritualist societies in the world.

My only reason for calling you by name and what you call for, I do this incidentally as a chain to read by.

Make no change in business, do not buy or sell a rooming-house, do not buy mining stock, do not buy a lot, a farm, a ranch, or make a lease without first seeing Sheldon. He will advise you to your advantage; asks no questions.

REMEMBER—ALL THIS WEEK MY $5.00 READING FOR $1.00.

My practice and professional reputation are built upon "honor," reasonable charges, fair dealings, faithful service and speedy success; for my clients have won for me the largest practice in the State of California. My superior knowledge and power give me advantages which warrant me in guaranteeing safer, surer and more rapid results than can be obtained elsewhere.

I teach the science.

One dollar pays for all this week.

MARGARET GRAHAM,
MARGARET GRAHAM,

THE SUCCESSFUL PSYCHIC.
THE SUCCESSFUL PSYCHIC.

America's leading exponent of the practical side of psychic phenomena. You cannot afford to be without this wonderful woman's counsel.

SHE TELLS YOU THE THINGS YOU MUST KNOW IN ORDER TO BE HAPPY AND SUCCESSFUL.

This year of 1906 may be the most important year of your existence; yet without Margaret Graham's aid you are powerless to take, with knowledge and foresight, the steps which will help you to win the things that mean most to you.

A SUCCESSFUL PSYCHIC.

Margaret Graham's name has long been associated with the greatest of psychic phenomena. She tells her clients things which could not possibly come to her through ordinary human powers, and which can only be explained on the theory that she is endowed with powers that border on the supernatural, and but which are purely the result of natural laws.

MARGARET GRAHAM IS PRACTICAL.

Those who are most familiar with her marvelous work are most deeply impressed by the fact that Margaret Graham makes a practical, helpful use of her powers; in wresting from the future its deepest secrets she throws light on that which will make men and women happier and better.

A TOWER OF STRENGTH.

If men or women are in trouble, if they do not know which way to turn, if they are threatened by unseen dangers which they cannot guard against, if they are subject to baleful influences, if their domestic life is unhappy, if they are uncertain as to the wisdom of certain business ventures, if they are in doubt as to whether trusted friends or agents are faithful to their trusts, if they are undecided whether to take a contemplated journey, if they wish to receive messages from loved ones,

MARGARET GRAHAM KNOWS

and will tell them honestly and truthfully things that will help them most. There can be no manner of doubt but that because of the beneficent influence Margaret Graham has exercised through her wonderful powers. The very best, the most intelligent people in Los Angeles consult Margaret Graham regularly, and she has a large number of clients in other cities who either come to Los Angeles for no other purpose than to consult her, or are given readings through the mails.

THE WORLD IS BETTER

DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANCE.

Nobody can consult Margaret Graham without being convinced of the truth of every claim made for her. She works through natural laws, and her psychic strength is developed along perfectly natural lines. She makes no claims to the supernatural.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

For the special benefit of those who live at a distance, Margaret Graham will give readings by mail. She can do this with success because distance offers no barrier to her powers. Fees, sketch readings by mail, $1; full life reading, $5. Send stamp and give date of birth with remittance.

FEES REASONABLE.

THE FEES CHARGED BY MARGARET GRAHAM ARE EXCEEDINGLY REASONABLE AND WITHIN THE REACH OF ALL.

PERSONAL—

Business.

PERSONAL—HAVE YOUR HANDS HONestly read and the many future events of your life accurately prognosticated by the celebrated, skillful SCIENTIFIC PALMIST, PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE, acknowledged by hundreds of the best intellects—his patrons—as the finest and most remarkable reader of hands in this country, and pronounced superior to Cheiro.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S readings, which are thorough and scientific, have nothing in common whatever with the fictitious readings of illiterate humbug palmists, psychics, fortune tellers, etc., who scarcely know one line or mount from the other. A satisfactory reading can only be had from one who has thoroughly mastered the laws of this science through years of critical study of planetary influences on the lines of the hand, combined with large experience, trained judgment, etc. All kinds of diseases accurately diagnosed. Careful advice given in domestic, love affairs, etc., also of financial success or failure, changes, deaths, investments, vocation in life, and many other important things you should know.

PROF. ALTHOUSE stands at the very head of his profession, having positively read—FROM LIFE—all those claimed to have been read by him—i.e. more celebrated people than any other palmist in this country; he does not deceive the public in this respect. PALMISTRY AND ASTROLOGY, TOO, LIKE OTHER LEGITIMATE PROFESSIONS, ARE NOT ADVERTISED IN ANY SENSATIONAL MANNER BY GENUINE READERS. THE TRUE READER HOLDS HIS PROFESSION AS SACRED AS THAT OF YOUR FAMILY PHYSICIAN. E. H. Sothern says: "I find your reading coincides with Cheiro's." Paul Gilmore, actor, says: "I want to express to you my keen appreciation of your reading; it is by far the most scientific I have ever had." Juliet Crosby, actress, says: "Prof. Althouse has given me a most helpful, complete and satisfactory reading." Tod Sloan (famous jocky) formerly read by Cheiro, says: "Your reading is the most complete I have ever had, and can say for your work that it is wonderful." OTHERS COME AND GO, BUT VAN CORTLAND ALWAYS REMAINS.

IF YOU ARE GOING TO SEE A PSYCHIC, WHY NOT SEE THE BEST?

AS THE BEST IS ALWAYS THE CHEAPEST IN THE END. BETTER CONSULT NO PSYCHIC AT ALL THAN ONE WHO IS UNABLE TO HELP YOU, AS FALSE PROPHETS DO MORE HARM THAN GOOD AS THEY LEAVE YOU IN A WORSE CONDITION THAN BEFORE BY THEIR FALSE ADVICE, BASED UPON GUESSES; BUT VAN CORTLAND HAS AN ESTABLISHED REPUTATION; TESTIMONIALS AND CREDENTIALS FROM THOUSANDS OF YOUR OWN CITIZENS AND FRIENDS.

Van Cortland has made a life study of his work and is prepared to advise and assist you, no matter what your troubles are; in his capacity there is no guesswork; every procedure is definite and exact and the result is certain.

If you have already made a mistake, thrown away your money and lost confidence through dealing with much-advertised and self-styled palmists and psychics and their cheap claptrap methods, start from the beginning and consult Van Cortland. He will tell you frankly your condition and what you may expect; if nothing can be done for you he will not take one cent of your money. Has not this honesty on the face of it?

During the last ten months I have brought around through this wonderful power of personal control 721 marriages, 142 separations, without any after trouble, came by the mutual consent of opposing parties; located 16 buried treasures, located 19 wills and 11 deeds; success in gaining 810 pensions; reunited 118 separated; have helped 182 investors; there have been 714 cases of such private nature I do not feel like classifying; in fact, it suffices to only say there is no heart so sad or wish too great that your hopes cannot be speedily realized by the force of this wonderful power.

A SECRET YOU SHOULD KNOW.
THE POWER OF CONTROL—HOW TO BE MASTER AND RULER OF YOUR OWN HOME AND AFFAIRS. IS YOUR HUSBAND, WIFE OR SWEETHEART INDIFFERENT TO YOU? ARE YOU OCCUPYING THE POSITION IN LIFE YOU ARE ABLY QUALIFIED FOR? DO YOU WISH TO POSSESS THE KEY TO THE VAULTS OF LOVE FRIENDSHIP, SUCCESS AND FAME? KNOW THE SECRET OF CONTROL—THE POWER TO INSPIRE SUCCESS IN BUSINESS, SOCIAL OR FINANCIAL LIFE? "ARISE, THROW OFF THY SHACKLES." EXCHANGE SORROW FOR JOY, DARKNESS FOR LIGHT. "BE MASTER OF YOUR OWN DESTINY."

Van Cortland is the only medium in this city who has appeared before the London Psychic Research Society, as well as Boston and Detroit.

How to Overcome All Troubles.

Your past, your present life and your entire future and everything can be told by consulting Van Cortland, the world-eminent psychic and spirit medium, who is the greatest master of occult science and psychic force the world has ever known.

His predictions are always correct and never fail to come true, as thousands of people will testify.

Does everything seem to go wrong and has fortune ever smiled on you? Has your life been full of "ups and downs?" Do not despair, as you can learn the true road to success and happiness, for both await you if you will only know how, when and where to find them, which will be revealed to you. You will also be told how to have your wants and wishes satisfied. How to obtain your object in life or your heart's desire.

How to live happy and contented the rest of your life and be fortunate. How to obtain the money you want and what you are best adapted for. Tells what you have done, what you are doing now and what you are going to do. All told without asking a single question.

MRS. MASSON,
the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 322 S. SPRING ST. (Suite 17.)
by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND RELIABLE HAND-READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

Mrs. Masson's knowledge of palmistry is founded upon SCIENTIFIC PRINCIPLES, aided by years of EARNEST STUDY and PATIENT PERSONAL INVESTIGATION. Her statements do not consist of vague generalities, which tell you nothing, but are EXACT, PRACTICAL AND TO THE POINT—give PAST as well as FUTURE events, and cannot fail to be of the greatest benefit to you.

They will assist you in the struggle for recognition by teaching you your possibilities and limitations; save you years of fruitless struggles in the wrong vocation by pointing out the line of work you are best fitted for and LEAD YOU TO WEALTH THROUGH INFORMATION AS TO INVESTMENTS AND ENTERPRISES QUITE UNOBTAINABLE THROUGH OTHER SOURCES.

Changes of business, losses and gains, lawsuits, deaths, marriages, separations, and in fact, all that life holds for you is plainly written in your hand; it is simply a question of correct interpretation.

(Mrs. Masson's methods of hand-reading do not require that the names of her patrons shall be disclosed, nor does she seek to discover the identity of her clients; they may, therefore, rest assured that no publicity whatever attends upon her readings and that their confidence will be maintained inviolate.)

PROFESSOR SHELDON,
THE WORLD'S GREAT PSYCHIC.

As the sea is deeper than the brooklet, so is the minds of some persons deeper than the minds of others. As the peaceful calm succeeds the storm, so does the gentle nature of one individual compare with the brusk, unsympathetic disposition of another. It is the peaceful calm, however, that wins the human heart, and the gentle nature that permanently succeeds in life.

Prof. Sheldon, the man who so wonderfully portrays the future of humankind, is of the class that wins the affectionate regard of all with whom he comes into communion. His kindly nature loving to do that which is good for those enthralled in the meshes of desolation or despair.

Every day, almost, manifestations of the man's goodness came to the knowledge of those who follow him in his course of life's eventful journey. Once he is known, the troubled heart clings to the mother for whom it knows no other thought but love. And without the least particle of hesitation, Prof. Sheldon feels the pangs of agony that disturbs the one who has come to him for consultation. And as readily as one may read a book does this supremely wonderful psychic perceive the future of the one who sits before him. Time to him is but a thought. He reads its lines as if it were the news of the morning. It contains no secrets hidden from his vision, no mysteries he cannot divine.

Are you in trouble? He can point you the way to the clear skies beyond the gloom that overshadows you.

Has a trusted friend proven false? Prof. Sheldon will tell you why and how to reclaim the friendship that has been lost.

Has your husband or wife grown cold? This talented man will reveal the cause of that coldness.

Has deception been practiced upon you? Prof. Sheldon will tell you if it has.

In fact, his powers are so illimitable that his counsels will unite the separated, bring tranquility and peaceful order out of unhappy chaos, and plant the seeds of joy where there was not joy before.

Indeed, he is a star in the diadem of his profession. Few have achieved the renown that he has earned, or acquired the distinction than has been awarded him. In the circle in which he moves his station is as lofty as the snow-capped mountains which tower above the hillocks nestling at their feet; yet the sunbeam of gentility mantles his every act, and when he has removed the veil of mystery from some beclouded life, he makes no more of the blessing conferred upon his visitor than if the act were of the most ordinary everyday affair. He takes the great gift he has locked in his breast as really commonplace, indeed notwithstanding that his unparallelled powers are a grace that is priceless and that if possible to sell would make him rich as Croesus of the delightfully fabled past.

Such is Prof. Sheldon, one of the most celebrated psychics within the present purvey of human knowledge. He is gracious in his demeanor, honest in his every act or expression, sympathetic by nature and pure in his motives as the dewdrops upon the petals of the springtime buds. He leaves rejoicings in his wake, if such may be had at all, but he will speak the truth even if a tear should be the result.

Callers will find him a person of almost supernatural powers. He will surprise all who consult him on any subject that may interest the life of busy man or anxious woman. He is the phenomenal wonder of his day.

I do hereby solemnly agree and guarantee to make no charge if I fail to call you by name in full, names of your friends, enemies or rivals. I promise to tell you whether your husband, wife or sweetheart is true or false; tell you how to gain the love of the one you most desire, even though miles away; how to succeed in business, speculation, lawsuits; how to marry the one of your choice; how to regain youth, health and vitality. Locates treasures, cures all nervous diseases.

Others may come and others may go, but Prof. Sheldon always remains.

He has been a native of California for the last eighteen years, and is legally ordained to one of the oldest Spiritualist societies in the world.

My only reason for calling you by name and what you call for, I do this incidentally as a chain to read by.

Make no change in business, do not buy or sell a rooming-house, do not buy mining stock, do not buy a lot, a farm, a ranch, or make a lease without first seeing Sheldon. He will advise you to your advantage; asks no questions.

REMEMBER—ALL THIS WEEK MY $5.00 READING FOR $1.00.

My practice and professional reputation are built upon "honor," reasonable charges, fair dealings, faithful service and speedy success; for my clients have won for me the largest practice in the State of California. My superior knowledge and power give me advantages which warrant me in guaranteeing safer, surer and more rapid results than can be obtained elsewhere.

I teach the science.
One dollar pays for all this week.

DO NOT MAKE AN IMPORTANT MOVE WITHOUT CONSULTING
MARGARET GRAHAM,
MARGARET GRAHAM,
THE SUCCESSFUL PSYCHIC.
THE SUCCESSFUL PSYCHIC.

America's leading exponent of the practical side of psychic phenomena. You cannot afford to be without this wonderful woman's counsel.

SHE TELLS YOU THE THINGS YOU MUST KNOW IN ORDER TO BE HAPPY AND SUCCESSFUL.

This year of 1906 may be the most important year of your existence; yet without Margaret Graham's aid you are powerless to take, with knowledge and foresight, the steps which will help you to win the things that mean most to you.

A SUCCESSFUL PSYCHIC.

Margaret Graham's name has long been associated with the greatest of psychic phenomena. She tells her clients things which could not possibly come to her through ordinary human powers, and which can only be explained on the theory that she is endowed with powers that border on the supernatural, and but which are purely the result of natural laws.

MARGARET GRAHAM IS PRACTICAL.

Those who are most familiar with her marvelous work are most deeply impressed by the fact that Margaret Graham makes a practical, helpful use of her powers; in wresting from the future its deepest secrets she throws light on that which will make men and women happier and better.

A TOWER OF STRENGTH.

If men or women are in trouble, if they do not know which way to turn, if they are threatened by unseen dangers which they cannot guard against, if they are subject to baleful influences, if their domestic life is unhappy, if they are uncertain as to the wisdom of certain business ventures, if they are in doubt as to whether trusted friends or agents are faithful to their trusts, if they are undecided whether to take a contemplated journey, if they wish to receive messages from loved ones,

MARGARET GRAHAM KNOWS

and will tell them honestly and truthfully things that will help them most. There can be no manner of doubt but that because of the beneficent influence Margaret Graham has exercised through her wonderful powers. The very best, the most intelligent people in Los Angeles consult Margaret Graham regularly, and she has a large number of clients in other cities who either come to Los Angeles for no other purpose than to consult her, or are given readings through the mails.

THE WORLD IS BETTER

DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANCE.

Nobody can consult Margaret Graham without being convinced of the truth of every claim made for her. She works through natural laws, and her psychic strength is developed along perfectly natural lines. She makes no claims to the supernatural.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

For the special benefit of those who live at a distance, Margaret Graham will give readings by mail. She can do this with success because distance offers no barrier to her powers. Fees, sketch readings by mail, $1; full life reading, $5. Send stamp and give date of birth with remittance.

FEES REASONABLE.

THE FEES CHARGED BY MARGARET GRAHAM ARE EXCEEDINGLY REASONABLE AND WITHIN THE REACH OF ALL.

Hours, Sunday, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Daily, 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.

"Opportunity, Master of Human Destinies, Am I."

My office might be called a "clearing house for business opportunities." I have desirable propositions of all kinds—almost everything in the realm of business. Before listing a business I take particular pains to investigate its intrinsic merit. You will find below a number of very select propositions—but if you don't find what you want in this column, don't hesitate to come to my office for I have scores of other propositions just as good as those listed below.

$3200—APARTMENT HOUSE containing 63 rooms, arranged in two and three room suites; centrally located; income $285 per month above the rent; one suite is reserved for landlady; three years' lease; will sell for part cash and the balance at the very lowst rate of interest. This is one of the biggest snaps we have offered this season. Get acquainted with this proposition, solid value here.

$1200—40 ROOM APARTMENT HOUSE; one-half of the rooms are furnished; five years' lease at $125 per month; just the place to put in your own furniture, resell and double your money. Chance of the season. Come to my office and get the inside details.

$4000—GENERAL STORE in a good sized town, just 60 minutes from the city; net profit runs about $300 per month; this is absolutely a gilt-edge proposition and has been established about 7 years; owner has the very best reasons for selling; will take $1000 worth of real estate and balance cash. I will be glad to give you full particulars.

$15,000—CATERING BUSINESS. This is one of the finest of its kind in the city; we have watched its progress for a number of years. It is clearing $4000 per annum and under good management can be made to clear at least $5000. Three years' lease with lowest rent on the street. If this is in your line of business do not fail to see us. This is a dividend earner that will surprise you.

$3500—GROCERY AND MEAT MARKET: here's an excellent chance for a practical man; long lease; rent is low; doing business of $100 per day at present; capable of much greater development. Owner wishes to engage in different line of business.

$2000—MANUFACTURING BUSINESS. This amount of money will give you a working interest with a splendid manufacturing concern. This esttablishment is the only one of its kind on the entire coast with one exception. I am sure than I can convince you that you can at least double your investment in this proposition in one year.

$475—CIGAR STORE; two years' lease; rent $35 per month; sales $15 to $20 per day. Owner has other business or would not sell at this price.

$425—FURNISHED HOUSE of nine rooms, suitable for boarding house; close in and cheap rent. One half cash; balance on easy terms.

MY MAGAZINE, "INVESTING FOR PROFIT" (which I'll send free,) is worth $10 a copy to any man who intends to invest any money, however, small; who has money invested unprofitably, or who can save $5 or more per month, but who hasn't learned the art of investing for profit.

It demonstrates the REAL earning power of money—the knowledge financiers and bankers hide from the masses.

It shows how to invest small sums and how to make them grow into fortunes—the actual possibilities of intelligent investments.

I HAVE JUST RETURNED FROM GOLDfield and Tonopah with opinions on several sets of mining claims. One of a set of five claims, with incline shaft 60 feet deep in body of porphery 60 feet wide; shows values in free-milling ore from over 29 assays of from $10 to $160 per ton. These claims are in Quartz Mountain (near the Montgomery Shoshone. The Montgomery Shoshone is capitalized at one million dollars and the stock is now $3 per share, giving the mine a value of three million dollars.) The option gives the right to purchase at not after development work. We want to raise money for expenses and development work. SOLDIERS' HOME.

JOLLY TARS DO SURRENDER.

SOLDIERS' HOME, Jan. 13.—The installation of officers of Hopkins Squadron, No. 11, Naval Veterans, in Assembly Tall, Thursday evening, was attended by a surprise and attack for which the battle-scarred "old salts" were not prepared.

The gavel for dismissal had just come down on the Commander's capstan, when, from fore-an'-aft, larboard and starboard, came the onslaught, and, before the Commander could issue an order to "repel boarders," a female force invaded the deck. The jolly tars at once surrendered. Each member of the attacking party was armed with a formidable package of edibles, constituting a collation in the demolition of which the squadron courageously participated.

Encampment No. 138, Union Veteran Legion of this place, conformed with its Ladies' Auxiliary of Los Angeles, in installation ceremonies on Friday evening in Assembly Hall. At the close of the regular exercises, there was presented a programme of music and recitations.

All lots, including corners, one price, $90 per lot—no more, no less. You know what you have to pay, $90 per lot—none higher. And in addition to the above three electric lines now running to Redondo great Santa Fe steam railroad. Redondo is permanent, and has just begun to grow. Then again, successful men, we notice that the following have bought to the north of Redondo: Mr. Edwin Chambers, the far-sighted freight agent of the Santa Fe; Mr. Geo. H. Peck, the successful banker of San Pedro; Mr. John J. Byrne, the capable general agent of the Santa Fe; and Dan Murphy, the millionaire oil operator of Los Angeles. A word to the wise is sufficient.

If you should die at any time before payments have been completed, we will give to your heirs a deed of the lot without further cost. If you should lose employment or be sick, you will not forfeit the land, but as each written certificate of sickness or non-employment is received monthly, your time for payments will be extended another month.

We leave it to each purchaser to build a pretty looking house, which must be neatly painted, as we know that for a moderate sum one can now build a very pretty bungalow. Lumber is cheaper at Redondo than at Los Angeles, as there are three commercial wharves at Redondo, at which lumber schooners are daily discharging their cargoes.

APPRECIATIONS OF "MIDWINTER."

EXPRESSIONS OF COMMENDATION FROM ITS ADMIRERS.

"Greatest Accomplishment Ever Achieved in Records of Daily Journalism," Writes Prominent Advertising Man—San Pedro Chamber of Commerce is Pleased.

That the Midwinter Number of The Times, still going forth in a constant stream from the presses, has struck a responsive chord in the breasts of the reading public, is indicated by the words of commendation that continue to reach the publishers from appreciative individuals and from the press. Herewith are recent expressions of opinion:

"Greatest Accomplishment."

Robert N. Shaw, chairman of The Shaw-Torrey Company, magazine, newspaper and general advertising, Grand Rapids, Mich:

"I have just finished the wings and the hash and the turkey bones of the great New Year's feast served up by the skill and the enterprise of the chef's staff down in The Times kitchen and I want to say it is the greatest accomplishment ever achieved in the records of American daily journalism.

"I wish that every advertising agent and every advertiser might absorb this record of editorial and business highwater in making a public spirited newspaper, and that every American man and woman might read its "Prosperous New Year" message of Southern California—but hold on, there wouldn't be enough building lots between here and Pacific Beach to hold them. Wait 'till I start a new subdivision. At any rate I trust the many brilliant editors of this country struggling for a practical education in the making of a progressive modern newspaper will with thoughtful concentration miss never a line, and will with disregard for their jealous tendencies send to their composing room fresh from their sparkling pens the words of approbation and freest praise they well know is demanded, for their weighty editorial columns.

"I congratulate you, sir, on this tremendous success.

"And, now, I should like to do my little part in sending out this good work to some of, I hope, our future inhabitants. Will you kindly have copies of the Midwinter edition mailed to the addresses enclosed herewith and bill the service of the same to me."

W. H. Hyatt, secretary San Pedro Chamber of Commerce, by order of committee):

"The members of the Chamber of Commerce of San Pedro wish to extend to you their thanks for and approval of the matter concerning San Pedro contained in the midwinter issue of The Times, and to assure you of their thorough interest in the great newspaper which you publish.

"The Times is, and ever has been, a power for good in the upbuilding of Southern California, and this community extends to you a hearty greeting for the New Year, and hopes for your continued prosperity."

"Most Complete of Any."

[Visalia Delta.]

The Midwinter Edition of the Los Angeles Times is one of the most complete of any of the newspaper annuals yet issued. It is, of course, devoted mainly to an exploitation of the beauty and productiveness of the southern part of the State. A very graphic and accurate description of Mexico is given and an exceedingly liberal amount of space is allotted to the counties of Tulare, Kings, Kern and Fresno. The article referring to Tulare county is particularly interesting, and shows the high appreciation the people of Southern California have for this favored section, a fact which is further evidenced by the large number of investors and home seekers that are arriving here daily.

"Remarkable Issue."

[Sacramento Bee.]

The astonishing growth of Los Angeles and the development of Southern California are strikingly exhibited in the annual Midwinter Number of The Times of that city. This remarkable issue consists of 240 pages, including the news sheets, and contains a vast amount of interesting information relative to the history, resources and attractions of the southern part of the State. The edition is profusely illustrated. The only fault to be found with it is that there is too much of it for anybody to read, unless willing to devote many hours to the undertaking.

The Times credits the city of Los Angeles with a present population of 200,000. If this be correct, it shows a doubling of the number of inhabitants in five years, the Federal census of 1900 enumerating about 100,000 souls.

"Best in the World."

[Orange Post.]

The Midwinter Number of the Los Angeles Times appeared Monday, January 1. It is simply immense, both in size, range of territory covered and number of subjects treated. It may be that there are people who can spare time to read such editions; but for busy people there is too much and the best that can be done is to read the headlines, look at the pictures and glance through a few of the articles. An Orange county lady, who recently returned from a European tour, reported that she heard a gentleman in Berlin say the Los Angeles Times was the best newspaper in the world. If that is true of its regular editions, it must be equally true of its special editions; but there is danger of getting too much of a good thing.

"Former Efforts Surpassed."

[Downey Champion.]

The annual Midwinter Number of the Los Angeles Times put in its appearance, as usual, on the first of the year, and a welcome visitor it is, showing us from year to year the rapid strides made in this State and elsewhere, and particularly in Southern California, furnishing history that all should be posted on. In short, it is a paper that the management, as well as the people of Los Angeles county, can well feel proud of, as each year the efforts of former years are surpassed, which is saying a great deal. Besides the regular news sheets, this edition contains six magazine sections of thirty-two pages each, all full to overflowing with valuable and interesting reading matter. If you have not secured this special edition do so at once; read it and send it to some eastern friend, and he will ever have a warm spot in his heart for you.

"The Best Ever."

[Covina Argus.]

The Midwinter Number of the Los Angeles Times, issued on Monday, January 1, was the best ever in the long lists of newspaper triumphs of that great sheet. The size, the scope, the beauty of its illustrations; combined with excellence of workmanship and composition, treasure to The Times the place it has held for years, leadership in the journalistic field of the great Southwest.

POVERTY AMID PLENTY.

Pitiful Plight of Charles Howard, Invalid, With Sick Wife and Three Young Children.

No coal in the scuttle, no food in the larder, no carpet on the floor—a gloomy outlook on a rainy, cheerless night, but that is just what a Times reporter found last night at the humble cottage home of C. W. Howard, in the rear of No. 1021 West Sixteenth street, near Oak.

Here is a case of a sick mother, a father too weak to work and three children unable to help themselves.

To awaken the possessors of abundance to help the helpless family of Charles Howard, and help them now, is of supreme moment, and such a cry has never gone unheeded in Los Angeles.

Howard was in such ill health back in his home at Worcester, Mass., that his brave wife, in the hope of saving his life, determined to bring him to California. They disposed of their little all, and with the three children—a boy of 8 years and daughters aged 11 and 4 years—came to the land of promise.

Hard work, both day and night, had sapped the strength of Mrs. Howard, and two weeks ago she was taken down with pneumonia. Last night she lay on her bed with great black circles under her eyes, and talked of the misfortunes that had befallen them, and wept bitterly at the outlook. The elder daughter went away into the dark to hide her own grief.

As soon as his wife fell ill: Howard started out to find something to do. Without a trade and not strong enough for hard labor, he was unsuccessful in finding anything he could do until last week, when he managed to get a job in a livery stable to help care for the horses. Of the income from such work nothing need be said, and yesterday friends and neighbors helped them tide over another day.

Inquiry in the neighborhood led to the information that Howard is a sober, self-respecting man, and while they have gently spurned advances made for their help, the grimness of the situation has finally forced itself upon them.

"Now," said the visitor to Mrs. Howard, "suppose somebody were to appear at your door tomorrow with aid—would you resent it and send them away?"

"No;" she said; "I would receive them with open arms," but she wept bitterly as she made the reply.

Dr. A. J. Berry, who resides at No. 1430 Star street, has been giving Mrs. Howard faithful attention, twice daily, ever since she fell ill. He said last night that she is very ill, indeed, but he hopes for her recovery.

THUG STILL UNDER COVER.

Schmidt, Union Labor Picket Who Assaulted Wall May Have Been Smuggled Out of Town.

Have Gumshoe Hay and Red Fennessy smuggled away John August Schmidt, the labor-union picket wanted for brutally assaulting George Wall?

The police have been searching for Schmidt since last Wednesday, and have been unable to locate him. It is the general belief around town that the Hay-Fennessy crowd shipped him to parts unknown or are keeping him in hiding in this city until they need another job done.

The assault upon Wall shocked the community, but it was, as a matter of fact, but a mild case in comparison with the acts of the union picket in union-ridden and totem-cursed cities.

The people of Los Angeles refuse to be "educated" by the unions to the point where they can believe a brutal and murderous attack upon a hard-working and law-abiding citizen to be a master stroke for the uplifting of the laboring man.

When Wall was so brutally attacked a warrant was immediately sworn out for Schmidt's arrest, and the police have been putting forth their best efforts to jail the ruffian who perpetrated the assault.

Just because he refused to give up his position, leave his employer and join the union strikers, Wall was waylaid as he left the shop where he was working to go to his home, and was struck down by a union thug on the street. The thug who struck him sneaked away, and Schmidt has mysteriously disappeared.

HE CARRIES A CARD.

Contractor Gilmore Proudly Shows It to a Trouble-maker and He Wilts.

Charles Filmore, a carpenter and contractor out in Arroyo Seco, is putting up a little bunch of bungalows on East Avenues 36 and 37.

The other day a walking delegate, attracted by the tuneful sound of the saw and hammer, turned off from Pasadena avenue to see if the job were properly "regulated."

"Are the boys all right?" the delegate asked, as Gilmore came to meet him.

"I guess so." A small smile lurked in the carpenter's eyes.

"Got a card?"

"Business card? Sure."

"No, a union card."

"Oh, yes. Here's my union card. I always have it with me."

From his vest pocket Gilmore took a little book which he opened and held proudly before the eyes of the representative of the Carpenters' Union.

Between the pages of the book lay a tiny silk flag—a miniature of "Old Glory."

The walking trouble-maker wilted.

ASCOT SOUGHT "LUCKY."

Known in Monrovia That Gambling-Track Officials Have Investigated Arcadia.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

MONROVIA, Jan. 13.—It is generally known here that Ascot officials have been making nivestigations with a view to placing the races at Arcadia. Their visits have extended to Monrovia, which is decided upon as the site of the treasury in case of the removal. It was three weeks ago when the trail was hottest, since which time there have been no indications that the movement has gained strength. But it was this project that is said to have given the name of "Lucky" Baldwin when he returned from San Francisco Christmas Day.

Coursing was not given up without a more profitable diversion in view, say people close to Baldwin and his affairs. But it was Ascot that sought Baldwin.

RUSSIA'S FUTURE.

Prof. Ostwald's Forecast Implying Dismemberment.

[Hollis Godfrey, in Boston Transcript:] The evening's talk was over, the work was done and we sat silent for a moment under the shaded lamp as I watched once more the splendid head of the great philosopher chemist. A last thought came and I opened my notebook once more. "Prof. Ostwald, I wish you would do one thing more. Give the Transcript readers your opinion on the conditions in Russia today, and the future as you see it." Again the kindly smile as he answered. "Very well, if you remember that I am giving you nothing but hypotheses—merely theories and beliefs. No man can state certainties concerning Russia today. I believe that the next development may be that of internal wars between different parts of the Russian empire as it exists today. That the domain of the Czar may be divided into a number of independent lands. Some of the first would be Finland, Siberia and the Caucasus. These republics, however, if formed, may form separate republics like themselves and many years will be necessary before we can see any really settled conditions. In all probability only the next conditions in Russia."

natural at this time of shown by past experience, market during the past several weeks has not been by any means so active as it was all through last summer and the fall months. Undoubtedly the holiday conditions had a good deal to do with this. People's minds were more or less absorbed with other things than business, and most of us took a little breathing spell and rest. Of course there was a good deal of buying during the late summer months and early fall months by investors who "loaded up" more or less for the expected spring business that comes year after year. The great rush of new people does not come until after the holidays. These new comers very properly do not rush out the day after their arrival and buy a house and lot or a piece of business property. They prefer to wait, look around carefully, inquire into prices, study values, and select what part of the city they would like to settle in. Buying on the part of the new comers is usually deferred until pretty well in the spring. Indeed, a great many of them wait a whole year before deciding just what

But this is not the only influence which has tended somewhat to check activity just at the present time. The foolish cry of some real estate men, who ought to know better, that there is no limit and can be no limit to the value of Los Angeles real estate, tends continually to check business. It encourages every holder of real estate, improved or unimproved, to hang on, no matter how high prices climb, afraid to let go lest values may rise a little higher after he has sold. Another effect of this inconsiderate booming is to encourage every fellow who is running a peanut stand around one of the city parks to sell his push-cart and put all the money he makes out of it into rent for a real estate office, and rush into business expecting to make a fortune in a year. There are at least 1000 real estate agents now doing business, or rather trying to do business, in real estate in the city of Los Angeles. A score, or at the most fifty, firms or individuals really do nearly all the business transacted, large as it is. No matter how loud the cry may be nor how many join in it, that Los Angeles real estate can never reach the top limit of its value, the statement is not true. The truth is, the value from a speculative point of view has already been reached, and it will be a great deal wiser for those holding unimproved real estate almost anywhere within the limits of the city, who have not money to improve their holdings, to sell at least a part of it.

The interest charge and taxes, the grading and improving of streets incident to carrying property at ruling prices, are likely to more than counterbalance any enhancement in value reasonably likely to take place in the next five years. Let us look dispassionately at this matter. To any unprejudiced mind the supposition is entirely reasonable that within the next five years there will come a time when property will not sell as it is selling now, and when prices are very likely to be shaded below the present average levels. If those who hold more property than they are able to make use of at the present time would sell some of it to those who are able to improve it, and use the money derived from such sales in the improvement of the rest of their holdings, the situation would be a great deal more stable for the present and more hopeful for the future. No interest would be more benefited by such a reasonable policy than that of the real estate agent. There are multitudes of buyers for good property in the city at the present time. They will quickly absorb all the good property offered them at prices on which they can figure out a reasonable interest after it is improved.

We are All Optimists.

Of course, these remarks will raise a mild storm of indignation on the part of agents whose gray matter is not as abundant as it might be. They will cry out that The Times and its real estate reporter are pessimists. That is certainly "to laugh." For twenty-five years The Times has led every influence in Los Angeles in judiciously furthering every interest of the city. It has been highly optimistic as to the future of Los Angeles ever since it was founded. Its real estate reporter has been known here for a full quarter of a century as a boomer among boomers. The paper is as optimistic today as it ever was during the whole course of its existence. It sees a greater future before the city and before all Southern California this year than it ever saw in any of the years that are passed. It believes with all its heart and soul in Los Angeles for the present and for the future. It believes that there is no other spot on the footstool of the Most High to be compared, everything considered, with Southern California. It believes that Los Angeles is one of the most beautiful and prosperous cities in the world today, and that it will continue to become more and more noted for its beauty and great growth in the years to come. It continually points out to the owners of clear, well improved real estate that they hold in their hands the most valuable property at its price in the world. But to own a piece of clear, well improved property, bringing in a net income of from 4 to 10 per cent. per annum is one thing; to own an unimproved lot worth today say $3000 a foot, $150,000 for fifty feet frontage, producing little or no revenue, where the holder is unable to put proper improvements upon the lot, is entirely another thing. The interest on the value of that lot at 5 per cent. comes to $7500 a year. If the assessor has done his duty by it, it is costing him $2250 more to pay his taxes. Unless the rentals amount to about $12,000 a year, he is carrying the property at a loss. Supposing one owns 100 feet of such property. How much wiser it would be to sell half of it to some one able to improve it, and take the $150,000 received for the practically unimproved lot to put proper improvements upon the other fifty feet. He still has property worth $300,000, but instead of having a burden to carry, his improved property will now bring him in, to speak reasonably, something like $20,000 a year income. Which is the best policy to pursue? Which is the sounder view for the real estate man to take, to encourage the sale of half the property and have both halves properly improved, or to tell the owner of the unimproved property: "Hold on, there is no limit to the value of your property. Do not sell any of it."

ALLISON BARLOW'S HOME.

The picture which illuminates this page gives an exterior and interior view of the beautiful home of Allison Barlow, No. 705 West Thirtieth street. The house has been finished but a few months, and is now occupied by its owner. It is a home of ample accommodations for a family intending to live in comfort. It consists of ten rooms, many of them of unusually ample dimensions, a basement, and an attic. The views here presented show, besides the beautiful exterior of the house in which attention evidently has been paid to solidity and the comfort of the inmates rather than to gewgaws, a view of one end of the living room and one showing the hall and part of the library. This hall is 12x26 feet, and the library opening from it is 12x15 feet, practically a single apartment of very great attractiveness. The house is furnished entirely in keeping with the requirements of such a home. It is probable that the house cost to build not less than $12,000, and its furnishings certainly must run close to one-half that sum. It is situated in one of the beautiful and progressive sections of the city of Los Angeles.

HAMMEL & DENKER RANCH.

Plans of the New Owners for a Very High-Grade Suburban Residence District.

Ion L. Clark and L. G. Sarnow, who put through the deal whereby the beautiful Hammel & Denker ranch became the property of a little syndicate of Los Angeles capitalists, furnish interesting details as to the purpose of this purchase. It has been reported that the intention of the new owners was to develop a possible oil deposit under the ranch. This is now positively denied by the agents named above. The rumor probably grew out of the fact that the buyers are heavily interested in oil properties.

The ranch, which contains 3055 acres of land, lies half way between the city of Los Angeles and that of Santa Monica. The junction of the Los Angeles-Pacific Railroad lines lies almost in the center of the property. It stretches from among the low foothills of the Santa Monica Range down a gently sloping mesa to below the old Hammel & Denker ranch house, and then slopes off into an almost level plain that lies but slightly above the sea level. The name of this property from time immemorial has been in Spanish El Rancho Rodeo de Las Aguas, which means "the meeting of the waters." It took this name because of the numerous streams and springs rising in the hills or on the mesa, and running into a common body down in the lower part of the ranch. These low lands are of exceeding fertility, being among the best alfalfa lands in Southern California. The upper levels, of the mesa close to the foot of the mountains, is an exceedingly sightly place. The view to the eastward reaches far beyond the city to the highest, snowcapped points of the Sierra Madre range. Westward it commands a view of the whole coast, sweeping down from Santa Monica along the blue Pacific to Catalina Island, twenty miles from shore, beyond San Pedro and Long Beach.

The new owners of this magnificent property are C. A. Canfield, W. C. Price, Burton E. Green, and W. C. Kerckhoff. Ion Clark and L. G. Sarnow state that they have held an option on the property for nearly a year and a half, and they had worked persistently from that time to this to bring about a transfer of the ranch into the hands of capitalists who would subdivide it and put it on the market as a high class, suburban residence adjunct to the city. The fact that it required nearly $1,250,000 to bring about the change in ownership in the property made the task of negotiating a sale no light one, notwithstanding the acknowledged attractiveness of this piece of land. It is one of the largest sales ever consummated, so far as price goes.

The plan of the new owners, as outlined by the agents who put the deal through, is to subdivide the upper mesa land into lots for high class residences. This is not one of the cheap propositions of those whose purpose it is to lay out all Southern California into fifty-foot lots. The plan is an entirely conservative one. At the junction of the electric railroad lines a townsite will be laid out. Three streets of 100 feet in width at east, will run through this town. They will be an extension of three city streets, namely Sunset boulevard, Wilshire boulevard and Pico street. The lots in this town site will not be fifty-foot propositions. Each will be an acre in area. A town site was laid out here by the late A. H. Denker, one of the owners of the property since pioneer days. It was called Morocco, but the new town will probably bear some other name. To the minds of those of us who have viewed with a good deal of misgiving the subdivision of ranches ten to fifteen miles from the center of Los Angeles, this proposed new town with its full acre lots will appear in the nature of a consolation. There will be a building restriction on the lots in the townsite of $1500. Of course, the owner of one of these lots may expend as much more as he likes on his house; but a $1500 bungalow, or a residence costing any higher price up to many thousands of dollars, set in one of these ample lots and the landscape features properly developed, will indeed make a beautiful home.

It is the intention of those about to develop this property to attempt to induce H. E. Huntington to extend the Pico street line of electric railroad directly out a continuation of that street to this townsite. They also desire to have this road continued to Santa Monica. The three thoroughfares named above will be put right through the ranch, and the Pico street extension joins with a boulevard 130 feet wide, extending through West Gate into Santa Monica. An effort will be made to continue the other two boulevards to the seaside. It is stated that should Mr. Huntington show any reluctance about extending the Pico street line, it is the intention of the syndicate owning the Hammel & Denker ranch, to build such a road on their own account and continue it through this West Gate boulevard to the ocean front, near the old Arcadia Hotel bath-house.

The upper mesa lots in the ranch will be subdivided into plots of from five to ten acres each. These will not be directly for farming purposes. The new owners of the ranch express the intention of selecting each of them one of these plots, on which they will proceed to erect handsome residences for their own use. The building restrictions on the choicest of these ten acre lots will be $5000. While the acre lots in the new town will be put on the market at about $1000 each, these ten acre lots in the choicest portions of the ranch will be held at probably $1500 an acre. The low, damp lands are not to be subdivided, at least not at the present time. They will be put to proper use for farming purposes.

The name of the ranch indicates that there will be no lack of water for any purpose, either on these large, ten acre lots or on the acre lots in the town. An abundance of water is struck almost anywhere on the ranch at from 100 to 150 feet, and it rises to about twenty-five feet of the surface. There is one well now a little east of the town site which, when attached to a pump, will yield an abundance of water for all present needs. As the new town grows and as residences multiply on the ten acre plots up near the foot hills, it will be entirely feasible to sink new wells and provide at all times an abundance of water for every purpose.

The immediate management of the property will be in the hands of W. C. Price for the syndicate which owns it, and the selling agents will be Ion Clark and L. D. Sarnow. Mr. Sarnow is an old time acquaintance of the Hammel and Denker families, and in fact was brought up as a companion of the younger generation of both families.

This projected development is one to commend itself to the minds of those who look rationally upon the certain future growth of Southern California. It will be positively a unique feature of development to see a town grow up, in which all the lots will be an acre in area. The subdivision of the beautiful building sites above into plots of from five to ten acres will insure their development by a class of residents of the very highest grade. A ten acre plot will cost $7500, and a buyer will not be likely to improve it with a building costing less than $10,000 to $15,000.

FOR SALE—

WE HAVE TALKED

a great deal during the past four years about home building, and during that time we have convinced a great many wideawake people that our plan of building houses is just about the proper thing.

NEVERTHELESS

there are a few remaining who have not heard of us and of the thoroughly modern houses that we design and build.

It seems to us that our plan once explained would immediately appeal to you. We build for cash after plans and specifications that you furnish, or better still; if you will come to the office and tell us what you want, the number of rooms, etc., we will guarantee to get you out one of the nicest, neatest and best arranged plan for a house that you have seen, and we will write the specifications to meet the requirements and furnish the entire cost of the house, if you want it, and you can repay us as you see fit. We will make you a loan to be repaid in three or five years, interest to be paid every three months, or you can repay us in monthly payments, the same as you now pay for rent. Your payments start when the house is finished. We charge nothing for the plans and specifications.

Come in and see us, and let us convince you that in Los Angeles our houses are in demand.

FOR SALE—
HIGHLAND PARK TERRACE.
PLEASE OBSERVE.

I. This beautiful tract is inside the limits of Los Angeles city, between Avenues 50 and 52, in the most beautiful part of Highland Park.

II. The view is magnificent, each lot affording a panorama of city, foothills and mountains.

III. Street work is now being done under the latest city specifications, which will make magnificent streets. Street improvements include graded, graveled and oiled streets, cement walks, cement curbs and cement gutters.

IV. Tract is convenient to the University-Garvanza cars, the Ave. 64 cars and the main-line Pasadena cars. It is near Occidental College and the handsome new Stimson Library and not far from Newberry's new store and the Avenue 54 school.

V. The lots, like all those we make, are good size and not toy lots. They are 50 feet or more in width and of good depth. Small lots in the residence district or suburbs are not likely to invite good houses or become very valuable.

VI. While the building restriction is only $1500, the buildings built and planned in this locality are of a very high order. The first house on the tract is now commenced and will be a two-story, 9-room Mission house, to cost $5000. Several others of similar character are being planned.

VII. The price of the lots is very low for this locality—$700 to $1000. The terms are reasonable; say one-fourth down and one-fourth every six months at 6 per cent.

The title, of course, is perfect. Our office at 107 S. Ave. 61 will be open today.

CRITES, MYERS & KULLI,
14 5137 Pasadena ave. or 107 S. Ave. 64.

FOR SALE—

We have a number of lots in our new Lincoln tract left and if you are in the market, either as an investment or to build a home, you cannot do better than invest here, the fastest-growing section in or around Los Angeles. Lincoln tract lies on Santa Monica ave. close to Western. Ground level as a floor. Elevation ideal to give the most enchanting view in all the country round about; air pure, conditions healthful; every lot in the tract a good one, and at the low figure of $650 to $850. Full size, 50x150.

All modern improvements, including cement curbs, sidewalks, streets graded and oiled, water piped to every lot; obtain free tickets at our office and take a ride out and look the property over anyway. Bring your friends along too.

GRIDER & HAMILTON,

FOR SALE—

It seems almost uncredible that the S.W. corner of Hill and 16th streets can be purchased at $150 per front foot less than was paid three days ago for the corner of Hill and 15th streets, the improvements being about the same value in each instance; yet such is the case.

If you have money enough idle to handle this property we can virtually hand you a profit of $15,000 in market value as soon as the deed is recorded.

We have an option on the S.W. corner of Hill and 16th, 104x120, with substantial improvements, insured at $5000, which we can deliver until the close of business, Thursday, January 18, at $350 per front foot.

Remember, this property is worth today $500 per front foot, and act immediately.

FOR SALE—

CONCERNING JEFFERSON STREET.

In furtherance of previous remarks, wherein I showed that at almost all points of the compass business property the same distance from Fifth and Spring was $25 to $100 a foot higher than on JEFFERSON—I want to draw some more "deadly parallels."

(And before I get done with this subject I think I shall be able to demonstrate to every investor amenable to reason that JEFFERSON STREET IS TODAY THE CHEAPEST PROPERTY, all things considered, IN LOS ANGELES.)

Pico st. and Washington st. are admittedly two of the best cross-town streets in the city. The most valuable portion of them is the half mile between Main and Figueroa. And how are the prices? Corners at Pico and Main are about $1200 a foot; Pico and Figueroa, $800; Washington and Main, $600; Washington and Figueroa, $350.

Now how is it at JEFFERSON, just a mile further out? Corners at Main and JEFFERSON are considered worth $350 a foot, and at JEFFERSON and Figueroa there is one that can be had as low as $90 a foot (consult our sales dept.)

And inside property? Well, there's scarcely anything on Pico, between Main and Figueroa, under $300, or on Washington under $300, whereas on JEFFERSON there is a 50-foot piece right near MAIN that can be purchased for $60 a foot (consult the sales dept. again.)

JEFFERSON is exactly a mile south of Washington. It is practically the ONLY business street between Washington and the city limits. The territory immediately south of it is growing by leaps and bounds, (in this, the Fifth Ward, building permits for 1905 were over $3,000,000, or nearly ONE-QUARTER of the entire city's total, and greater by $400,000 than the next largest, the downtown Third Ward.)

There is NOW a larger business done—more stores, etc.—near JEFFERSON and Main than near Washington and Main. The large brick Masonic Hall at 33d and Main is one of the most pretentious buildings south of the downtown center. You can get as much rent NOW for a store near Jefferson and Main as a mile further north. What Main is at present, JEFFERSON, right around the corner, will be in a year or two. Why not? Every store on Jefferson is rented, and they are anxiously waiting for more.

If the streets above referred to are any criterion, JEFFERSON is worth at least $100 a foot between Main and Grand, and $75 between Grand and Figueroa. A good deal of the frontage is held now at these prices, and if you can pick up anything for less you would better do it quickly, because SOME THINGS ARE GOING TO HAPPEN ON JEFFERSON VERY SOON.

I have several exceptional bargains on this street, between Main and Figueroa, and if you want the surest and most profitable investment it is possible to make in local realty, let me tell you about them.

Home 5965. 233 W. Second st.

FOR SALE—
FINE BUYS IN CORNERS.

$26,000—A corner on Olive and Court, size 60x165, with improvements costing $15,000; this property is actually worth $30,000; five minutes walk from Third and Broadway; investigate this if you want to make money fast; a very fine buy.

$25,000—N.W. corner of First and Flower, 165x120; the est and cheapest hotel site on the hill; act quickly if you want it.

$24,000—S.E. corner Figueroa and First sts., 120x155 feet to alley; a splendid site for flats or apartments.

$20,000—S.W. corner of Wall and Boyd, 60x100 feet, with a depth of 52 feet in rear; you cannot find another corner as close to business center at such a price; ought to sell for $400 a foot.

$18,000—N.W. corner of Jefferson and Key West 65x135, improved with new 2-story building containing 4 tores and 3 flats; if you don't know how rapidly this corner is becoming a business center, go out and see what is going on. The paving of Jefferson st. is spoken of. You know how values always increase with the laying of asphalt streets. Buy now and make a profit. This is a good investment.

$10,000—Corner on E. 9th just east of Central, 120 feet frontage on E. 9th; this corner is actually worth $12,000, but owner must turn quick; don't fail to investigate this.

$9000—N.W. corner of Vermont ave. and 30th st., 202½ feet by 140; this is $1000 below actual value; owner needs money.

$3500—S.W. corner of E. 9th and Ceres, size 53x136; the cheapest corner west of Central.

20 miles south of city and 5 blocks from the Redondo Electric Railway; 200 acres very choice alfalfa or berry land; the soil is as good as any between Los Angeles and the Coast. 200 miner's inches of water.

2½ acres, $150 each, $150 down, balance four annual installments, 6 per cent.

5-acre lots, $1375 each, $275 down, balance 4 annual installments, 6 per cent.

Why live on a 40-foot lot, when you can have 2½ acres at same cost? Don't fail to investigate this proposition, if you are studying your own interests.

WALNUT .... LAND
ALFALFA LAND.

We have subdivided a tract of land, comprising about 1500 acres, into lots of 5 to 20 acres. The tract is in the El Monte walnut district, about 15 miles from Los Angeles on the Southern Pacific R.R. The proposed electric line to Covina passes through the north end of the tract.

The soil is a deep sediment loam and is absolutely free from any objectionable features. It is particularly adapted to the growth of WALNUTS, ALFALFA, BERRIES, VEGETABLES, PEANUTS, LIMA BEANS, ETC.

Water for irrigation purposes is cheaply and very easily developed.

Numerous wells have been sunk and not one has developed less than 125 inches, and the average is 150 miner's inches.

We say, and investigation will prove the assertion, that there is positively no other land as near Los Angeles to be had for the money that possesses the advantages in quality of soil, water facilities, location, etc. It costs nothing but a few hours' time to investigate thoroughly, and make arrangement to see the tract.

We have sold 1000 during past month.

CORCORAN.

CORCORAN.

In the Sunday papers on January 21, we will publish the cold facts about what has been accomplished at Corcoran within the past four months and what will be done in the way of improvements in the coming 90 days.

WATCH THE PAPERS.

Those wishing to make investigations at this point are invited to go with us on our excursion Tuesday evening next and see for themselves what we are doing. We are not merely inviting others to make improvements, but our company, and members of our company, are spending hundreds of thousands of dollars in developing our lands and establishing a splendid irrigating system from the water, which we have in almost unlimited quantities. We propose to show the public the best and most substantial line of improvements ever undertaken on private lands.

PROFITS FOLLOW IMPROVEMENTS.

Our lands are rich and we have an abundant supply of pure water, the climate is good, railroad facilities are excellent, the price of land low, and the improvements, which create values, are being pushed with much energy and success.

FOR SALE—
Lemon and Orange Groves.

FOR SALE—SACRIFICE ORANGE GROVE.

INCOME $580 THIS SEASON.

$3000—Buys a 10-acre ranch, consisting of 8 acres of oranges, 2 acres in alfalfa. Of the 8 acres, 5 are in 11-year-old navel trees and 3 in preferred seedlings, including Malta Bloods and St. Michaels, which this season have netted 40 cents per box; while the navels have netted from $1.50 to $2 per box after paying all freight charges. This ranch is located one and one-quarter miles from the heart of Porterville, Cal.; and Porterville oranges are ready for market in November, when oranges command the very highest price. Hence the entire crop was sold, and proceeds ($580) in the owner's hands by January 1, 1906.
The remaining 2 acres are in alfalfa, for which there is also ready sale. The entire ranch is supplied by irrigation, a sufficient number of shares of water stock going with the place to insure continuous water. The owner of this place is an eastern man, well along in years, who bought it for an income, which he has enjoyed continuously. He desires to close out his interests in California and authorizes us to offer his ranch at the great sacrifice above stated. One can easily make a good living, and enjoy a delightful home and climate at the same time, from this $3000 investment.
The adjoining 10-acre ranch sold a few years ago for $10,000.

LOWING COW, SHE IS BUSY.

California Grows Rapidly as Butter Producer.

Los Angeles County One of Few Running Behind.

Increasing Population Absorbs Milk and Cream.

The population crop, the house and lot crop, and the growing demand for milk and cream have made great inroads in the butter production of Los Angeles county the past year.

Statistics compiled by the State Dairy Bureau show that of all the counties Los Angeles has had the most conspicuous retrograde in the output of butter.

The population of this county has increased rapidly, especially in the cities and towns. This draws more than previously on the cows of the county for milk and cream at the expense of butter output. In addition to this is the fact that numerous dairymen have found it to their advantage to move from the high-priced lands of Los Angeles county to the San Joaquin Valley, where opportunities are good on land selling at much lower prices. It is these two factors that have, temporarily at least, checked the growth of butter production in this couny, according to the report of the bureau.

The statistics of the bureau cover the year ended October 1, last. The total butter production for the State for that period was 41,961,047 pounds. Following is a statement of the production by counties:

Alameda, 886,315; Alpine, 26,060; Amador, 266,656; Butte, 166,652; Calaveras, 153,241; Colusa, 234,819; Contra Costa, 557,114; Del Norte, 644,112; El Dorado, 251,584; Fresno, 2,166,048; Glenn, 178,456; Humboldt, 4,289,739; Inyo, 137,442; Kern, 323,363; Kings 1,444,218; Lake, 124,942; Lassen, 359,821; Los Angeles, 1,431,045; Madera, 75,424; Marin, 3,959,641; Mariposa, 14,628; Mendocino, 793,122; Merced, 1,786,082; Modoc, 136,444; Mono, 22,648; Monterey, 534,241; Napa, 728,983; Nevada, 139,623; Orange, 585,268; Placer, 253,544; Plumas, 380,941; Riverside, 411,148; Sacramento, 1,578,751; San Benito, 142,155; San Bernardino 181,216; San Diego, 759,111; San Joaquin, 1,468,991; San Mateo, 206,261; Santa Barbara, 687,204; Santa Clara, 242,648; Santa Cruz, 455,778; Shasta, 11,312; Sierra, 113,123; Siskiyou, 466,692; Solano, 675,714; Sonoma, 4,156,759; Stanislaus, 2,006,171; San Luis Obispo, 1,309,831; Sutter, 683,684; Tehama, 132,653; Trinity, 15,686; Tulare, 1,735,888; Tuolumne, 29,468; Ventura, 199,632; Yolo, 1,124,907; Yuba, 82,648.

BETTER SYSTEM OF STATISTICS.

With but few exceptions there was an increased production in every county. In most of the so-called older counties in the dairy business, this increase is attributable to a favorable season, but the most of the greater aggregate is credited to establishing the dairy business in those counties where irrigation is making dairying possible within recent years. A further explanation of the increase is to be found in the fact that the Dairy Bureau is in better position to secure accurate statistics than heretofore, when it had to depend upon reports that were voluntarily mailed to it by the producers. Under the law that provides for the bureau to send sanitary inspectors to producers, advantage was taken of their visits among these producers to secure a report of the amount of their output of dairy products, and in this way the output of producers has been obtained that has been overlooked in former years.

Following is a statement of the totals for former years:

1897	28,679,439
1898	23,691,028
1899	24,868,084
1900	28,783,859
1901	29,701,202
1902	31,528,763
1903	34,786,289
1904	35,636,969

The increase over the last year's report is more than 17 per cent. Among the counties that show a remarkable rate of gain are Colusa, which increased over the previous year at the rate of 28 per cent.; Fresno, 25 per cent.; Humboldt, 11 per cent.; Kern, 37 per cent.; Kings, 24 per cent.; San Joaquin, 30 per cent.; San Luis Obispo, 25 per cent.; Sonoma, 45 per cent.; Stanislaus, 22 per cent.; Sutter, 101 per cent.; Tulare, 15 per cent.; Yolo, 28 per cent.

The remarkable rate of gain in Sonoma county is one of those cases attributable to the fact that complete returns were not secured from the nearly 400 individual large producers in the county. In the past year the figures reported are those given to the inspectors of the bureau or reported by mail. Not a pound was estimated. While the rate of growth in Sutter county has been remarkable, it should be explained that until during the past year, the production has not been very large, so that what would be a small increase in the large butter producing counties was sufficient to make a large showing in the rate of growth.

The following table gives the production in pounds of several counties during the past season and that of just five years ago as reported by the State Dairy Bureau:

County.	1900	1905
Fresno	604,861	2,166,048
Kern	129,848	323,363
Kings	258,750	1,444,218
Merced	623,608	1,786,082
Sacramento	642,443	1,578,751
San Joaquin	506,047	1,468,991
Stanislaus	423,185	2,006,171
Yolo	533,525	1,124,907
Total	3,822,267	11,898,541

The remarkable growth in the butter output shows a gain in five years of 211 per cent., or an average of 40 per cent. a year. All of these counties are located in the San Joaquin and Sacramento valleys.

The boys will be held by the northern officers until instructions arrive from the parents of the lads in this city.

[AUTHORIZED ANNOUNCEMENT.]

PORT OF SAN PEDRO IS BOOMING.

New Harbor, Free Wharves and Splendid Boulevard Coming.

Things are doing at San Pedro. The new harbor plan which will give the city free wharfage forever along a thousand feet of shore line to be reached by a splendid boulevard leading down from Palos Verdes street means business and a lot of it. The plan further solves the problem of needed accessory works, by means of which facilities fo rexchanging traffic between land and water transportation, for the convenient storage of goods awaiting consignment, and for the maintenance and repair of vessels using the port, can be established.

The absence, by reason of lack of space, of the accessory works which are found in all the great commercial ports of the world, has heretofore been a serious drawback to a free harbor at San Pedro. This last brilliant scheme solves all that difficulty by proposing to make some land for the purpose and build thereon a city of warehouses and shops with dry docks and wharf slips; to establish a shipyard of such proportions that an ocean liner or great freighter can be completely overhauled and repaired. At present there is no such shipyard south of San Francisco.

It is a bold proposition—this making of a tract of more than 150 acres of dry land where now is a stretch of lazy tide water so shallow as to be entirely useless as harbor room for vessels. To reclaim this waste of water for a great shipyard teeming with shops and warehouses and derricks is a scheme worthy of the West, with its hustling energy and enthusiasm that bridges all difficulties—this pushing out of the present shore line for a distance of more than 3000 feet over the shallow waters of the outer harbor and creating land where there was none before. The proposition is backed by ample capital to carry out its designs and it is proposed to put an army of men at work within ninety days and push the whole gigantic enterprise to completion within the next two years.

With the completion, within the next six months of the Tehauntepec National Railway across the Isthmus, when the American-Hawaiian fast freight line will become operative, San Pedro will be the Pacific Coast shipping port toward which the eyes of the great captains of commerce will turn.

It is a matter of geographical fact that if a great circle of the earth were drawn through the west end of the Panama Canal and Yokohama or other oriental trade centers, it would pass within thirty miles of San Pedro—nearer by almost 300 miles than San Francisco. In actual practice, steamers from Panama and Mexican and Central American ports pass within hundred miles of San Pedro when g the outside course. If they use the inside course, as many do, then they pass within ten or twelve miles of the Point Firmin light.

To illustrate: A steamer leaving the west end of the Panama Canal and sailing for Yokohama would first sail due south to pass out of the Bay of Panama, after which the course would be laid in a northwesterly direction along the coast of Central America and Mexico. After clearing Cape St. Lucas, the southern end of Lower California, she would take the great circle to Asia, and her path would lie just outside the Channel Islands within a hundred miles of San Pedro. In fact, in order to properly clear these islands, a vessel actually makes a slight detour to the west. Now, if this detour should be made to the east, and she should pass up San Pedro channel, she would, without lengthening her passage a dozen miles over the shortest possible course in a distance of nearly 8000 miles, be enabled to enter the port of San Pedro and replenish her coal supply at a point within a short distance of the actual geographical central point of the course.

Again, San Pedro lies slightly less than 500 miles nearer by rail to the coal fields of Alabama and Tennessee, where the best steaming coal is to be found, and from whence comes the bulk of the supply for this part of the world. In other words, San Pedro is the most convenient point to store large quantities of coal for use in the Pacific Ocean traffic, and hence, is always and forever the real key to the Pacific and Oriental trade.

The growth of San Pedro during the past year is something phenomenal. Her building improvements alone aggregate $200,000—an increase of 25 per cent. over the preceding year and compared with the estimated value of all buildings in the city three years ago, the improvements during the past two years are more than 100 per cent. The character of the buildings is of the best and most modern. The business center of San Pedro today is marked by handsome two and three-story pressed brick buildings, supplied with every modern convenience. The long stretches of open mesa and adobe land throughout the residence section have been covered with attractive cottages and residences, which are occupied by a busy, thriving population that has doubled in the past three years and is now approximately 6000.

POSTAL PULSE.

The postoffice is the pulse of a community. Beginning with April 1st, without doubt San Pedro will be entitled to free delivery, for her postal receipts will be in excess of $10,000. For the year ending last September her postal receipts were approximately $8000.

The total value of real property in the boundaries of the city of San Pedro at the resent time is in excess of $7,500,000. This does not include the value of the property in East San Pedro, recently annexed, which is certainly not less than $1,000,000. The assessment books for the year 1905-6 show an increase of $130,000 in round figures. This represents improvements solely, as no increase was made on the value of unimproved property, or property that had not been improved since the last assessment.

During the past year the splendid outfall sewer system, effectively draining every section of the city, has been constructed at a cost of $30,000. The handsome city library is rapidly nearing completion, built at a cost of $12,500, of which sum $10,000 was contributed by Andrew Carnegie.

LOOKING SEAWARD.

So much for the city itself. Looking seaward from the bold bluff that guards the entrance to the harbor, what do we see in the march of improvement and development?

The Salt Lake Railroad Company has extended its wharves in East San Pedro to the full limit of its holdings along the navigable water front, and will continue the work as rapidly as the government dredging gives a navigable depth. Preparations are also being made for the construction of a bulkhead along the east side of the east jetty and far enough out to reclaim something like 200 acres of land suitable for warehouses and switching space. The company is also making preparations to take care of another shipping proposition which will add several thousand tons per month to the outgoing freight of the port. It is the purpose of the iron manufacturers on the Sound to get their iron ore from Utah and to utilize the lumber vessels to carry the raw material from San Pedro to the north. These vessels now go north in ballast and can therefore afford to make the freight rates very low.

The Southern Pacific Company has had several hundred men employed throughout the year building new wharves, strengthening old ones and repairing the yards by leveling and regrading. The Timms Point tract along its 2500 feet of frontage has been fully reclaimed and bulkheaded. A substantial wharf, 400 feet long, with necessary tracks and approaches, has been built and turned over to one of the large wholesale firms for use as lumber yard and mill site.

The Huntington mole, in the outer harbor, will be completed within the present year, providing ample wharf room, so that any vessel that floats may receive and discharge freight. It is to be for the specific use of a line of large steamers to Japanese ports to ship cotton from the New Orleans and Galveston markets, thereby saving the 400-mile haul overland between Los Angeles and San Francisco, as is the present custom. After this year, it is the purpose of the transportation companies to tranship cotton at San Pedro instead of San Francisco.

For five years the work of building the breakwater has been progressing and now nears completion. When this is done there will be 615 or more acres of anchorage in water from five to twelve fathoms deep in the outer harbor, leaving ample space for docking along two miles of water front. This, added to the fourteen and one-half miles of inner harbor frontage, makes the total water front of the port of San Pedro sixteen and one-half miles—about four miles greater than the water front of San Francisco.

In the face of these facts, who is foolhardy enough to deny the undoubted supremacy of San Pedro as the future gateway to the Orient?

An Industrial Enterprise That Will Guarantee 6% per Annum

The stock of the Cement & Iron Mfg. Co. is issued under a positive guarantee, secured by first mortgage on gilt edged California real estate on which 6 per cent. per annum will be paid and after three years will be redeemed if the holder is not satisfied. The company owns more than 4000 acres of land, including the best cement clay and stone deposits on the coast, and one of the best iron deposits, in the form of a solid mountain. Also many copper ledges, one 26x4500 feet, another 30x2000 feet, assaying high in gold, silver and copper. Eighteen other smaller ledges, besides these two, one of which is very rich, assaying as high as $2000 per ton. We offer security and profit to the investor. The proposition will bear the closest scrutiny. The purpose of our stock issue is to increase the manufacturing of cement, deposits of which we own and are considered among the best in California. Conveniently located to transportation lines. One plant all ready for operation in Northern California.

An Unlimited Market for Its Product

Cement is used more than any one single material in modern building. It has proven itself better, cheaper and infinitely more durable than any known substance. Witness the great number of immense business buildings, miles and miles of cement curbs, walks, gutterings, etc. Bulkheads, canals and every place where strength and long life is necessary the modern builder turns to the cement manufacturer for his only relief. The tremendous demand keeps the market in a healthy, profitable condition to any firm fortunate enough to possess a proven and high-grade deposit, and whose equipment is sufficient to meet this demand. This plant will be near Los Angeles, with splendid transportation facilities, and if you want a gilt edge security we can show you where our proposition will not only make you money, but be absolutely secure, for we guarantee it by first mortgages on California real estate. The security made in your own name and will redeem the stock if you are not satisfied. Come up and let us talk it over.

FINDS HER BOY.

Mrs. William Robins Loses Husband One Day and Finds Long-lost Son the Next.

Mrs. William Robins, the aged woman who lost her husband Thursday through a runaway and who has been hunting him ever since, thought that the world looked pretty dark until her son, W. A. Jones, who recently arrived in this city, appeared at the Central Police Station yesterday.

He had seen the newspaper report of the disappearance of William Robins and went to the station to see if the Mrs. Robins spoken of was his mother. Mother and son recognized each other immediately and left the station together to search for the missing Robins.

Mrs. Robins had thought her son dead, as ten years ago he dropped out of sight. But for the accident of Thursday afternoon it is probable the mystery would never have been cleared.

LATHER INJURED.

J. J. Backer, a lather employed in a new building at No. 430 South Spring street, fell from the third floor into the basement of the building yesterday afternoon. He was taken to the Receiving Hospital, where it was ascertained that Backer had escaped with no bones broken. His ankle and wrist were sprained and he sustained several bruises.

FRUIT SO BAD, WHOSE FAULT?

Poor Oranges Dumped on the Gotham Market.

Ugly Rumors of Collusion Against F. O. B. Orders.

Transportation and Selling Interests Not Losers.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Ugly rumors are floating about the fruit market which are, in effect, that the Citrus Union held a considerable quantity of poor and immature fruit ready to ship to this market during the holiday season and thereby broke the market when it should have kept up to a good figure.

The fruit which came would have been condemned and sent to the dump if the Board of Health had done its duty. Why any such poor stuff was sent here with the expectation of selling it for enough to even pay transportation charges is a mystery. Why it was sent here at all is, perhaps, even more of a mystery. It must be understood by this time that poor fruit will break the market here as it will anywhere else, even though it is conceded that this market is enormous.

Of course it is easy to criticise and condemn. It isn't easy to undertsand all the ins and outs of this California deal. The market here is filled with jealousies and probably it is at that end as well. It isn't easy to trace these all out, but there are some things which seem patent after an examination.

First, it may be said that the representatives of the union deny that any fruit was sent here with the intention of breaking the market and reducing the profits of a rival concern. The union, it is declared, would scorn to do a thing like that. It doesn't have to. Its position is practically impregnable, say its friends and representatives. It is a matter which must be judged from evidence outside of the direct statements of those interested on either side. That there is still feeling and more or less friction, though carefully veiled, appears certain. There is good testimony that the two organizations would like to see the Kilkenny cat act performed and possibly out of the ruins of the claws and the grin would arise a new one which would come nearer controlling the situation than is the case now. Perhaps upon these ruins would arise another combination which would yield as large profits and graft as the old combination that was put out of business two years ago did. There is always a possibility of accomplishing anything provided the influences which work against such a move are not troublesome. Just now there are a number of troublesome influences at work, any or all of which might prevent, and all working together render it well nigh impossible.

The Southern California Fruit Exchange is doing good work in this market as far as shown on the surface. At any rate no ugly charges and rumors have been circulated regarding it. There may be things going on quite as reprehensible and quite as likely to cause criticism and result in loss to shippers as there are in other directions, but when considering the influences at work in this market or any other it is only possible to point to those which are known and which have resulted in known injury.

There is a splendid market here for all the good fruit California can send. New York wants oranges, plenty of them, but wants them good. It doesn't want green, immature wilted and otherwise, poor stock. Moreover, it will not buy them, and if they come here every one must expect to lose by them. It isn't a question of supplying the market with fruit. It is a question of supplying the market with good fruit, and there are not lacking men in this city who believe, if all graft and benefits were forever wiped out, most of this poor stuff would be kept at home where it belongs. It is more profitable there than it is here. Feed it to the hogs? Dump it back on the ground for fertilizer, but do not send it here, paying picking, packing, shipping and selling charges only to have the returns less than the actual value of the fruit on the coast and everything else a dead loss. It is charged that if some one were not getting something beyond the legitimate profits of the business there would be less eagerness to send the stuff here.

If the two organizations which now control the trade as the California Fruit Agency formerly did choose to enter into open war it is another matter, but one which the growers and others interested at that end should take up and investigate. It is not of so much moment to receivers how matters are running with these two organizations. What is wanted here is good fruit, and if the organizations cannot or will not furnish it then it is time for the growers to take the matter in hand and see that a management is installed which will attend to this important matter. It is important and it needs more attention than it has received in the past. There was a time last year when it seemed as if real reform had taken hold, but that has evidently passed. There was an unseemly rush to get fruit here, and when it came there was an attempt, it is charged, to offer it in such a way that the market was more or less injured. As long as good fruit alone was offered there was no question as to prices, but that time speedily passed. One organization, it is said, saw that the other was making good money on its good fruit and at once broke the market with a quantity of poor stuff which never ought to have been moved east of the North River.

It is impossible to get any confirmation of these assertions from the persons most interested, but there are influential men in the market who thoroughly believe that these assertions are absolutely true and who are confident that, had both companies done as they should have done, shippers would have received a higher range for their fruit than they did. This may be all wrong and it may be merely the vaporings of irresponsible persons, but there is a unanimity in the statements which stamps them as something more than mere collusions. There is apparently something in them.

This much is known. A large quantity of poor and immature fruit came in during the holiday week. It was so heavy that some sales made practically no profit at all. They were, according to well informed individuals, red ink sales and the shipper will hear from them later, if he hasn't already. The market suffered so seriously that it hasn't yet recovered from the effects of this influx of fruit suitable for the dump. Buyers are still cautious and are not paying as much as they did before, while Florida oranges are taken whenever procurable. It has been a severe blow and if it was intended it has served its purpose admirably. If it was a blunder it has been a costly one for somebody, but, incidentally, it has not been costly for transportation agencies or seeing interests. They have received their little rakeoffs just the same.

Rapid transportation to Los Angeles and Santa Ana is already here. Substantial buildings are now being erected—to be followed shortly by others, put up for permanency by the Pacific Electric Railway itself. The town is going ahead rapidly, and values are bound to go along with it.

We also have a few 1 and 1½ acre tracts at Artesia, suitable for small poultry ranches, at $400 per acre

Artesia Townsite is beautifully situated—in the midst of a rich, well-watered, productive country, of which it is the natural shipping point. The neighborhood is well settled. The land is level and dotted with trees, with a beautiful view of the mountains in the distance. El Camino Real, the old road connecting the California missions, runs directly through the townsite.

Property That Will Increase in Value—A Wise Investment

A small investment at Artesia will show a handsome profit. Terms are one-fourth cash, balance in 6, 12 and 18 months, at 7 per cent. interest. A discount of 5 per cent. is allowed to cash buyers. The smallest lots are 52x150 feet. All lots run back to 16-foot alleys. A visit to the property and consideration of the developments which are making Artesia important commercially will convince you of its desirability as a place to live, or for profitable, conservative investment. MINES AND MINING.

SMELTER MAY BE ERECTED.

TERN CAPITALISTS DISCUSS PLANS FOR PLANT.

San Pedro or Wilmington Likely to Become Site—Angelenos Operate Property Near Babispe, Sonora. Sale of Tungsten Property Near Randsburg Effected.

ording to plans outlined by Isaac Elwood of Chicago and his associates, among whom are prominent capitalists of New York and Chicago, a smelter to cost millions and to have capacity equal to many of the big plants in other parts, is to be erected near Los Angeles. The exact location is not stated, but it is fully expected it will be somewhere in the vicinity of San Pedro or Wilmington; where ore could be obtained by sea from all parts of the Pacific Coast and even from Australia and the Orient, and where coke can be brought in without the need of a long haul by rail, factors which are always of prime importance in locating a smelter.

For some time past local men have been approached in the interest of men who are desirous of locating a smelter in this section, and some investigations have been made of iron-ore deposits existing in Southern California. The opening of Nevada and the bringing of it into such close touch with this region gives an opening for the erection of a smelter.

CHINO RANCH

CONSIDER THESE FACTS:

That Chino Ranch is NOT ISOLATED, that it is less than 90 minutes from Los Angeles—that the soil is of exceptional fertility—that the WATER SUPPLY IS UNLIMITED—that there is a State Agricultural Experiment Station right on the property, of inestimable value to you—that Chino Ranch has schools, churches, telephone systems, and meets every requirement of ideal Twentieth Century ranch life. Weigh these facts carefully and impartially—compare them with what you may find elsewhere—and put the price side by side, you cannot fail to realize that CHINO RANCH IS YOUR GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY TODAY—an opportunity that WILL NOT, CANNOT, last long.

Fortunes are being made by Chino Ranchers in alfalfa, walnuts, oranges, onion culture, and in citrus and deciduous fruits.

It is worth your while, Mr. Homeseeker, to investigate the Chino Ranch. Make arrangements today to visit the Ranch. You'll see there the living proofs of what we say. Southern Pacific trains leave daily at 8:05 a.m. and 5:25 p.m.

WHOSE IS OUR GOVERNMENT?

Representative of "The Times" Goes to Washington to Find Out.

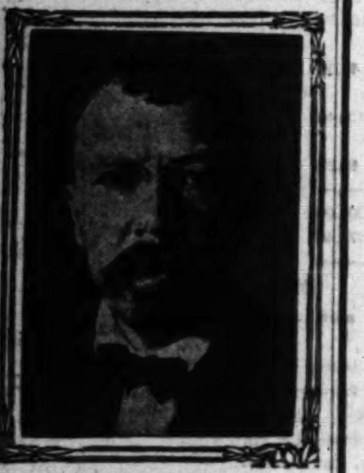
BY LINCOLN STEFFENS.

I.

WASHINGTON (D. C.) Jan. 8.—I have come to Washington in the plain character of a private citizen to find out all I can about my government. It is mine; or, it should be; yours, too, of course. But I say "mine" with a definite thought in mind.

"Our" government should represent us, all of us; not only the good citizens, but the bad also, and not only the bad, but the good, the bad and the indifferent. For we are all sorts, and our government has to deal with us all. But my thought is that a representative government should stand especially for those of its citizens who don't want to get anything out of it but fair play and fairly efficient service.

Now you may be asking some favor for yourself or your friend or your friend's friend; or for your business or your party or your State or your river. It may be all right for "our" government to grant you what you want, but I have noticed that men who get what they want out of "our" government are disposed to judge leniently of the administration of it as a whole.



LINCOLN STEFFENS.

On the other hand, when men fail to get what they seek, they are inclined to condemn the whole thing, and rather harshly. So I cannot be sure of you as I am of myself. For I know that I have nothing to ask that everybody should not have, neither an office nor a contract, neither a wrong grant nor a "good bill;" nor yet—the news.

The point of my purpose lies in the fact that, though I am a reporter, my interest is personal, not professional; it is simply that of a simple citizen who seeks to understand simply if, and how, his government is attending to his business.

And I really want to know this. I have spent all the years of my mature life inquiring into the condition and the character of our State and municipal government, and I know nothing about them. They are corrupt. Some are worse than others, but none is very good. In a few cities and in fewer States there are movements afoot to achieve better things. Indeed there are signs of an awakening all over the country—in cities and States. Yet the typical American government is bad in our cities and in our States.

How about the national government? Is that any better? The average American citizen seems to think it is. In cities and in States where the good citizen has given up in despair, he will brighten up when you mention the Federal establishment. Our American optimism takes refuge in the declaration made again and again to me that "anyhow, as a nation, we are all right."

"The national government is sound," we say.

Is it? The observation which transformed me from an easy-going reporter into a concerned citizen was that the so-called political corruption of St. Louis was like that of New York, and that what went on in those cities went on also in Minneapolis and Pittsburgh and Philadelphia and Chicago. The causes were much the same, and the prices and the forms and the effects. And the same causes were at work corrupting the States, where in Ohio and Rhode Island, in New Jersey and Illinois and New York and Wisconsin, these same forces, working in the same way, were producing the one very same result—a revolutionary change in the essential nature of our government. Then I noticed that the corruption of the cities spread up into their States, and that the corruption of the States reached down into the cities. Municipal reform was checked by State corruption, and State reform was checked by municipal corruption, because, forsooth, State corruption and municipal corruption were all one system of corruption.

Pessimistic? Not a bit of it. I believe that when we Americans once understand our corruption we will throttle the beast to death.

But I found that I couldn't grasp the beast in the cities and States. Wherever I followed the trail of municipal corruption up into a State, I met evidence of Federal corruption, and I have seen citizens who, having beaten the beast in their city, have proceeded against it in the State, only to encounter there what looked like a sympathetic national system. What did that mean? What does it mean that wherever I have traveled the broad main highway of our commercial-political corruption, whether in a city or in a State, always the footprints of the big successful political grafters have pointed off toward Washington? What are they doing in Washington? Did they come here to retire and reform? Recent disclosures concerning certain departments and men suggest that the lessons learned at home have been applied here—only with the improved skill of the practised expert. Is that so? Is Washington to politics what New York is to business, the Mecca of the finished rascal, or is it more like Newport—a sort of Valhalla for the grafters that are done grafting?

No? Neither? Well, that is what I want to settle for myself. That is why, having turned from cities to States, I am going now from the States into the United States. Since our bad city governments and our bad State governments are all one bad system, I'd like to know if these are but parts of a national system.

I have crossed, in the cities and States, the tracks of good men also who have gone on up to Washington. And there are more, no doubt, of whom I never heard. The President told me once—before he was President—that the character of the House of Representatives, for example, was high, very high, and that there were in that body a surprisingly large number of able, courageous men. Good. What are they doing there? How are they doing it? It is sometimes hard for good men to do good work in public office; what difficulties do good men encounter in Washington? I must seek out these men and ask them. They will tell me the truth, and I will tell you the truth. And if the President is right about the House; and if the scandals exposed in the departments are exceptional; and if the Senate has been misrepresented as much as it is accused of misrepresenting us, then—the truth about Washington will be interesting and pleasant for a private citizen to know of his own knowledge.

And I shall know. I have a right to know what is going on, and so have you, and I mean to know; know, too, of my own knowledge, and I mean to make that knowledge yours. How? I shall ask questions, and I shall report those questions to you. When I get answers, I shall report those answers to you. And if I get no answers, I shall report that to you. But if I get no answers I shall go out and answer my own questions myself. This may take time, but I have plenty of time. It may be necessary to go back into the States and districts whence "our" Representatives come, but I am free to travel. You see, having no news to watch for, I can pursue the truth and—nail it.

But there should be no obstacles in the way of my quest, since all that I have to ask may be summed up in one short sentence:

"What do you represent?"

That is the question to put to a representative democracy, and surely that is a proper question for a Representative to answer.

Whether he be the President or a Justice of the Supreme Court, a United States Senator or a member of the House, or a clerk, he should represent you and me,—we being citizens who want nothing but a "square deal." And if our representative does not represent us, who or what does he represent? Pertinent, penetrating, this is a public question.

This seems to be the public question of the day in the United States of America. Not the regulation of railroad rates; not tariff revision; not graft. So far as my present purpose is concerned, I don't care whether the railroads or the State fixes the rate on freight. But I do care a great deal who rules the United States. The railroads rule some of the States of the United States, and the spirit in which my Congress discusses rate regulation legislation, and the votes of my representatives on such a measure, is, to me, only a chance to see for myself whether the railroads are better represented than I am in my national government. I'd like to know if the railroads rule the United States.

So with tariff revision. To the extent that this is a purely economic question, it does not concern me now. My interest is political and moral. If it is good for business to be protected from foreign competition, let business be protected. But I have seen and talked with business men who, because their business was protected by the national government, have refused to take part in municipal reform. Though the condition of their city was horrid, they have hung back from fighting the boss whom they despised, lest his overthrow might jeopardize their blessed tariff. The character of a people is more important than the business of a nation, and if the protection that is good for business is bad for business men; if it makes cowards of good citizens; if they regard it as a graft, and if, because they have "theirs," they are willing to let grafters rule, and rob our cities, why, then I think protection is bad. And I want to see this winter if they and our representatives do regard the tariff as a graft and just how far "protected interests" make return for the special concessions we grant them by running our government in the interests of all special interests. All talk of tariff revision, therefore, will be simply a chance to learn for myself whether the special interests are better represented at Washington than the common interests of all of us. If special interests rule my country, I'd like to know it.

And so with graft. This is no graft hunt. Oh, I shall look at graft, if graft looks at me, but "Where did he get it?" is not a national question. We know where he got it. What I want to know is, what did he do to get it? For graft, you know, graft isn't merely graft. If the grafters after robbing us would only run away like the thieves that they are, we should be all right. They can not get away with the country. But they don't run; they run us. They stay by their graft and they rule us for the sake of more graft. And since the graft of the political grafters is to sell out the common interests of all of us to the special interests of a few of us, why, the really terrible result of our so-called political corruption is not that it is bad in itself, but that it transforms our governments from democracies representative of all of us into sordid, nasty oligarchies representative of the worst of us—those that come with bribes in their hands asking favors.

"There is no bribery at Washington." Many men have told me that, and I do not expect to find any; not cash bribery. But cash bribery is crude and unnecessary; cash bribery is the least dangerous form of political corruption. Officers, promotion, committees, stock tips, business, campaign contributions, social position, dinners—these, and such as these, are the higher, subtler, more respectable and, therefore, the more really dangerous forms of our political corruption. These are the menace of the future to the future of American institutions. And this kind of corruption cannot always be traced and proven. So we shall have to judge in Washington very largely, as business men judge, by results; by the speeches, the action, the votes of our representatives. For these letters are to be studies of government, not of constitutions, forms and laws, but the actual, living, human organism which men call the United States. And I am asking, not whether it is good government or bad, but simply whether it represents me—you, too, if you please, but since, as I have said, I don't know exactly what you expect of your government, I shall demand to know only if and how mine represents me.

RICH LAND

Last Chance to Purchase Small Tracts at Wholesale Price......

Everybody wants to make money, to be prosperous, to be a success, and to arrive at a point where they can be independent. Here is your opportunity.

Five hundred families, representing a population of over two thousand people, are purchasing a tract of rich land in Tulare County at $19.00 per acre, and on January 25 will subdivide it among themselves at cost; prices are graded from $10.50 to $30.00 per acre, according to distance from the new townsites, and each purchaser has contracted to make improvements amounting to $15.00 per acre within one year.

A new town will be built—the town of ALPAUGH—and several new industries will be established at once, including a large dairy and a factory for the concentrating of vegetables. This factory will afford growers a better year-'round market for products than either Los Angeles or San Francisco.

BIG MONEY FOR GROWERS

Here is a list of prices this factory agrees to pay growers for products delivered in bulk at Alpaugh:

Potatoes	$15 per ton
Onions	$20 per ton
Carrots	$10 to $12 per ton
Parsnips	$15 per ton
Turnips	$10 to $12 per ton
Sweet potatoes	$15 per ton
Pumpkins	$3 per ton
Tomatoes	$12 to $15 per ton
Cabbage	$12 per ton

This land was selected by a committee of seven experienced Southern California farmers (elected by the Homeseekers' Club,) who pronounce the soil equal to any of the best best soils in the State of California for general farm products.

Plenty of water at the very low cost of 40 to 60 cents per acre per year.

You may think our opinion of this opportunity too prejudiced to carry much weight, but we honestly believe this land will make every purchaser more money than any other land or town lot proposition in California today. Here is what we base our calculations upon and what you may reasonably expect if you join with us and purchase land before January 20:

First—The Tulare Lake lands are already attracting more homeseekers and more capital than any other farming district in the State, and this great inrush of capital and growers is only just beginning. The richness of the soil and abundant water supply will make it one of the most populous and prosperous centers in California.

Second—The price per acre at which you now have the opportunity to purchase is POSITIVELY LESS THAN HALF of what adjoining lands are now selling for in 20 and 40-acre tracts, and our lands will have the closer markets and our town will be the center of trade.

Third—In our opinion this land will be worth from $100 to $200 per acre inside of two years, an increase in value of from five to ten-fold over the present wholesale price open to members. The large dairy and vegetable factory to be established at once means that farmers and growers should make from $75 to $150 per year on each acre cultivated.

Meanwhile your land is doubling or quadrupling in value because of dense population and increased earning capacity of the soil.

Fully a thousand people will be on the ground within a few weeks after the opening.

Taking other advantages into consideration, such as the low cost of irrigation, the good class of people you will have in the colony, the dense population, which means good schools, good roads and many social advantages right from the start, we don't see how any homeseeker can let the opportunity go by.

Of course there are some who think the San Joaquin Valley too warm in summer. The days are warm for about three months, but the nights are always cool and the other nine months in the year are ideal. Much exaggerated information about this summer climate comes from people traveling through this valley in hot, stuffy railroad coaches, which is disagreeable anywhere in hot weather. The near-by mountains are better than any other part of the State for camping.

By acting at once you can secure 5, 10, 20 or 40 acres at the wholesale price with five hundred other families.

After January 25, when these allotments of land will be distributed, if there are any tracts left the prices will be advanced.

ONLY ONE WEEK more. Now is the time to act.

There are thousands of people in California who, if they knew the facts, would fill our offices full to the doors.

Call at once for full particulars. YOU HAVE NO TIME TO LOSE.

ZENZ BROS.' PROGRESS.

From Small Shop to Large Modern Brick Building.

Eight years ago, the Zenz brothers—John and Frank—established their business of making carriages and wagons, in a small shop at 305 East Second street.

During that time, by their mechanical skill, no less than by persistent energy, their patronage increased to such an extent that they were forced to expand and obtain larger quarters.

Recently, they moved into their new two-story pressed brick building at 240 South San Pedro street; having a frontage of forty-five feet and a depth of 115 feet. Here they have a shop equipped with the latest machinery and tools obtainable, and already have orders on hand which is treble the business done at the old stand. They make a specialty of building and repairing delivery wagons and also of putting iron rollers on lumber wagons.

Both partners have had fifteen years' practical experience at their trade and are fully competent to build any style of carriage or wagon required, or compete job for job with any concern.

Some Bargains in Lots in the Wilshire Boulevard District

In West Seventh Street Tract

Six elevated lots, 53 1-2x135, facing Country Club Park, and commanding a very pleasing view, $1000 each. Four lots the same size, but on the slope of the hill instead of the summit, at $850 each. The lots are across the street from Country Club Park, to have wide, winding drives, eleven handsome ornamental bridges, and five blocks of lawn and shrubbery. For beautiful homesites, or for profitable investment, nothing could be better than these town lots. In the entire West Seventh Street Tract less than twenty lots can be had, the syndicate owning the tract reserving most of the unsold lots until the improvements guaranteed in this and adjoining tracts are completed.

In Boulevard Heights

On Mountain View Avenue, a wide street extending from Wilshire Boulevard to Washington Street, a few lots, 50x150, facing east, on the top of the highest hill in this scetion, can be had at $1100 to $1250. Because of their commanding situation on the hilltop, these lots have a widespread and charming view, extending to the distant horizon in every direction, including the city, with Country Club Park in the immediate foreground. There are only a few of these elevated lots, and these will soon bring a high premium, because they are especially desirable.

In Wilshire Terrace

Four east front lots on Van Ness Avenue, half a block from Wilshire Boulevard, $1100 each.

On Van Ness Avenue, one east front lot, fifty by two hundred and twenty-eight (50x228, note the depth) for $1250; a sightly level lot, about two feet above the sidewalk. Another, similarily situat 50x147, with an L 26x133, for $800.

Van Ness Avenue extends from Wilshire Boulevard to Prospect Avenue, Hollywood.

The fashionable route from Los Angeles to Hollywood for motoring and driving will be on Wilshire Boulevard to Van Ness Avenue; thence north on Van Ness Avenue to Hollywood. There will be only one turn on the entire route; the grades will be easier and the surroundings more attractive than on any present way to Hollywood. On Wilshire and Van Ness there will be no car lines to partially obstruct the roadway.

BEAR IN MIND that these lots are in the Wilshire Boulevard District; that they, like the entire Wilshire District, are restricted to two-story houses of the best class. The terms are one-third cash, balance one and two years, or before, with six per cent. interest.

HAPPY CLOSE OF BIG SHOW.

LAST NIGHT BEST OF ALL AT THE POULTRY MEET.

Throng of Owners of Fine Fowls on Hand, the Lucky and the Unlucky Alike Pleased With the Affair—Tin Spectacles and Diamonds Among the Prizes.

The closing night of the Poultry Show was the best of all. Despite the rain crowds visited the tents at Sixth and Hill streets and enjoyed the display.

Owners of fine fowls were particularly in evidence, and it was easy to pick out the man who had taken a blue or a red ribbon. Perhaps the proudest of all were the novice prize winners, those who for the first time received silver medals and special mention.

Pandemonium broke loose after dark and the over-tired chickens, turkeys and pigeons voiced their sentiments in forty-nine different kinds of noises.

The "pouters" pouted in real earnest; the "homers" showed their desire to be turned loose and fly homeward; the "runts," the biggest of all the pigeons shown, just sulked and showed their displeasure. Only the little parlor tumblers were glad. These were taken from their tiny pens and allowed to turn somersaults on the floor for the edification of the spectators.

The confinement has worked hardship on some of the fine chickens, which have been cooped in pens since Monday. The big bronze turkeys have made the best of a bad bargain by standing out the time on one leg. The geese and ducks have asked no odds of anybody. The former have hissed the audience to scorn, and the latter have quacked their disgust at the lack of lakes of water.

The show has been the best ever, and there has been good feeling throughout. No one has been disgruntled, and even the man who carted ten crates of heavy birds to the tents on Monday and at midnight yesterday hauled the heavy load away with one little measly pink fifth-prize ribbon as his reward, had no complaint to make.

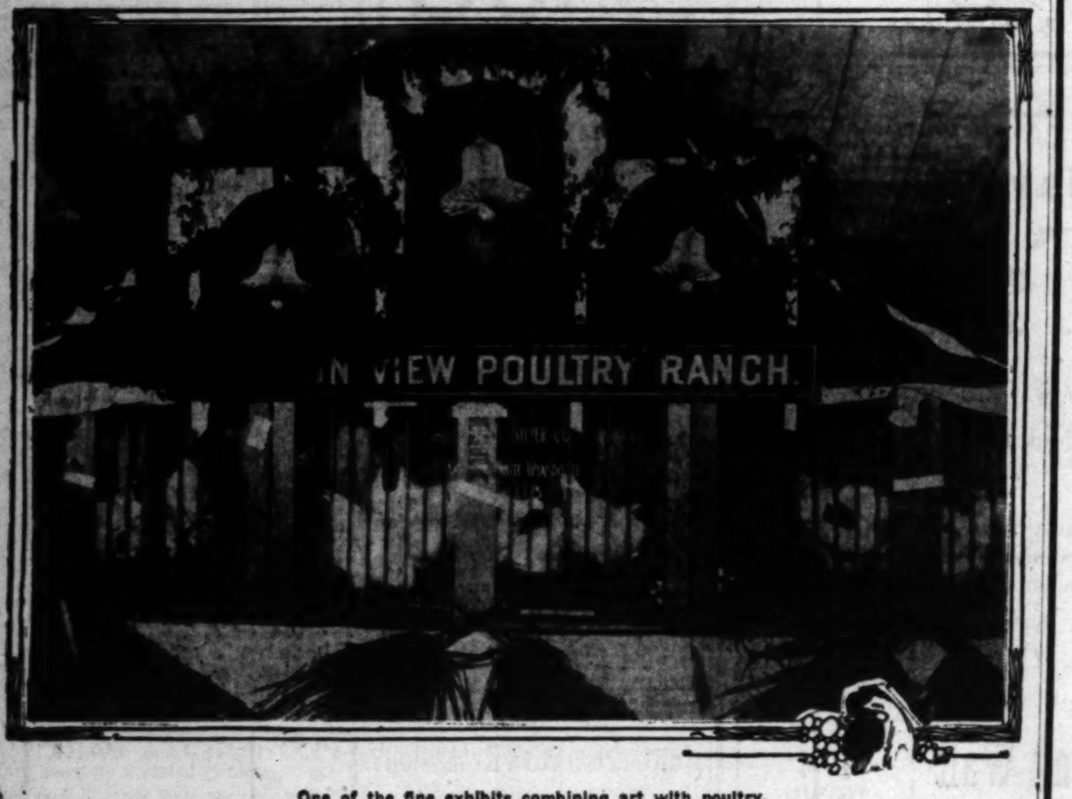
Among the jubilant exhibitors last night, none was happier than Ed Hart, who has a pen of fine turkeys brought from Clement, Cal. Though Hart is one of the old-time prize winners and is many years beyond the novice class, he has been out of the business for several years and there were those who smiled at what they termed his presumption in displaying birds he has raised. He was declared to be out of the running. Last night he was awarded the silver cup for the best display of turkeys.

Perhaps the luckiest exhibitor is E. V. King, of this city, who showed ten homing pigeons. Nine of the ten birds won prizes, and the last, a little hen homer, received special mention.

Cups, medals and prizes of all description, were awarded at the close of the show last night. The good natured rivalry which has been a feature of the exhibition since the beginning was never more conspicuous than during the last hours when congratulations were in order. W. M. Humphreys, who secured the solid silver Times eagle trophy, received his meed of praise. The man who has the best pen of white rocks at the show took several other handsome prizes.

A good natured "jolly" was handed to S. H. Church and M. E. Dillingham, two of the best-natured men in the Poultry Breeders' Association. Both were presented with tin spectacles.

A handsome gold watch charm, set with a diamond, was given to W. M. Humphreys. Harry E. Rose, the treasurer, received a scarf pin set with garnets and pearls. Mr. Dillingham was given a handsome gold locket.



One of the fine exhibits combining art with poultry.

GREAT TELEPHONE DISPLAY.

Independent Managers, Assembled for a Fraternal Banquet, See Fine Exhibit of Materials.

The independent telephone managers of this section held a "High Jinks" at the Woman's Exchange yesterday afternoon and evening, discussing a delicious dinner, and the affairs of long-distance conversation at the same time.

It is doubtul if any exhibition of telephonic apparatus ever given here equaled in completeness the private display set up by various companies for this assemblage of telephone men.

Among these displays was that of the Stromberg-Carlson equipment, the Standard underground materials, the Sterling Electric Company, the Dean Electric Company, the Kellog Switchboard and Supply Company, and the John A. Roebling Company. New kinds of telephones, both desk and wall; new species of cables, new problems in wiring, safety fuses inclosed in glass to prevent possibility of fire through sparking, new methods of interoffice communication—these were the chief things that a mere telephone user would be cognizant of. The display was set on half a dozen tables, and represented, as its possessors said, much time and many hundreds of dollars.

Among the objects of local interest was a pretty wall telephone in jet black color, no less than 400 of which are to be installed at once in the large private exchange of the Hotel Alexandria.

Nearly forty men were present at the banquet, after which C. C. Craig, assistant manger of the local Home Telephone Company, read a paper on several phases of current telephonic affairs. Private discussion of problems, ways and means followed.

RAIN CAUSES COLLAPSE.

A choked-up drain-pipe caused the collapse of a portion of the front of a building in course of construction at No. 524 South Main street yesterday. The workmen say the drain was choked and that it caused the water to back up against the wall on the second story, forcing it out of plumb and that then the green wall tumbled down, carrying with it a heav one was hurt.

Houses, Lots and Lands—Review of Building and Development—Contin

BY OWNERS AND DEALERS.

LAYEST SALES REPORTED BY AGENCIES SHOW ACTIVITY.

Many Buyers of Good Property in the Market—Business Property Held Exceedingly Firm—Small Homes Sell Rapidly—Acreage Here and There.

There is a good active demand for all kinds of property. Business property is held very firmly and buyers stand aloof to wait. Small homes sell rapidly to actual settlers.

Westminster Square.

A week ago this department mentioned the purchase of a tract of land on Western avenue, between Wilshire boulevard and Fourth street. Since then the Dover Company has purchased twenty acres adjoining on Western avenue between Fifth and Sixth streets, at the reported price of $70,000. Walter E. Brown & Co. and George A. Cortelyou & Co. will place this tract upon the market when subdivided into lots 60x150 feet, on 75-feet streets, with high-class building restrictions to protect purchasers. The whole tract as it now lies, between Fourth street and Wilshire boulevard, and running westward to Western avenue, owned by the company above referred to and the Althouse Bros., will be known as Westminster Square. The lots will be of an unusually large size. The Sixth street railroad will in a short time be extended to a private right of way west of this tract, where it will turn northward to Fourth street. The Althouse holdings will be handled by Althouse Bros. and Arnold & Dodge. The Althouse Bros. have also secured ten acres on Fifth street and Normandie avenue, close to Normandie Hill.

LEASING BUSINESS PROPERTY.

Rumor of Big, New Dry Goods House Old-time Concerns Also Leasing Property.

There is a rumor on the street that the southeast corner of Sixth street and Broadway, 120 feet frontage on the big artery, belonging to Nelson Story, a Montana mining man, is soon to be improved with a ten-story structure for stores and office uses. The rumor is that a strong eastern dry goods firm has been here looking for premises in which to open up a very large business of this kind, and that they have about concluded negotiations with the owner of this fine lot to put up such a building as they desire.

Another rumor on the street is that one of the leading grocery stores of the city and an old time business house here, is making arrangements, if they have not already been made, with Capt. John H. Norton to put up a six-story building on the southwest corner of the streets just named above, on a lot 80x145 feet. Of course, a retail grocery house would not need more than a single story, probably, for its business, but the owner of the lot is said to see his way to improving the property in a very substantial manner, using the upper five stories for office purposes.

It is more than a rumor, it is almost an accomplished fact, that a magnificent lot of 100 feet frontage, between Seventh and Eighth streets on Broadway, is to be improved with a six-story building in every way modern. Negotiations are pending, perhaps entirely concluded, between the owner of this piece of property and the tenant for the erection of such a structure.

Another lease is reported signed up on a piece of business property on Main street, south of Twelfth. The frontage is 132 feet, and a three-story building is to be erected on it for business purposes. This lease is to run for a period of twelve years, and the rental is said to be $4800 a year. This is 5 per cent. on $96,000, and it is understood that the rental is to be net. This makes the value of the lot something like $750 a front foot, a pretty good price for property in that location.

The owners of the Ramona Building on the southwest corner of Third and Spring streets have been here, their home being in London, for some days past. They have been considering seriously whether they should raze the building now on the property, a good, three-story brick of 120 feet frontage on Spring street, and put up a fine, modern structure which would cost about $300,000, or take an offer to rent the whole property to one tenant for a lump sum of $50,000 a year net above all expenses of taxes, repairs, and every other kind. It is said that they have concluded to accept this handsome rental, although they announced themselves some time ago that they would want $50,000 for the first three years, $60,000 for the next two years, and $70,000 for the last five years. It is understood that the property at the present time is bringing in a rental of about $45,000 a year, but some of the leases which are expiring were made as long as five years ago, and are unusually low from the point of view of present-day developments. The sum of $50,000 is 5 per cent. on $1,000,000, and on that basis the property is worth $8350 a front foot, but that is not the whole story. A parcel of property one block further south, of forty-five feet frontage and about eighty in depth, a corner also, is reported to be leased at $48,000 a year. The building on this is only two stories, and to earn that large rental it will be necessary to construct probably at least a six-story building. This brings the rental referred to down to a mere ground rental proposition, and would indicate that that property is worth about $11,500 a front foot. These are values that nobody has dreamed of putting upon Los Angeles real estate up to the present time.

ORANGE GROVES BOUGHT.

Bogardus & Mason report the sale of the L. Cereux ranch, Monrovia, to Artist Peeters. Eight and a half acres for $3500. Also the Liefer ranch on White Oak avenue near Monrovia, fourteen acres, to eastern people, for $9000. Both are orange groves in a high state of cultivation, and several houses will be built on them.

AMONG THE FOOTHILLS.

A Beautiful Home in Semi-tropic California With Mountains and Ocean in View.

The union of strength and beauty is characteristic of nature in Southern California, and architecture that responds to this quality is like the setting of music unto pleasant words. An ideal spot for such an expression of graces harmonized is the site chosen by J. E. Hoff among the sun-bathed foothills of beautiful Hollywood. The charming contours are just as presented by B. W. Pierce, who supplied the landscape details in the accompanying cut. The gently-rounded slopes rise cosily, starting 300 feet to the rear of the house and reaching an elevation of over 1000 feet, forming a background of large mass, yet of delicate, tree-grown surface. Against this brown and green of the hills, the classically strong outlines of this modern house will be a memorable picture. As befits a climate whose sunshine has made it known as Elysian, and the Utopia of the home builder, this house has been planned with special provision for admitting this radiant bringer of good health. This open, hospitable effect is attained by the use of broad, simple lines in the building itself, and an abundance of large windows, especially toward the the east and south. When the people of the East are suffering from all the hardships of heavy skies and murky atmosphere, this home will be warmed with glorious sunshine, tempered with soft breeze that comes uninterrupted as the view, beyond the far fields, even to the balmy strand of the Pacific. Even with the rapid growth that is already evident throughout the suburban ramifications of Los Angeles, this eyrie preserves its magnificent view, which will be as a great picture on one wall of the living room—a single window, 11x6 feet framing in this wondrous scene.

The outlines of this gracious structure, as planned by Scott Bros. of Los Angeles, show the old mission inception; but by its broad cornices, massively columned porticos and buttressed steps, the whole is made suggestive of modern comfort and elegance. Approaching the pure rectangle as shown in the plan, with dimensions 40x60 feet, and with lofty ceilings, harmoniously suggested by the exterior belt courses and a fine frieze just under the cornice, the purity and unity of the design is a real object lesson to those who have lost themselves in flamboyant and tortuous styles. This fitting jewel for its valley setting finely contrasts—with its strong, straight lines—with the curves of the embracing hills; its very freedom from ornament gives it a nobility that is irresistible to beholders along the approaching boulevards, trolley lines, and automobile courses.

To the guest who is fortunate enough to pass up those broad steps and through the massive portals, a luxurious interior presents itself. Here again appear strength and beauty, grace and historic charm. The rooms with their large, well-lighted spaces, columned archways, beamed ceilings and big hospitable mantels, the pleasant antique oak finish, and the quiet furnishings consisting of carven heirlooms of teak and mahogany, beautiful rugs and bronzes, receive one with the veritable essence of art. The upper rooms, with their Shasta pine finishings, their perfect equipment for every detail of a luxurious modern home, complete this triumph of good taste.

In agreement with the mission motif, the exterior will be of uniform ecru, or sand color, done in waterproof oil cement. Standing 575 feet above sea level, the house commands a perfect view, even to the mountains of San Bernardino and the snow-wrapped peaks of Old San Antonio and San Jacinto. It is generously surrounded by a tract of land 265 by 335 feet in size, all to be landscaped with driveways, walks, trees and shrubbery. The entire works are under the direct supervision of the architects, Scott Bros., who have made a special study of the historic mission forms and their modern application.

Robinson, a tract lying 240 feet west of Figueroa street, fronting 209 feet on Seventh, and 200 feet on Orange; consideration, $102,000. The new owners are now engaged in subdividing this tract, and it will be ready for the market in a few days. The tract will make eight good lots. This lot cost Mrs. Jones $600 about thirty years ago.

More Apartments.

C. W. Patterson has sold to E. R. Brainerd through the agency of L. L. Bowen, 43½x165 feet on the west side of Olive street midway between Third and Fourth streets for $17,400. Fine Residence Sites.

Althouse Bros. have bought on their account from L. H. Mitchell a tract of twenty acres on the southwest corner of Western avenue and Fourth street for $60,000. It will be cut into lots and put on the market as a high-class residence subdivision.

Also Mrs. Karpe to Frank Sievering, two lots, 50x206 feet each on south side of Dana street, between Vermont avenue and Romeo street for $2900. Dora Momsen to Dr. Badgley, lot on north side of Twenty-fourth street, between Leoti and Normandie avenues; consideration $1350. Mrs. Anna Bixby to Westlake Presbyterian church, two lots on east side Grand View avenue, 140 feet south of Ninth street; consideration, $6500.

Doubled His Money

W. I. Hollingsworth has sold to J. W. Baught a lot 40x120 feet on Hill street between Eighth and Ninth street, practically unimproved, for $50,000. The seller paid just half of this amount for the property eight months ago.

Dealer Buys.

L. L. Bowen has bought from I. J. Blanchard, through W. R. Hubbard & Co., 100x135 feet on the north side of West Twentieth street between Vermont avenue and Romeo street. Price $3000. Mr. Bowen will improve with two substantial residences.

Benedict, the northwest corner of Durango and Thirtieth street, lot, 50x150. Mr. Benedict will improve with handsome residence at once to cost $4000. Consideration $1000. C. R. Hines to J. F. Fox, an unimproved lot on the east side of Juliet street, near Twenty-third street, lot 50x135. Consideration $1500. A. R. Brown to W. M. Riley, a 2-story, 8-room frame residence, No. 1249 Elden avenue, lot 50x150 feet. Consideration $5250. Charles B. Hopper to J. B. Servoss, a six-room bungalow, lot 40x130 feet, No. 2023 West Thirtieth street. Consideration $3250. West Ninth Street Heights Company to M. Marry, an unimproved lot on the east side of Hobson street, 150 feet south of Ninth street, lot 50x128 feet. Consideration $1250.

Home Bought.

W. M. Riley has purchased from A. R. Brown, a lot 50x150 feet on the west side of Elden avenue, between Twelfth and Pico streets, with an eight-room two-story frame dwelling. The price reported is $5200.

Buys Apartments.

H. G. Cotton has purchased from U. S. House, through the agency of W. B. Merwin & Co., a lot on the north side of Seventh street, 125 feet east of Witmer street. It has a frontage of 52 feet and a depth of 120 feet, and is improved with a two-story frame building that contains four five-room apartments. The price reported is $15,000.

Pasadena Sale.

The Thum Brothers have sold to Colin Stewart the building and grounds in Pasadena known as the Overland Club property. The reported price was $54,000. The land fronts 154 feet on Colorado and 200 feet on Los Robles. It is said that Mr. Stewart is talking of erecting a fine apartment house on this ground.

Business Here.

B. O. Miller has bought a lot 60x120 feet at the northwest corner of Fifteenth and Hill streets, with an 8-room and a 6-room house, the reported price being $30,000.

Buy Big Acreage.

Sentous Bros. have sold through the Sentous Realty Company several parcels of land held by the Sentous family for more than a generation past, amounting in all to 538 acres. The land is about a mile east of Inglewood, and joins the lands of E. J. Baldwin on the west. The buyers are a syndicate headed by George W. Wilson and M. Kalisher of Los Angeles. The sale so far is on private terms, but will be about $200 an acre to the syndicate.

This acreage fortunately is not to be cut up into 50-foot lots. It will probably be subdivided into tracts of considerable size for actual use by actual settlers.

By the Sea.

A large seashore sale of recent date is reported of 725 acres lying south of Hermosa and back from the beach a quarter of a mile. The Los Angeles Securities Company is said to have paid $145,000 for the tract.

AT THE THEATERS.

WHAT the stage of today needs, as well as actors, is competent stage managers.

In these times of no-competition, when the syndicate and anti-syndicate forces have cornered everything into their respective camps, the development of the individual actor is left entirely to the individual actor himself; those who by dint of hard study or innate talent and knowledge of the proper methods rise to heights above mediocrity are featured and "supported," in an indifferent manner, by companies of hastily gathered and ill-fitting lesser actors and actresses.

There are few David Belascos in the world, and when such a one is forced to undertake broad managership, play-writing and play-staging on a wholesale basis, his minuter direction is apt to suffer in consequence. The days were when David Belasco had time to take a red-haired, spunky woman and by virtue of absolute intellectual beating create a great emotional actresses from her substance, but since Mrs. Carter Mr. Belasco has made few others. True, he found Blanche Bates and David Warfield, and much credit is due his sagacity for those discoveries.

There is just as much talent in the world today as half a century ago, despite the monotonous melancholy of croakers after the palmy days. The difference is that in those times the day was not rushed so hurriedly to its conclusion. The playgoing public were not crying after a new production a week. The great man had more time to spend in staging his plays, and drilling the minor ones in their lines and situations.

The great actor is not born, any more than the great singer. Great dramatic ability may be inherent, as may be a magnificent equipment of vocal chords, but it takes long, tedious training to bring either to the full fruition of art. "Il bel canto," the melodic art of the Italians, is nothing more than time and the right method, and in the same way the perfect histrionic assumptions of our greatest actors only illustrate an infinite capacity for taking pains.

Nowadays there is a cut-and-dried method for doing everything—have you not noticed that in actorial speech and gesture? Originality is not especially encouraged. The comic-opera tenor with a sword flourishes it just as every other comic-opera tenor flourishes his; the ordinary actor drinks out of a goblet in just the impossible manner that every other ordinary actor drinks.

Originality is not encouraged, because the stage manager of today has little time for originality. Consolidation of interests has brought about sameness. The present-day actor is machine made, just as the ordinary shoe is machine made, and so shoes and actors are alike in this, that the resemblances of shoe to shoe and actor to actor are very striking.

The ideal stage manager is the man who works not only for smooth ensemble, but to bring out the talents of the individual players. Naturally enough, where a stage manager seizes a company with which he is unacquainted, hurries them through rehearsals and out into a production, and then bids them farewell, there is little time for any of this.

How many young men and women start out in stage careers with high ambitions, only to be smothered in the press after a few seasons, and forever thereafter are content to go along in the routine, filling in here and there "acceptably," as the critics say, with their high hopes asleep in the slumber that knows no awakening.

Only in extraordinary instances does real talent force its way through privations, bitter disappointment, financial disaster and even poverty, to recognition and artistic success. One young man, frowned down upon as a pestiferous nonentity, persevered in sunshine and in rain, made money where he could and half-starved when he could not, sticking the while to his high notions of artistic honor, and at last came out as the great Richard Mansfield—but for one Mansfield, and there is only one, there are a thousand failures.

The good stage manager is the encourager of latent but timid talent. How many deserving people the late Augustin Daly ever helped upward to the outskirts of fame only the kind recording angel will ever know, but Mr. Daly's classic atmosphere passed away with him, and there are too few men of like minds.

The secret of it all is, when you sum it up, that great art does not lie in rules and books. There is no correspondence course that can make a Hamlet, or list of commandments that will shape a Lear. Genius is always original, and the kindest service that the stage can afford a rising actor of unlimited possibilities is the care, direction and advice of a competent and well-disposed stage director.

There are geniuses spoiled, you know, just as many in this day and age as ever before. America had a Bernhardt in Nance O'Neill—who will be in Los Angeles shortly—but faulty methods have veiled efforts that would have been revelations, and so only at times does O'Neill's genius flash forth in lightning-like brilliance—as in Lady Macbeth, or that very ordinary consumptive person, Camille.

THE WEEK.

The Mason Operahouse offers a double bill. Tomorrow evening William H. Crane, one of the pillars of American comedy, will be seen at the Mason in Broadhurst and Dazey's sketch, "An American Lord." The pivotal character of the play is John Brewster, Dakota hotel man. Brewster, though his ancestors were English, is himself American through and through, and is horrified and perplexed, just as he is about to run for Congress, that he is the heir of a great English title and estate. He would readily give up the title, but the estate is valuable, and he accordingly goes to England, becomes a Lord, and gets into many laughable situations. Mr. Crane's leading woman is the well-known actress Hilda Spong, and the support seems fair. The engagement is for Monday and Tuesday only, with a Wednesday matinee.

On Wednesday evening Alice Neilson will be seen at the Mason in Donizetti's "Don Pasquale." The opera will be given in complete form by Miss Neilson and her assisting company, which is allegedly composed of capable singers. Miss Neilson will probably be heard again on Friday evening and at the Saturday matinee.

The Belasco offering for the current week will be "Mrs. Deering's Divorce," which was made known to theater-goers of this country two seasons ago by Mrs. Langtry.

"Mrs. Deering's Divorce" is a comedy of manners and customs as they are today, and in ingeniously devised satire shows a society party in a furious game of bridge whist.

Eugenia Thais Lawton will have the original Langtry part.

The "Road Show" will commence its second week at the Orpheum tomorrow night, the aggregation being augmented by Edward Davis and his company, one of the largest companies in vaudeville, presenting Mr. Davis's own two-scene tragedy, "The Unmasking." The piece has scored a hit in the north.

The musical numbers of the various teams will be changed.

"Shenandoah" will be revived by the Burbank Theater Company today. Its last presentation was during the Neill régime, when it played to unusual business. The various members of the company have congenial roles, and a large extra force will be employed.

"Caught In the Web" is the new melodrama at the Grand Operahouse this week. It will be presented by a capable company. It is written by Joseph LeBrandt, author of "The Stroke of Twelve."

The Delacour-Fields Company will present a new offering at Fischer's in the three-act farce comedy, "A Breezy Time."

The new vaudeville bill at the Unique will be headed by the Lewises, expert rifle shots.

Frederick Warde's Lectures.

The Men's Club of Christ Church is making a determined effort to secure a clubhouse for themselves, and to assist their finances they have arranged a lecture course to be given by the Shakesperean actor Frederick Warde during the coming week, at Dobinson Auditorium.

The subjects are as follows: Monday, Shakespeare and his plays; Tuesday, a recital of "Hamlet." Wednesday matinée, the Wit and Wisdom of Shakespeare's Fools; Wednesday night, a recital of "Julius Caesar;" Thursday, Shakespeare as the Apostle of Christianity; Friday, a recital of "The Merchant of Venice;" Saturday matinée, Shakespeare's Art of Oratory; Saturday night, "Macbeth."

Bernhardt's Repertoire.

"Adrienne le Couvreur" is a new play in six acts by Mme. Bernhardt herself. Upon the same old theme of the great French actress, which was once so famously told in drama by M. Ernest Legouve and Scribe. Mme. Bernhardt also deals with the love affair of Adrienne and Maurice, Count de Saxe; but makes the role of Adrienne even more sympathetic in her womanly appeal and demand for charity of judgment than she is in the well known play.

"Angelo" is one of the lesser known dramas of Victor Hugo, although one that has been decidedly popular upon the French stage in years past. The title role is that of a tyrant of Padua, who is under the constant espial of the terrible Council of Ten, which rules with such unseen and dreaded power. Angelo has for mistress the actress Tisbe (the role played by Sarah Bernhardt,) but he is also excessively jealous of his own wife, Catarina. The play concerns the efforts of Rodolfo to win from Angelo the affection of Catarina, in which he is aided by a mysterious spy, Honodel. Meanwhile Tisbe is infatuated with Rodolfo, and, actuated by the hatred of a double jealousy, she becomes Angelo's accomplice in a secret design to poison Catarina, who is suspected of infidelity. A crucifix reveals to Tisbe the fact that Catarina had saved once the life of Tisbe's mother, and in the end the actress gives Catarina a simple narcotic instead of poison, also planning the death of Angelo himself. Rodolfo mistakes her deeds, however, and stabs Tisbe. In her death throes the self-sacrificing Tisbe beholds the remorseful lovers happily united. This play is full of the exuberant and colorful romantic poetry of Hugo.

Nat Goodwin and Mr. Frohman have parted company. Mr. Frohman's management of the comedian came to an end with the failure of "The Beauty and the Barge." Goodwin is touring Europe for a play for himself.

Robert B. Mantell has announced that he will produce Stephen Phillips' "Nero" next season. He will also play "Louis XI.," Wolsey in "Henry VIII.," "Jack Cade," Mathias in "The Bells," and "Becket," the two latter secured from the Irving estate.

Forbes Robertson has been compelled to quit the stage, temporarily, by an obstinate attack of influenza, which has put an end to the run of Mrs. Ryley's comedy, "Mrs. Grundy," at the Scala Theater in London. It may be revived again, however, a little later on, although a new piece is spoken of.

Queen Margherita of Italy has written a play, at which she has been working for over two years. It will be published under a nom de plume. It is to be represented on the stage, however, and Duse will be the heroine. It is already exciting great interest in the Italian theatrical world. It is thought that it may represent phases of her husband's life including his tragic death, under assumed names of course.

Alfred Sutro will cross the Atlantic in order to be present at the first performance of his new four act comedy, "The Fascinating Mr. Vanderveldt," which takes place in New York on January 22. The principal roles in the piece have been allotted to Ellis Jeffreys, Lena Halliday, Essex Dane, Muriel Wylford and Constance Walton, together with Frank Worthing, Clause King, Arthur Lewis, Rudge Harding and Herbert Sleath. Charles Cartwright will produce the play.

A telegram from Berlin states, that it is possible that Mr. Beerbohm Tree and his company will pay a visit to Germany in April. A proposal to this effect has been made by the director of the Royal Theaters of Berlin to Mr. Tree and it is suggested that the plays produced at the New Operahouse should be "Julius Caesar," "The Tempest," "Richard III.," and "A Winter's Tale," and that the tour should include Hamburg, Leipsic, Munich and Cologne. No definite arrangement has been made.

"There is in France and, I suppose, in America," said Mme. Bernhardt recently, "a strong prejudice against the writing of dramas by actors. The reason for this is not far to seek. Usually the Thespian forgets everything else in her or his striving for purely theatrical effects. His or her knowledge of play writing has been learned not in highways and byways, but in the playhouses. His or her people do things that people do on the stage and nowhere else in the world."

Fred Walton, the celebrated English pantomimist, so relies upon his facial expression and his gestures for comedy that he does not speak a word in the performance of "The Babes and the Baron." While this production, now at the Lyric Theater, New York, was in Chicago, a woman who had applauded Mr. Walton loudly was heard to say: "I think he ought to be encouraged! Fancy his having the bravery to earn a living despite that terrible handicap! Almost any other dumb man would go into the streets and beg!"

Augustus Thomas, the playwright, and Lawrence D'Orsay, the actor, arrived in New York from Europe last week. The actor had been in Paris to consult with Mr. Thomas regarding his play "The Embassy Ball." Mr. D'Orsay produced the play some weeks ago on the road and it did not prove as successful as had been hoped. In fact, the piece was called in and its bookings canceled. Mr. D'Orsay then went abroad. As a result of this trip, Mr. Thomas has decided to make some radical changes in the play, the principal change being the excision of a large part of the political story which seemed to confuse auditors.

The announcement is made that Miss Eleanor Robson is to have a theater of her own in New York where, with the aid of a stock company, she will present new plays by Rostand, Jerome K. Jerome, and other less illustrious writers, as well as famous pieces by dead authors. All this has an agreeable sound, but unfortunately it is not wise to put too implicit a faith in the fulfillment of theatrical promises. All playgoers will be ready to welcome Miss Robson as a permanent New York attraction, to say nothing of the establishment of something dimly resembling a stock theater.

Mrs. Fiske, who is touring the country in her great "Leah Kleschna"—which London has been denied the opportunity of seeing—recently celebrated the tenth anniversary of her return to the stage. She had retired as Minnie Maddern, at the height of her popularity, and married Harrison Grey Fiske, proprietor of The Dramatic Mirror; but her reception as Nora in "A Doll's House" at a charity matinée induced her to bury her talents no longer, and in 1895 she reappeared at Lancaster, (Pa.,) as Marie Deloche. Mr. Fiske's management of the Manhattan Theater; the creation of a standard stock company, and Mrs. Fiske's triumphs in nineteen new characters logically followed.

We are now striving to become natural. Materlinck says: "The first think that strikes us in the drama of the day is the decay, one might say almost, the creeping paralysis, of external action. Next we note a very pronounced desire to penetrate deeper and deeper into human consciousness and place moral problems upon a high pedestal, and finally the search, still very timid and halting, for a kind of new beauty that shall be less abstract than was the old. It is certain that on the actual stage we have far fewer extraordinary and violent adventures. Bloodshed has grown less frequent, passions less turbulent; heroism has become less unbending, courage less material and less ferocious. It is seldom that cries are heard now, and tears are not often seen. It is in a small room, around a table close to the fire, that the joys and sorrows of mankind are decided. We suffer, or make others suffer, we love, we die there in our corner."

Not Immortal.

"Scrawnylox says he lives for his art."

"It's a good thing he does. If he didn't look after it, it certainly would die!"

The Drama—Music and Musicians—Brush and Pencil

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

ERNEST DOUGLAS, the new choir director of St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral, will take his place this morning, and assumes today general charge of all music pertaining to the services there.

Mr. Douglas is late director at the Episcopal Church of the Epiphany, in Worcester, Mass., and also later director of All Saint's Church, in Methuen. In addition he was director of music in St. John's Theological School at Cambridge and stood high in musical circles of the East.

His "specialty," if a church choir director may possess such a secular trait in his work, is the training of boys' voices, and in this he is accounted one of the experts of the United States.

LEONORA JACKSON, who will be heard here in concert, Tuesday evening.

As an organist he is of high rank, and has studied with the greatest teachers of Europe and America. St. Paul's feels—and rightly—that the parish has secured an unusual addition to its working force.

Leonora Jackson's Company.

On Tuesday evening Leonora Jackson, the violinist, will be heard in concert, with her company, at Simpson Auditorium. Miss Jackson has returned to America after an absence of three years in Europe, and she will appear under the auspices of the Los Angeles School Teachers' Association, the concert being managed by L. E. Behymer.

Her assisting artists include Sybil Sammis, a soprano, said to be unusually talented; Charles E. Clarke, Canadian baritone, and Alexander MacFayden, pianist.

The only date at present arranged is Tuesday evening of this week.

Treble Clef's Coming Concert.

The Treble Clef Club's first concert for this season will be given on Thursday evening, January 25, at Dobinson Auditorium. The principal soloist will be Tom Karl.

Miss Lillian Scanlon and Mrs. Basset will also be soloists, singing in Grieg's "Cloister Gate." Miss Helen Tappe will sing Max Bruch's "The Dawn," with violin obligato.

The choral numbers of the club are especially well chosen.

Taddeo Goes to Ellery.

Sig. Taddeo di Girolamo, former first trumpet and concert master of the Chiaffarelli band, has joined the Ellery forces at Venice, and will play his first concert there this afternoon. As a trumpet player Taddeo has never been equaled in this part of the country, for his tone unites great beauty with extraordinary ease and facility of execution.

After a separation of five years he is again under the management of the man who brought him to America. It was Domenico Palma whom Mr. Ellery sent to Italy to choose soloists for the band he was then organizing, and after some months' absence Palma returned with Signori Taddeo and Decimo, both of whom had been intimate friends at home, and had shared triumphs in the bands of San Severo and Torremaggiore.

In Taddeo and Palma Mr. Ellery now has an incomparable pair of sopranos, and preparations are to be made immediately for the rendition of the complete third and fourth acts of "Aida," while the last act of "Faust" is already in rehearsal.

Chutes Music.

Manfredo Chiaffarelli and his half-hundred Italians remain the musical feature of the Chutes, and two excellent programmes have been prepared for today. The chief matinee feature is the quartette from "Rigoletto," to be played by Signori DiMitris, Dante, Giulii and Bento. Others are the overture to "William Tell," Chiaffarelli's Indian march, Herbert's "Baltimore Centennial," the waltz from "Faust," a paraphrase on "Dixie," and as new productions Paul de Longpre's "Volunteers," and a trumpet solo by DiMitris from "La Forza del Destino." In the evening the entire third act of "Faust" will be the special feature, which will be given in the same list with the prelude and waltz. Other numbers are the Batiste organ offertoire, a new baritone solo by Giulii, Burgois "Oriental" march, De Longpre's waltz, "The Chimes of Normandy," and von Suppe's "Morning, Noon and Nigzt" overture.

Classical programmes are to be given in the evenings during the week.

Other attractions at the Chutes are Baldwin's captive balloon, which will make its initial trip today; Mme. Canihac's leopards, and Senor Byllica's seal show.

Bessie Abott's Triumph.

We have had tenors who started life as stage drivers and waiters. We have had singers who commenced their career in a café-chantant, but no doubt Bessie Abott is the first instance of a girl who plunked a banjo, sang "coon songs" with her sisters on the vaudeville stage, and then, within a few years, won a triumph at the Paris Opera, and has now been engaged by Mr. Conried for the Metropolitan Opera performances.

Miss Abott's real name is Pickens. She is said to be a member of the well-known Southern family of that name. She was born at Canton, N. Y. Her father was well-to-do, but lost his money, and so the sisters were obliged to go on the stage to support themselves. Bessie took the name of Abott.

The story that she owes her success largely to Jean de Reszke, the great tenor, is only in a measure true. As a matter of fact, Miss Abott is an American-taught singer, and owes her training to Mme. Frida Ashforth de Gebelé, one of the most noted vocal teachers in New York City, to whom she was brought by M. de Reszke.

It seems that Miss Abott met Jean de Reszke on a steamer going to England. She was about to play a vaudeville engagement at the Empire Music Hall, just after singing here with Chevalier in the burlesque "1492." She had also sung in the Christopher Columbus extravaganza.

On the steamer Jean de Reszke heard her sing some "coon songs," liked her voice and said to her: "You had better study for serious work."

Later, on his return to this country, when Miss Abott was also here, he placed her under the care of Mme. Ashforth, and said, at the time, that he thought the foundation work could be better done here than abroad. On M. de Reszke's dictum, a rich man here provided the means to enable Miss Abott to study, though it is understood that Mme. Ashforth never received any recompense whatever for her work—which was done wholly out of good feeling, and also, perhaps, because of the hope of future reward.

Gadski Dissatisfied.

Says Musical America: Mme. Joanna Gadski has announced her intention of leaving America at the expiration of her concert tour in the spring, not to return. This determination is said to be due to her disappointment at not being engaged for the Metropolitan Operahouse—a difference in the ideas of salary between the singer and Director Conried being the cause.

After singing in Boston, Mme. Gadski will fill engagements for sixty concerts in different parts of the country, concluding her season at the Cincinnati Musical Festival. Early in May she will sail for Europe.

At her apartments in the Hotel Cambridge, New York, surrounded by beautiful hothouse flowers, the singer told her plans and reasons which led her to renounce appearing again here in opera in the many roles in which she became famous.

"Why should I go backward?" demanded Mme. Gadski. "Why should I accept offers at half what I received under Grau? If I am to go backward instead of forward wherefore all my study and painstaking? It is said that I sing in Europe at prices lower than here. True, but there are many reasons why. There a singer is engaged by the year and sings only in one language, while here I sing my roles in French, Italian or German, as the case may be.

"I have no reason to desire leaving America. On the contrary, it is here where I have won my triumphs and where I have a host of friends. But under present conditions there is nothing left for me to do. Mr. Conried seems to think it is good business to reduce his complement of stars, and now he has only Eames and Nordica. I do not feel that I can consistently lower the standard I have raised and which Mr. Grau never questioned, so that is why I am saying good-by, but I hate to go."

Mme. Gadski, in May, will go to London, where she will sing in the Ring Cycle at Covent Garden, and from there to Munich, Berlin, Frankfort-on-Main, and so on through the big cities of Europe.

"In any case," said Mme. Gadski in parting, "we do not need the money, as my husband has a good business and the returns from my last concert tour are more than double what I would have had had I continued to sing in opera. I want to say 'farewell' and to thank every one who has been good to me."

ERNEST DOUGLAS,
new choir-master of St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral.

Art and Artists.

BY ANTONY E. ANDERSON.

Leonardo Da Vinci.

Lifelong he strove to fathom science, art,
The wisdom of the ages, and the ways
He best the laws of beauty might impart,
More wonderful to make those ancient days.

But vain his service, and too high his aim
For aught but dreams. Yet, though he failed the while—
His griefs were solaced, had he known his fame
Should live forever in a woman's smile!

—[Charlotte Becker, in The Critic.

The Blanchard Exhibit.

The growing interest in art and art matters in Los Angeles becomes more and more evident as the weeks go by. We are asked to go and see some new exhibit at very frequent intervals—now in a painter's own studio, now in one of the smaller galleries, and every little while in the most important gallery of them all—as regards size, at any rate—the Blanchard.

Then, too, there are projects on foot of a life class about to be started here, and of a class in out-door sketching about to sally forth in some other place. The women's clubs are likewise enlisting in the cause. They are having many lectures and papers on art—more, it seems to me, than formerly. These deal quite as often with technique and reminiscence as with matters of art biography and history; in short, they point toward a wholesome interest in art for its own sake, not for that superficial information about periods and dates which is too often nothing but pose and pedantry. We are learning, at last, that husks are not a nutritious diet—that we can't grow on them.

All this is very encouraging, yet it is dangerous to self-satisfaction, especially among the artists themselves. Our artistic taste is improving. In future, when we are bidden to a banquet, our host may count on many that are ultra-fastidious among his guests—and even on a few that are epicures. Remember, then, O, ye painters, that we would rather go hungry and thirsty for art than try to satisfy ourselves with what is flavorless and poor!

The exhibition which Mr. Blanchard opened free of charge to the public on Thursday of last week, and which will continue for a number of weeks, is both varied and miscellaneous, so every one ought to find something to his liking. As a matter of fact, every one does, though no doubt there are a few who find not everything, nor nearly everything, to their taste. Some of the pictures shown are very, very good, and some are—well, pretty bad. There was no jury of selection, I believe, and this fact, of course, accounts for a few flagrant mistakes.

The pictures that first strike the eye on entering the gallery are the group of twenty-six which occupy the entire south wall, and the "Matilija," which has a shrine of its own. All these are from the brush of J. Bond Francisco.

"Matilija" is without doubt, Mr. Francisco's most important landscape. It has a well-considered foreground and a fairly-successful sky. But the lighting of it is unfortunate, partaking of artifice rather than art. Nor does the artifice work well. The strong electric light thrown upon one corner makes the sky act like a tin reflector. As a discriminating bystander remarked in my hearing, "It's a very fine yellow electric light, but it doesn't really illuminate the picture—it throws it into doubt and darkness." The truth is, "Matilija" can stand on its own merits. Then why this misleading light?

The most interesting of Mr. Francisco's smaller canvases are those which, apparently, have been painted almost entirely out-of-doors. The others seem to have been worked over too much in the studio, "doctored," and not always to their betterment. Mr. Francisco paints with much facility, and he knows almost too many rules for the making of a picture. The result is, very often, something a little theatrical, a little crude, a little unreal. He has been satisfied, it seems to me, to play to the gallery—when, almost certainly, he might have taken himself in hand and satisfied the pit.

"Busted" is one of Mr. Francisco's very best canvases, sincere, carefully thought out, painted with conviction. The same is true of "Woods, Ojai Valley," a very close and charming study of trees and rocks, truthful in color and full of the out-door feeling. "A Windy Afternoon" shows a hillside painted in very delicate tones of yellowish grays. "Landscape Near Los Angeles" is also a bit of nature well translated into paint, and the same may be said of "The Hillside." The head of the "Algerian Musician" is simply and effectively done, but the flowing robes have almost no suggestion of the figure that must be under them. "The Back Door" is direct and sunny, painted because Mr. Francisco loved the peaceful quiet of the homely scene.

On the north wall, directly opposite Mr. Francisco's, hang a few canvases by other Los Angeles painters. Of these, Elizabeth Borglum's "Summer Moon Over Sierra Madre Mountains" is one of the most striking. The theme is a difficult one, but the deep sky is full of vibration, and the landscape, lying low, has all the mystery of a summer night.

Eugene Torrey shows a large water color, one that the public has seen before in this gallery, and which I have already mentioned. Its title is "The Storm." Its grays are very beautiful. N. L. de Nubila has an interesting landscape, "San Fernando Valley," and Nona L. White shows a very skilfully painted study of "Bride Roses" which has all the charm of perfect harmony. Marian Crandell's "Roses," too, is well done. Detleff Sammann's "Gold of Ophir Roses" are brilliant and glowing, and exquisite in color, but the foliage strikes one as being restless and spotty in effect.

We are glad to see once again Lillian Drain's decorative bit, "The Orange Drape." Other interesting canvases are "Tokay Grapes," by Jessie M. Washburn, whose background is perhaps a trifle obtrusive and "Road in Sonoma County," by Marian Shirin, a well painted little water color that makes no great pretensions. H. M. Howard shows two small water colors of much atmospheric charm, "Liner Leaving Liverpool" and "Schooner in Fog."

Emily H. White and Eloise Polk McGill both show interesting miniatures, and Frank F. Stone has a number of casts in the round and in bas-relief. Of these, the most striking are an excellent plaster bust of John Ruskin and a bronze bust of Charles Kendall Adams. Both are strong in character.

The loan pictures, which hang together on one wall, suffer from the "job-lot" look of their frames, which are all of gleaming gold and look almost identically alike. In other words, you see the frames before you see the pictures, which is probably not what either the painters or their exhibitors exactly intended. Yet, when you forget the obtrusive frames, you find some exceedingly good pictures in the collection, notably "A Spaniard" and "An Episode of Toledo," both by E. P. Dalman, and both exquisitely painted, full of that subtle thing known as "quality," and which makes great art. Other beautiful canvases on this wall are "Cornfield Near Dartmouth," by Henry E. Kinnaird; "Merino Sheep," by Charles T. Phelan; and "Meregessy Luggers," by Fritz Althaus.

In the smaller gallery will be found a number of pictures from the Wymetal collection of Old Masters. The most noteworthy of these is a "Moonlight Scene" by Aart Van Der Neer.

On the whole, the galleries which Mr. Blanchard has so generously thrown open to the public for the next few weeks, are well worth visiting, not once but many times, for improvement and pleasure. All the pictures are worthy of study, though some perhaps, must serve as warnings rather than examples.

ART NOTES.

Frank Elwin Evans has just opened a studio at 521 South Olive street, where he will have an evening class in drawing from the model, and also a landscape sketch class which will make trips into the country. Mr. Evans has studied in San Francisco and Berlin.

Carl Oscar Borg's big picture of "A Foggy Day in San Pedro Harbor" is being shown in the Little Corner of Local Art. Marion Holden Pope has also put a few more of her etchings there.

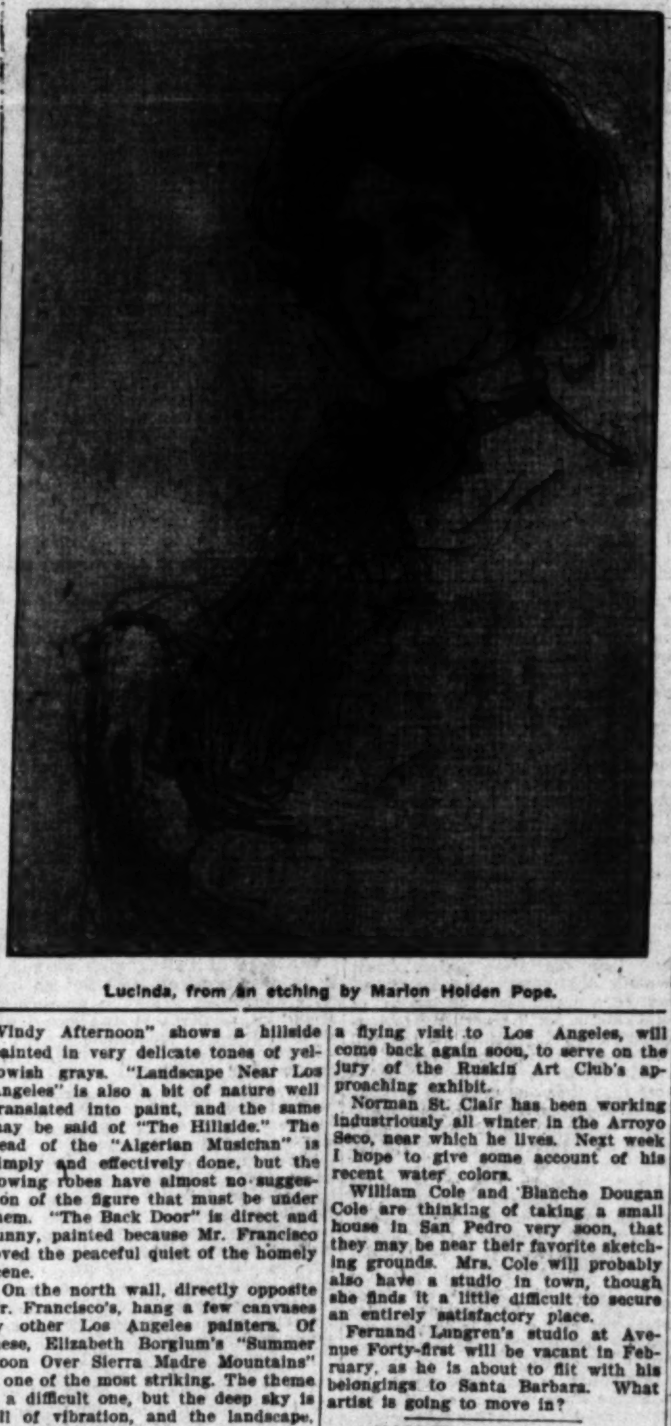
Hanson Puthuff is working industriously on a "Portrait of a Young Lady." When finished, this promises to be one of the most important canvases he has yet painted.

William Wendt, who recently made a flying visit to Los Angeles, will come back again soon, to serve on the jury of the Ruskin Art Club's approaching exhibit.

Norman St. Clair has been working industriously all winter in the Arroyo Seco, near which he lives. Next week I hope to give some account of his recent water colors.

William Cole and Blanche Dougan Cole are thinking of taking a small house in San Pedro very soon, that they may be near their favorite sketching grounds. Mrs. Cole will probably also have a studio in town, though she finds it a little difficult to secure an entirely satisfactory place.

Fernand Lungren's studio at Avenue Forty-first will be vacant in February, as he is about to flit with his belongings to Santa Barbara. What artist is going to move in?



Lucinda, from an etching by Marion Holden Pope.

MOORE'S FIDELIA BAND.

Following is the programme of Moore's Fidelia Band at Eastlake Park this afternoon: March, "The Earl King," (Sommers;) valse, "Sympathy," (Mezzocapo;) fantasia, "Reminiscences of Verdi," (Godfrey;) march from "Suite Poetique," (Jos. Block;) Highland patrol, "The Wee McGriegor," (Amers;) overture, "Rosamunde," (Schubert;) idyle, "Blinnengefluster," (Von Blon;) processional music from "Lohengrin," (Wagner;) Grand Popular Medley, (Boettger;) finale, selected.

[illegible] women who are prominent in arrangements for the cat show to be given January 18, 19 and 20.

EVENTS OF THE WEEK.

PEDIGREED cats are the latest fad of the smart set, and the bushy-tailed long-coated pussies bid fair to usurp the long-established place of the petted lap dog.

Society women of the city are planning to make the cat show, which is to take place on January 18, 19 and 20 at Chutes Park, a fine affair. The beautiful long-haired pets, which so many of the society women have purchased, are treated to milk-and-egg diets, and their silken coats are brushed and combed regularly that they may appear

[illegible] at this, the first show of [illegible] given in this part of the [illegible]

[illegible] the kindness of handsome [illegible] Maier, women of the South[illegible] Cat Club were enabled [illegible] the Chutes Theater for exhibi[illegible]. Mrs. Maier is a member [illegible] the club, and one of the cat [illegible], and the beautiful long-[illegible] pet which she owns is said to be [illegible] gorgeous ever brought here. [illegible] named Blue Bonnie, and is a [illegible], with green eyes and a tail [illegible] about ten inches across. [illegible] Mrs. Maier purchased this [illegible] while on their honeymoon trip [illegible] ago from Mrs. Colburn, a noted [illegible] of the East, and he has a [illegible] that dates back a hundred [illegible] his grandfather having had the [illegible] of riding over the great [illegible] Desert on a camel's back, he [illegible] safely incased in a basket. [illegible] will be ensconced in a fancy [illegible], softly padded with eiderdown [illegible] with gorgeous satin.

[illegible] show has been divided into three days—the first designated as [illegible] day," the second as "society [illegible]" and the third "children's day." [illegible] the show will prove a drawing [illegible] is a surety, since so many society [illegible] are interesting themselves in [illegible]. Los Angeles is a "city of [illegible]" and if the owners of these pets [illegible] interested in the project, at [illegible] will be on exhibition.

[illegible] which will prove of special [illegible] are the Siamese pair, belong[illegible] Mrs. M. M. Seward of Pough[illegible] N. Y., who is passing the [illegible]. NOTABLE among the affairs of the week which have occupied the attention of the smart set was the first dinner-dance of the season given at the Country Club Tuesday night. The affair was delightful in every way. Rose, pink, and green formed the color scheme of decoration of the tables, these colors being deftly carried out in Papa Gontier roses and delicate asparagus ferns, combined with pale green satin ribbons and candles. Broad bands of the ribbon were caught across the tables and terminated in silver candelabra bearing tapers delicately shaded in pale rose color. The veranda overlooking the lake was enclosed and made attractive with potted palms and feathery ferns. Arend's orchestra of Los Angeles played during the dinner and for the dancing following. Seated at Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Jardine's table were Mr. and Mrs. Perkins, Capt. and Mrs. H. H. Sinclair, Miss Marion Armstrong and Miss Marjorie Sinclair. At Mr. and Mrs. John B. One of the most unique affairs of the month was the luncheon given Monday afternoon by Mrs. Benjamin Page and Miss Elizabeth Blakeslee at their home on West California street. The guests were the members of the Monday afternoon Club and a few other friends. The affair took the form of a camp luncheon and from the embryo mountain in the center of the table to the old red table cloth and camp dishes the affair was carried out in character. The menu comprised the delicacies in highest favor around the campfire, and the bon bons were in the form of chocolate acorns. Miniature deer formed the place favors. Following lucheon Miss Blakeslee entertained the guests with an account of her recent Eastern and Southern trip. Mrs. G. I. Gibbs will be the next hostess, entertaining the club with a luncheon in honor of Madame Gibbs who is here for the winter, and is the house guest of her daughter-in-law.

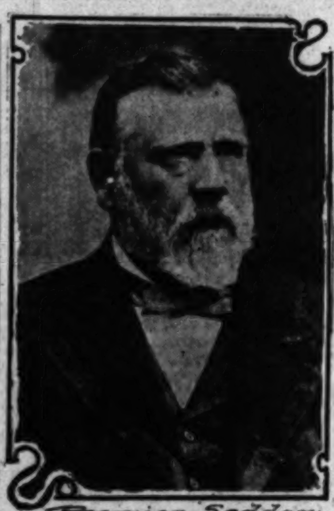
AN INTERVIEW WITH THE PREMIER OF NEW ZEALAND, MR. SEDDON.

BY ALLEN KELLY.

[SPECIAL COMMISSIONER OF THE TIMES.]

IX.



Government House

Seat of government in New Zealand and man at the helm.

"I AM the product of a strike," said the Premier of New Zealand, a burly, gray figure of a man, sitting upon the hotel porch at Whakarewarewa, and looking with keen blue eyes from under shaggy brows, far across Rotorua, far beyond the sunset horizon, into the recent past that is this new nation's ancient history.

"We had a great strike here—only one—and shall have no more, please God. It was the maritime strike, a struggle between the sailors and dock laborers on one side and ship-owners on the other. The people were not with the strikers, and they were defeated. But the defeat was not a just settlement of the dispute. Nobody was satisfied with the conditions resulting from the struggle. The workers said to themselves: 'If this country is to be governed by and for the employers, it is no place for us and we will clear; and they left the country by thousands. Then the people saw that justice had not been done, and they went to the polls—the same people whose power had crushed the strike—and voted to have a government that would deal justly with the interests which had been at war and put an end to strikes. They sent Ballance, Mackenzie, Reeves, myself—who had been at one time a working miner—and others to Parliament, and we formed the first Liberal Labor government, and have been responsible for the political course of New Zealand from that time.

"To put an end to strikes, we passed the Arbitration Act, which compels organized labor and organized capital to settle their differences by conference and mutual concession, or take them into court and abide by judicial decision. The first case taken into the arbitration court produced a rather amusing situation. Both sides were suspicious and reticent. We allow no lawyers to appear in the cases and the employers and workers have to do their own talking. The employers were on their dignity, and the workers were sullenly silent. It was hard to induce them to say anything at first, but the court compelled the employers to make a full statement of the condition of their business, their expenses and their profits, and when the workers understood the matter and were convinced that the facts were before them, they reduced their demands and agreed to accept wages that would leave the employers a fair profit.

"In all our so-called labor legislation we have experimented for the correction of evils, and we have amended, modified and strengthened the laws as we have found necessary. I think the amendments made by the last Parliament to the Arbitration Act have perfected it, and that it is now in good working order. A severe penalty is now imposed for violation of the law. That is, the union which strikes against the terms of an award, or the employer who locks out his men may be punished by the court, from whose decision there is no appeal. I regard the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, as it now stands, a practical finality in that direction."

Here I interjected a question: "Does organized labor demand State control of industries, for the especial benefit and in the sole interest of the worker, in a spirit of antagonism to the employing class?"

The Premier replied: "No. The labor unions are very reasonable, and are not pressing unduly for special favors. The government has taken a firm stand against class favoritism, and made the unions understand that capital has rights and must be treated justly. We have shown them that it is right and necessary that capital should combine for efficient production, and we have always found the workers disposed to be reasonable when argued with and shown that their demands were going too far. When workers are unreasonable and exacting, it is usually because they have not been shown the other side. They must be shown so plainly that they can understand clearly both sides of the matter, and patient allowance must be made for any slowness they may show in getting around to a new point of view. Give them time and be frank with them, and they will ask only fair play.

"During the last fifteen years many acts have been passed to protect the workers and improve their conditions. These acts secure payment of wages; provide fair wages and fair working hours on public contracts, compensation for accidents, healthy and sanitary conditions in factories; prevent sweating and exploitation of child labor, and protect the worker from oppression. Unionism, from being an outlaw, has become the legalized guardian of labor, held to responsibility under the law, and our Industrial and Conciliation acts have secured the reign of industrial peace."

"Is New Zealand's ultimate political ideal the Socialist state?" I asked. "Are her statesmen consciously shaping their course in that direction?"

"No, we are not going toward what is called advanced socialism. There is none of the communistic spirit in our people, and as for changing anything by violent methods, there is not the slightest possibility of that. I presume our policy might be termed 'progressive socialism,' as we aim at social reforms which we believe will improve the condition of the worker and be beneficial to the colony. But we do not propose to extend state control beyond what is necessary to prevent injustice, and we do not propose at all to shut out private enterprise. We mean that capital shall perform its proper function, but that it shall not creat monopoly and shall not exploit labor or natural resources here as it has done in older countries. The state has gone into various lines of enterprise, not as a monopolist, but as a competitor. It operates coal mines, conducts life, fire and accident insurance; controls a bank, and competes in various ways with private enterprise. Its purpose in doing that is to regulate prices, premiums and interest charges by setting a standard, and it has reduced the rate of interest, cut down insurance premiums to reasonable figures, and checked extortion in many directions.

"When the State began the business of lending money, the ruling rate of interest was 8 per cent. The government loaned money to local bodies at 3½ and 4 per cent. and to settlers at 5 per cent., and since then interest has never been more than 1 per cent. above the government rate in New Zealand. Our aim has been to aid people in settling on the land by providing them with cheap money. The money on mortgage in the colony at present is about £52,000,000 ($256,000,000); and at a low calculation, since the Advances to Settlers Act was passed, there has been a saving to all borrowers in the colony of at least £8,000,000 or $40,000,000. The net advances made to settlers amount to £4,173,970, and the security is over £9,000,000. Crown tenants can now obtain advances up to three-fifths of the value of their leases, instead of only one-half, as before.

"The state has not gone into business as a lender of money, a manufacturer, a miner, a carrier and so on to make a profit. It is contended that private enterprise can do business more economically than government can. If that is true, there must be a profit for private capital doing business at government rates, and private capital is welcome to go ahead in competition with the government and make that profit. We did make an unexpected profit when we placed the credit of the colony behind the Bank of New Zealand to the extent of £5,000,000 to avert a great financial disaster in the panic years. The colony took shares in the bank, and those shares have doubled in value, resulting in a profit of about half a million pounds."

"Has the government contemplated further development of its banking business and making the bank which it controls a bank of issue?"

"That has been suggested, and there are some who advocate the establishment of a state bank of issue putting out notes based upon the security of the property of the people, but the idea is not popular. We have no intention of going into the banking business with a printing press and a bale of paper. Our people believe that the gold basis is the only safe one for the credit of the colony, and they are not disposed to go into financial experiments."

"It is said that your legislation and your state competition are driving away capital and discouraging investment in New Zealand enterprises. Is that so?"

"The only capital driven away is that which looks for more than a fair return. While there are, in other lands, opportunities for exploitation which promise sudden and enormous returns, speculative capital is not likely to flow toward New Zealand. But we do not need and do not desire capital of that kind. We are creating our own capital as fast as it can be absorbed in this new and small country. Our products bring us profits, and those profits are turned into capital. The wealth of New Zealand—its created capital—has increased £122,000,000, or $600,000,000, in the last fifteen years. We have no difficulty in getting such foreign capital as we need. Our loans are outside capital invested in the public works of New Zealand at reasonable interest, secured by the assets of the colony. We are doing what we can to keep at home the capital we create, and are succeeding fairly well. By our system of taxation we discourage absentee landlordism, for example. The absentee owner of land absorbs capital and draws it away from the country. We increase his taxes and make him sell out. He doesn't like it, of course, and he complains that we are driving capital out of the country when we cut his suction pipe."

"That leads naturally to the land question. Was nationalization of land the end aimed at by Ballance, Mackenzie and other members of the first Liberal Ministry, and has the government drifted away from that policy?"

"No, it was not the purpose of those men to realize the Socialist ideal of land nationalization. They were dealing with a condition which threatened land monopoly, and their idea was to check the drift toward a system like that of the Old World by getting people upon the crown lands at reasonable rents and keeping them there. To that end they established the various forms of leasehold tenure, and the perpetual lease has proved successful and popular. Of 21,000 tenants so located, 11,000 are now independent. Many of them borrowed of the state to improve their farms and have paid it off with their rent at a low rate of interest, so adjusted as to wipe out the principal of the debt in a term of years. Of late there has been an apparent increase of demand for extension of the freehold, but the land speculators and money-lenders are back of that; they want to get hold of the land through mortgages, and they can't work their schemes on lands held under lease from the crown."

"Do you fear that extension of freehold, or substitution of ownership for leasehold, would result in aggregation of large estates and in repetition of the Old World story of landlord and tenant?"

"That would be the result. We have had it already. Tracts have been sold in small lots to some hundreds of settlers under the optional purchase tenure and have been bought from them by one man at a few shillings an acre. The government has had to buy that land back at pounds an acre in order to cut it up again and place settlers upon it. We have endeavored to prevent aggregation of land into large holdings by limiting the area of crown lands sold to one person and by imposing the graduated land tax, but all sorts of tricks and subterfuges have been devised to defeat our purpose and evade the law. An owner of a large estate divides it into lots small enough to be exempt from the tax, sells the lots to members of his family, providing the purchase money himself; gets the transfers and records all straight on their face; hands back the money and takes mortgages, and gets that record technically straight; then takes back his money and works the estate as one property the same as before."

"If indirect methods have failed, do you contemplate an absolute direct limitation of freehold?"

"Precisely that," replied the Premier emphatically. "That is the ultimate solution. I have proposed to make 5000 acres the maximum area that a man may own, and if he buys any land over that, the transfer of title will not be recognized. I made that suggestion in the House, as a policy upon which to base further land legislation, and it met with general approval. We shall come to that soon. Of course we do not propose to confiscate land now held in larger tracts, but to make the law govern future acquisitions."

"It is to be inferred, Mr. Seddon, that your graduated land and income tax is not altogether popular."

"Naturally not with those who have to pay it," responded the big Premier with a hearty laugh. "That is human nature, and we have it to reckon with and make allowances for. The large landowners grumble furiously and think the country is going to the dogs, and they say hard things about me. But it is a just tax, and when we need more money we shall increase it. We exempt all improvements and created wealth. We put no tax upon enterprise or production, but we tax privilege. Our avowed aim is to make exclusive privilege unprofitable and to prevent the holding of land out of use. In the income tax, we aim at equality of sacrifice. It is the purpose of the government to lighten the burden of indirect taxation, which falls as heavily upon the poor man, who can ill afford to bear it, as upon the rich man to whom it is a trifle. By that I mean, of course, a reduction of customs duties on articles of general consumption."

A question designed to elicit from the Premier a general outline of the policies and functions of government, which would approximate his ideals, led him into a discussion of trade policies and of laws affecting the colony's commercial relations. New Zealand, he said, was placed at a disadvantage by her liberality in opening her ports to the ships of all nations and permitting them to engage in coastwise trade. "The United States," he said, "excludes our shipping from her coast trade, while at the same time her ships are free to enter our ports and compete with our coast traders. We do not complain so much of American competition, because the wages of American seamen are comparatively high, but the Swedes and other maritime people, whose seamen are underpaid, are doing harm to our merchant marine. I think we should follow the American example in navigation laws and permit only reciprocal trade. Only by retaliation can you bring about reciprocity. America wants our kauri gum, wool and some other products, and we want her cottons and various things not produced here. When the Panama Canal is opened, there will be closer trade connections, and there should be reciprocity between Great Britain and the United States. We can take American oil and products which would not interfere with England's trade, and generally reciprocal trade relations would be beneficial to all parties. I hope to see such arrangements concluded.

"I am a great admirer of your country, and desire to see New Zealand and America better acquainted. But it seems to me that your people are working under too high pressure and are not giving enough attention to the correction of evils which threaten to make serious trouble for them."

Reverting to the question which led to the digression on trade policies, the Premier said: "You ask what is my ideal of government. I hold that the chief function of government is to establish conditions which will reduce want and permit the very largest possible number of people to be healthy, happy, human beings. The life, the health, the morals, the intelligence of a nation count for more than riches, and I would rather have this country free from want and squalor and unemployed than the home of multi-millionaires. The extremes of poverty and wealth crush the self-respect of the poor and produce the arrogance of the idle rich, engendering class bitterness. We have tried to provide such social and economic conditions in this colony as will prevent that helpless subjection of one class to another which is the curse of older lands. We must be content to move slowly, to remove obstructions as we come to them, and to open the way for higher development of the people as a whole. All the experiments we have tried during the last fifteen years have been in the line of humanitarian legislation and practical, rather than theoretical reform. We are experimenting, not trying to make a government according to the rules laid down by doctrinaires and dogmatic theorists. When we make mistakes, we try to correct them; to retain what is good and reject that which does not work well."

"If you were President of the United States, Mr. Seddon, having the same power to shape legislation that you have as Premier of New Zealand, what would you do to 'bust the trusts?'"

"I would make violation of anti-trust laws a criminal offence, punishable by imprisonment. I would make it a crime to so conduct trade as to create monopoly of any necessary of life. That is the only way to reach the evil. It is futile to impose fines. The man who sees a possibility of making millions by violation of law at risk only of a money penalty will generally take the chance, but he will think twice before risking his personal freedom and the disgrace of criminal conviction. Your Inter-State commerce law has failed to control the trusts because the commission's decisions are not final and the board cannot enforce the penalty of imprisonment for violation of the law. When the penal clause was stricken from the law, all virtue went out of it.

"I propose to have a board here to deal with trusts and combinations in restraint of trade in food products and there is to be no appeal from the action of that board. Upon conviction, the board may impose the criminal penalty, and it will have power to enforce its judgments. The plan has been outlined by the government, and I think a bill embodying it will be passed by the next Parliament."

THE PREMIER.

Richard John Seddon has been Premier of New Zealand since 1893, and his opponents have no hope of ousting him at the election, which will be held before this letter reaches America. Physically and mentally he is a big man. He is 60 years of age, weighs 280 pounds, and is as full of energy as a dynamo. When he speaks, the deep rumble of his voice can be felt as well as heard, and no hostile crowd has yet succeeded in an effort to make noise enough to drown it. He was born on a Lancashire farm, went to Australia in 1863 as a certified mechanical engineer, and four years later joined in the rush to the gold diggings on the west coast of New Zealand, where he won the nickname of "Digger Dick," and acquired the experience which made him an associate member of the American Institute of Mining Engineers. From mining Mr. Seddon went into business as hotel-keeper, became successively member of Provincial Council, member of Board of Education and Mayor of Kumara, and in 1879 was elected to Parliament and has remained a member of the House ever since. He was Minister for Public Works in the Ballance Cabinet, and succeeded to the Premiership when Ballance died in 1893.

"King Dick," as the Premier is called affectionately by his supporters and resentfully by his opponents, is in every sense a man of the people, a democrat with the small "d." He is masterful, self-willed and often brusque, but approachable, plain in manner and habit, and kind-hearted, and as a politician he shapes his course by popular opinion. He moves only so fast and so far as he thinks the people want him to move. He does not try to drive the people; his place is that of a leader, but he does not get much ahead of the procession. The Premier's opponents say he is a demagogue, but there is no reason to think that he plays upon the prejudice and passions of the crowd to move it his way. Rather, it seems, he finds out where the crowd is going and takes that road. For example, Mr. Seddon does not believe in extension of freehold, but there is a strong movement in that direction and he has not declared a policy which would put him in opposition to public opinion. If the people want freehold, he will not deny them. The Premier's opponents say he trims to hold office, and they make the most of his inconsistencies, and charge him with insincerity and with love of political office for the sake of power and profit. It is not so easy to gauge motives. Possibly Mr. Seddon is only a shrewd politician without fixed principles or convictions. Perhaps he considers himself a representative of the people, and the people the real government, and aims to serve them and do their bidding. At all events, he does adjust himself to political conditions and keep step with the crowd, and I cannot see deep enough into the heart of a man to tell why he does it.

The Premier certainly is not a doctrinaire, and I doubt that he bothers his head much over theories of political economy or has close acquaintance with the various systems of social philosophy. He is neither a deep student nor an original thinker along socialistic lines, but he has a lot of common sense, is quick of mind, ready in his grasp of ideas, and has genius for sensing public opinion. He is of the people, and his perception of the processes of the popular mind seems to be instinctive.

In the government machine, dreamers like Tregear are the fire under the boiler, Parliament is the steam, Seddon is the piston, and the man with the ballot is the engineer.

It is said of "King Dick" that when he began his political career he could neither read nor write, and that he hired a tutor to remedy his illiteracy and fit him for Parliament. Probably the story is not true, for one unable to read could hardly have obtained at the age of 18 a Board of Trade certificate as an engineer, but it would be entirely creditable to him and quite characteristic if it were true. When he has a thing to do, he fits himself for the doing of it.

In his mining days, "Digger Dick's" massive physique and great strength made him a noted man in the goldfields, and his strength was always at the service of the weak and the oppressed, as many a bully of the camps had sorrowful reason to know. On one occasion he was whipped by a big fellow who had science as well as muscle, and Seddon determined to even up the score. He found a boxing instructor and practiced the art of fisticuffs daily for many months. When satisfied that he knew the game, he hunted up the big chap, picked a quarrel with him and gave him a thorough drubbing.

They say the Seddon government is corrupt, and the opposition talks of "Tammanyism" and calls upon the people to crush it. They don't know what "Tammanyism" means, but it is a good enough stick to beat a dog with. Nobody presumes to specify the charge of "corruption" as Americans understand it, and nobody having care for what he says or any sense of responsibility even intimates that Premier Seddon pouches public funds or works his office for "graft." He is not a rich man. He has not emulated Boss Croker. He lives in a modest house in an unfashionable quarter of Wellington, and puts on no "style" in his manner of living. Appreciation.

A certain Los Angeles artist has a pretty bungalow, which he recently tried to rent out, furnished. The pictures on the walls, however, many of which are from his own brush, were not to go with the house. He wanted them for himself.

The first applicant, a red and ponderous widow, was more than pleased with the bungalow. She looked about her with great satisfaction. The place suited her requirements in every particular. Her roving eyes lit upon a picture hung above the mantel—a wood interior in water colors, very deftly and beautifully painted. She went into ecstacies over it, and the unsuspecting artist listened with a pleased and flattered smile.

"Of course, that picture goes with the house?" she suggested, as she rose to leave.

"Oh, no," answered the artist hastily, "it's mine, you know. I must take all my pictures with me."

The woman was disappointed, and loudly said so. She tried expostulation and cajolery, but without success. The artist remained obdurate. So, at last, she left in a huff, declaring positively that she would not take the bungalow without the little picture.

The deal fell through, yet the painter was radiantly happy. Such sincere evidence of appreciation does not come often in a lifetime.

Gustatory.

William P. Cabell has a startling article on "What Various People Eat," in the magazine section of today's Times. Most of us, the Rambler hopes and believes, will not be led into an unseemly smacking of the lips over a perusal of our distant cousins' queer bills of fare.

A meat cake a la Russe, of juicy white ants, offers no titillating allurements to the average American palate, and the breast of boa constrictor, breaded, would probably go untasted and unregretted, even if put before us on a dish of Sevres. As for snails——!

Horse, however, is not so bad as you might suppose. The Rambler tried it once, ground fine, patted into a cake, and fried in fat, and found it a trifle disconcerting, but not really unpalatable. It was tough, though, and he did not ask for a second helping.

But queerer even than a dinner of crushed cockroaches was that light luncheon of red, round potato bugs, newly hatched, which a little friend of the Rambler's once partook of with undoubted relish.

Behind the Rambler's house, in the East, was a row of flourishing currant bushes, loaded with delicious fruit. Beside the bushes sprawled a potato patch, and this, too, alas! was loaded.

The small maid had tasted the currants, and had found them good. Here were loads of them, which could be reached with less trouble than those on the taller bushes. So she seated herself squarely among the vines, and began her feast, picking off the bugs one by one with her fat, pudgy fingers, and popping them into her rosy mouth.

Has the small child's palate no discrimination? Is the infant guided by sight alone in its search for delectable sustenance? Apparently so, for his little friend would undoubtedly have cleaned out the whole potato patch in one gustatory orgy if the horrified Rambler had not swooped to the rescue.

The child did not die, or get sick, or anything. She only wept loudly because of a genuine pleasure rudely snatched away and denied her. Shakespeare is very probably right, after all. "There's nothing good or bad, but thinking makes it so."

Ho, waiter! Bring on your fricaseed muskrat and your roast monkey! Who's afraid?

BITS OF VERSE.

"Saint Monica."

By the garden-beds of Ostia now together stand the twain,
Monica and her Augustine, gazing far across the main,
Towards the home-land of Numidia, hiding in the distance dim,
Where God parted them in sorrow, both to bring them nearer Him.

And the mother's prayer is answered, for their souls are side by side,
Where His peace flows in upon them with a full, eternal tide;
And Augustine's thought is blending with the murmur of the sea;
"Bless Thee, Lord, that we are restless, till we find our rest in Thee."

And their talk, the son and mother, leaning out above the flowers,
Is like lapse of angel-music, linking heaven's enraptured hours.
Hushed is all the song of Nature; hushed is care and passion's din;
In that hush they hear a welcome from the Highest: "Enter in!"

"What new mercy has befallen? Every earthly wish is gone:"
Monica half speaks, half muses; "Why should earthly life move on?
Ah! my son, what peace and gladness surging from this silence roll!
'Tis the Eternal Deep that answers to the deep within my soul!

"Not a sigh of homesick longing moves the stillness of my heart;
In the light of this great glory, unto God would I depart.
Though more dear thou art than ever, standing at Heaven's gate with me,
For the sweetness of His presence I could say farewell to thee!"

The Lure of Old Songs.

You were playing, sweet and low,
The old songs of long ago;
And the high lamp's crimson shade
Poured a softened light that made
Mystic shadows in your hair—
Shadows which were laughing there
As the shadows of the dawn
Leaped and laughed in days agone.

So you played—and so I dreamed
While the pranking firelight gleamed
In its race along the wall;
And I heard the boy days call
In the songs that thrilled my heart
With their subtly simple art—
As when practiced hands are swept
O'er a harp that long has slept.

Winding paths through meadowlands,
Brooks that sang on silver sands,
Bending branches of the trees,
Noontime chants of honeybees,
Drifting Indian summer haze,
Pelting snows of wintry days,
Wondrous stars that blazed above—
All this you knew nothing of,

Yet you played, and, playing, wrought
All the glories unforgot;
And the high lamp's ruddy glow
Where the glints swayed to and fro
Seemed some way to blend and blur
Into those fair days that were—
Led me backward, mile on mile,
To each golden olden while.

The Dreamer.

"There winds no path for you in all my ways!"
Thus cries the World, and moves with brisker pace—
"No room have I for you!" whilst o'er its face
A smile of pitying scorn an instant plays:
"Too many flocks to tend and herds to graze,
Too many wars to wage and schemes to trace,
Too many feet to start in fortune's chase,
Too much hard work—to trifle with your lays!"

Yet answers Life: "With me the dreamer dwells
As long as dew makes sweet the mignonette,
Or purple veils adorn the crag-gray fells,
Or misted sunbeams on bleak heights are set;
Or heart to heart its old-new story tells,
Or lips laugh joy, or eyes with tears are wet!"

The Seven Ages.

A little fun;
A blossom bordered

A getting tall,
And serious, too;
And then the school
To labor through.

Then blossom bordered Ways of love—
Just two on earth
And stars above.

Then to the altar,
Then away
To homely cares
Of every day.

Then joys untold,
Then new delight!
A baby crying
In the night.

Then something more
Than parent's glee—
A gran'child
Climbing on your knee.

And then to sleep;
Green sod above;
But life's worth living,
For the love.

The Bells of Shandon.

With deep affection and recollection
I often think of the Shandon bells,
Whose sounds so wild would, in days of childhood,
Fling round my cradle their magic spells.
On this I ponder, where'er I wander,
And thus grow fonder, sweet Cork, of thee;
With the bells of Shandon
That sound so grand on
The pleasant waters of the River Lee.

I have heard bells chiming full many a clime in,
Tolling sublimely in cathedral shrine;
While at a glibe rate brass tongues would vibrate,
But all their music spoke naught to thine;
For memory dwelling on each pround swelling
Of thy belfry knelling its bold notes free,
Made the bells of Shandon
Sound far more grand on
The pleasant waters of the River Lee.

I have heard bells tolling "old Adrian's mole" in,
Their thunder rolling from the Vatican,
With cymbal glorious, swinging uproarious,
In the gorgeous turrets of Notre Dame;
But the sounds were sweeter than the dome of Peter
Flings o'er the Tiber, pealing solemnly,
Oh the bells of Shandon
Sound far more grand on
The pleasant waters of the River Lee.

There's a bell in Moscow, while on tower and kiosko
In St. Sophia, the Turkman gets,
And loud in air, calls men to prayer,
From the tapering summit of tall minarets,
Such empty phantom, I freely grant them,
But there's an anthem more dear to me,
It's the bells of Shandon
That sound so grand on
The pleasant waters of the River Lee.

IMPORTS OF AUTOS.

One Thousand and Thirty-six Foreign-Made Machines Worth $4,150,000 Entered Here.

[New York Times:] With only five working days left to the local customhouse this year, the treasury officials were able yesterday to estimate the number and value of foreign automobiles entering the port of New York the past twelve months.

The estimate shows that the imports for the year will approximate 1036 machines with a total appraised value of $4,150,000. This record is phenomenal, especially when it is recalled that scarcely an automobile passed through the New York customhouse six years ago.

The government is a heavy gainer by the tremendous importations of machines, as the duty on autos has been collected at the rate of 45 per cent. ad valorem, making a revenue on this line of imports alone of nearly $1,067,500, which is sufficient to pay for one year the salaries of 532 government clerks rated at $2000.

As in the imports of precious stones, New York enjoys almost a monopoly in the entry of automobiles. While there are very small importations of cars at Boston, Philadelphia, and a few other ports, the number brought in elsewhere is too small to be considered. This city is the center of the automobile trade of the United States, and from here the cars are distributed all over the continent, including Canada and Mexico.

The wonderful growth of auto imports at New York is illustrated by official statistics issued by George W. Whitehead, the appraiser of the port. The appraiser's figures show that in the calendar year of 1904, 602 machines were brought in, with a value of $2,209,492, while in the preceding year, 1903, the imports numbered only 375, appraised at $1,300,000.

It will thus be seen that this year's imports almost treble those of two years ago. It is worth recalling that the automobile is of such recent origin that the present tariff law, the Dingley Act, although enacted in 1897, contains no mention of the motor car. So far as possible, the framers of the revenue law provided for all known commercial articles, but the auto was slighted.

The law does, however, provide that certain articles shall be assessed according to the component material of chief value, and it is under this provision that the customs officers collect duty at the rate of 45 per cent., which is the levy demanded on manufactures of metal. The rubber tires, as well as the engine and other parts of the automobile, come in for their share of duty.

The examination and appraisement of the machines is a process requiring patience on the part of the importer, and while the usual amount of red tape has to be run off the reel, it is only justice to the officials to say that they make every effort to expedite the passage of the cars through the appraiser's warehouse and the customhouse.

The demand for floor space at the Federal warehouse has become so great that it is considered probable that within a short time the Treasury Department will be under the necessity of either building or renting a structure for the sole use of machines in the custody of the government, for purposes of examination.

About every known type of foreign-built car has been entered through the local customhouse. There have been many racers, touring cars, and lighter machines brought in, including a small proportion of vehicles for distinctively business purposes. The latter class, it would appear, cannot compete to any extent with the products of American manufacturers.

While there is keen rivalry among the agents of the leading foreign makers, it was stated yesterday that honors are pretty evently divided as regards entries at New York. Most of the machines coming to this city from abroad are built in France, Germany, and Italy. The customhouse authorities say the imports for 1906 are sure to be far ahead of this year's fine showing.

ACTRESS MAY GET MILLION.

Chance Remains for Edna Wallace Hopper.

A Great Property Controlled in California.

State Court Has Ruled in the Contestant's Favor.

EDNA WALLACE HOPPER, actress who, defeated in British Columbia, has chance in California courts to win million dollars of Dunsmuir estate.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 12.—Though the decision of the Victoria Court of Appeals has just been rendered adversely to the interests of pretty Edna Wallace Hopper in her attempt to break the will of her stepfather. Alexander Dunsmuir, there still remains in California property estimated at $1,000,000, which must be awarded by the California courts, says the Bulletin. If Judge Coffey's decision in favor of the actress is upheld by the Supreme Court of the State, the Victoria decision does not lie in the matter in any way whatsoever.

Alexander Dunsmuir made most of his vast fortune in Wellington coal mines and the railroad which led to them was purchased by the Pacific Improvement Company. The stock involved is held in escrow to be delivered at a certain date and the award will probably be made in California. There is no real estate in this State, as that was all turned into money by the testator before the celebrated will was made.

The decision of the northern courts is not absolutely final, for there still remains an appeal to the Privy Council, which may decide to reverse the lower court after all. Judge Coffey in this city held that Dunsmuir was a resident of California and that the proponents had no right to probate the will in Victoria and afterwards come here for ancillary probate proceedings. An appeal was taken to the Supreme Court, which was still pending.

Counsel for the charming contestant in this city cannot tell exactly what the next step in the litigation will be. J. C. Campbell of Campbell, Metson & Campbell, announced this morning that there would soon be a conference of attorneys in San Francisco in which the future conduct of the case would be be outlined. Judge Coyne of New York, Sir Charles Tupper and Mr. Bodwell are expected shortly and they will be met by Attorneys Campbell, Cormack and Judge Burnett. The indications are that an appeal will be had from the Victoria decision and that the contest will be fought to the bitter end.

The judgments given yesterday at Victoria against the pretty actress and the mother of the deceased were very lengthy, that of Justices Hunter and Irving occupying two hours to read. The evidence of eighty eye-witnesses was reviewed for both parties, those for plaintiff stating in effect Dunsmuir was of unsound mind through excessive use of alcohol, those for defendant stating Dunsmuir possessed his faculties and business acumen.

The judgment stated all witnesses brought to impeach the will by plaintiff spoke only from short acquaintance with deceased or only as to isolated occasions when he was intoxicated. None told of dealings with him when sober by which his mental capacity could be judged. Eliminating all the evidence of parties at interest, employés, relatives and solicitors, there remained a score of fair-minded credible witnesses whose business, social and personal relations with Dunsmuir extended over large periods, most of the time dealing with the last two years of his life.

The evidence of William E. Mighell of the California Shipping Company and J. P. Taylor, coal dealer of San Francisco, was especially referred to as well as that of Messrs. Wharton, Gillespie, Palmer, Howard, Chandler, Young, Burns, Prather, Fink and the Fritschs, Bullens and Freemans, mostly San Francisco busines men, all referring to business dealings with Dunsmuir and all were of settled conviction that Dunsmuir was competent to manage his affairs, when not intoxicated; that he had good business capacity, was of obstinate and dictatorial nature, less likely to be influenced by others than the average man.

On Monday argument will take place regarding costs and the plaintiff's counsel will ask leave to appeal to the Privy Council of England, the court of last resort.

German railway porters are to study French and English during the present winter; scholarships are to be competed for, and the successful student is to be sent on a holiday tour of England.

GREW MISS LEWIS' HAIR AND WE CAN PROVE IT
The Great Danderine Never Fails to Produce the Desired Results

MISS Lewis' hair was very thin and it was less than two feet in length when she began using Danderine. She says her hair and scalp are now fairly teeming with new life and vigor.

That's the main secret of this great remedy's success as a hair grower. It enlivens, invigorates and fairly electrifies the hair glands and tissues of the scalp, causing unusual and unheard-of activity on the part of these two most important organs, resulting in a strenuous and continuous growth of the hair.

The following is a reproduction of Miss Lewis' last letter:

January 3, 1905.
Dear Doctor Knowlton:—
You know I told you in my first letter that my hair would not reach much below my shoulders, and that all of it together only made one tiny braid.
I am sending you my photograph, which I had taken at Stevens Bros. It tells the whole story better than I can tell it.
Everybody I know is using Danderine, so you see I am doing something to show my appreciation.
Sincerely yours, (Miss) EVA LEWIS.

Danderine makes the scalp healthy and fertile and keeps it so. It is the greatest scalp fertilizer and therefore the greatest hair-producing remedy the world has ever known. It is a natural food and a wholesome medicine for both the hair and scalp. Even a 25c bottle of it will put more genuine life in your hair than a gallon of any other hair tonic ever made. It shows results from the very start.

KING TEA IN TABLET FORM.

AMERICAN VS. CHINESE METHOD

Sanitary cleanliness is of prime importance in this modern age. When we are told that the greater amount of tea imported into the United States comes from very hot and unclean workshops of China where many unclean and unhealthy people are crammed together, while the American-grown tea is prepared by machinery, it seems that the American product should receive first consideration. Of course tea must be picked and sorted by hand, and so far Yankee ingenuity has not been able to solve these two problems, but the rest of the work is done by machinery.

The tea tablets, as prepared by the Department of Agriculture, are made from tea after it has been dried and rolled; it is then boiled, after which it is placed in small molds, and by means of great force compressed into small tablet form. So perfect are the operations of the machinery that it is stated that leaves can be picked from the plant at noon and in less than three hours they can be put through all the necessary operations—drying, boiling, and compression into tablet form—and set on the table ready to drink.

The introduction of tea into the United States was primarily brought about through the rivalry of the Chinese and British India tea growers. These two nations had for a long time been engaged in a heroic struggle for supremacy in the tea trade. While the Hindoos furnish a cheap class of labor they can not compete with the still cheaper labor of China; in order to meet the competition of the Chinese the British tea growers introduced modern and specially constructed machinery in place of the ancient manual operations of the followers of Confucius. The up-to-date British tea estate uses machinery in the whole process of tea making from the transportation of the fresh leaf from the gardens to the factory, to the final boxing of the finished product. The activity of India and China in the tea industry awakened similar interest in the United States more than a hundred years ago when the first tea plant was introduced and planted on a plantation near Charleston, S. C.

About 1852, through the Patent Office, the United States government collected tea seed in Asia and distributed it throughout the South Atlantic and Gulf States. Numerous small tea gardens of sufficient size to supply local wants were established through the effort of the Patent Office. These experiments, however, did not prove that tea raising was capable of being extended in the United States to an industrial undertaking. In the last quarter of the nineteenth century, however, the Department of Agriculture undertook experiments along this latter line and established an experimental station near Summerville, S. C. This undertaking was a failure, and Dr. Charles U. Shepard, at his own expense, renewed this plantation and for a number of years continued the experiments of the culture of tea. Later he received the assistance of the Department of Agriculture and now is in charge of the Pinehurst Tea Nursery.

AN AMERICAN TEA GARDEN.

The Pinehurst gardens consist of more than ninety acres planted to tea. What makes the American grown tea of such a fine quality is that the original tea for the Pinehurst gardens was secured from the celebrated Dragon's Pool estate near Hangchow, China. The output of the original Dragon's Pool tea gardens commands a very high price in local quarters and none of this product is ever exported to the large tea consuming countries. The experiments of the Department of Agriculture with tea gardens are opening a new field for colored labor in the south, for the picking of tea at Pinehurst is done by a carefully trained corps of colored children. They show great aptitude in this direction, instances being known of one child picking over fifty pounds of fine green leaf in a day. The average oriental can hardly exceed from twenty to thirty pounds per day. Another reason assigned for the difference in American grown tea from that of imported is that a change of climate and difference in cultivation and manufacture, have a tendency to effect the quality of tea when prepared for the table. The Pinehurst early season tea is considered more delicate and milder than that of cooler climates, while the autumn tea is stronger in color and taste and resembles the product from Southern China and India.

The people of the United States expend more than $40,000,000 a year for tea as against $150,000,000 for coffee and $1,200,000,000 for alcoholic beverages. This shows that there is an excellent field in this country for a home industry of tea raising; we consume approximately 75,000,000 pounds of tea annually, or a little less than one pound per capita. Even with this great consumption we consume only about one-sixth as much tea as the British. As a rule the finest quality of imported tea never reaches the United States, for the people here seem to look upon cheapness as a desideratum, cheap china and crockery holding out a rainbow to them and the quality of the tea being overlooked. While we do not get the cheapest kind of tea, nevertheless our importations are generally of inferior and cheap teas, and few consignments of the better quality are imported for those who are willing to pay for them.

CURIOS AND ODDITIES.

SOME INTERESTING THINGS THAT MOST PEOPLE DO NOT KNOW.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

How the Eskimo Smokes.

The explorer, looking out of the club window at the driving snow, said this weather reminded him of the Eskimos.

"No man is fonder of tobacco than an Eskimo," he said, as he lighted a cigarette. "The Eskimo depends for his tobacco solely on the white man. For a pound of it he would sell his oldest son.

"It is odd to see an Eskimo smoke. He chops his tobacco fine and mixes it with chopped willow twigs, so as to make it go farther. Then he cleans out with a picker of bone the small stone bowl of his pipe, and then he plucks a lock of hair from his deerskin suit and rams it down in the bottom of the pipe-bowl, so as to prevent any of the finely chopped tobacco from escaping into the stem.

"Finally he lights the pipe and smokes it in a swift series of long, strong puffs, so that there may be no waste. Each puff is inhaled deep down into the lungs, and the first puff's smoke is still streaming from the nostrils long after another puff has been started. There must be, you see, no waste. There must be none of that vain combustion of tobacco without benefit to the smoker which goes on continually among us.

"Often the most experienced Eskimo will smoke so hard and fast that tears will stream from his eyes, he will cough violently, and sometimes vertigo and nausea will seize him."

False Teeth for Sailors—Reinforced.

A dentist held up a set of false teeth.

"See this stay here," he said, "this brace, and this reinforcement? The set is for a sailor, and sailors' false teeth are always made extra strong, on account of the unconquerable salt beef and the granite ship-biscuit that are eaten at sea.

"On his beef and biscuit a sailor would crush ordinary false teeth in no time. He would chew them up and swallow them in mistake for ordinary food.

"Hence false teeth for sea use are always reinforced with all manner of braces and backstays."

Eggs Indeed.

He rushed to the incubator, studied its thermometer, uttered a despairing cry, and turned the lamp a little higher.

"Always, day and night," he said, "the temperature must remain uniform. Otherwise the infernal eggs spoil, and the chicks don't hatch."

He frowned gloomily.

"If only chicken eggs were like silkworm eggs or snail eggs," he said. "Then there would be money in the incubator business truly.

"Spallanzani time and again exposed silkworm eggs to a temperature of 38 degrees below zero. He left them in this temperature five hours. Afterward they hatched, everyone of them.

"Snail eggs are still more remarkable. They may be dried in a furnace till they are scarcely visible, till they are shriveled up, apparently, to an ash; and as soon as the air gets at them again they regain their original size and, in due course ,the young snails are born."

Ostriches on Shipboard.

"Ostriches are terrible creatures to have aboard ship in a storm," said a sailor. "Knocked about by the waves, they fall and break their legs.

"We once carried eight superb ostriches. They were good sailors. Their sea appetites were fine. But two days from port a nasty gale overtook us.

"And then it was pitiful to see those ostriches. The ship's lurches and ducks knocked them off their pins, sent them rolling back and forth, to and fro, wildly, helplessly.

"Imagine a dozen ostriches, now on their feet, then—bang—on their backs, their long legs in the air, rolling every which way. What you'd expect to happen happened, of course. Their legs broke. You could hear above the storm the sharp crack of the splitting bone.

"Of these twelve fine ostriches, only two reached port alive."

Lenses on Tobacco Leaves.

"Little yellow specks on the wrapper are positive indications of a cigar's excellence. Choose a specked cigar, and you can't go wrong."

The speaker was a skate salesman. The tobacco salesman laughed at him.

"Are you a victim of that error, too?" he said. "Listen, and I'll tell you all about those little yellow specks.

"We are in Cuba. In mile-long rows grow the tobacco plants in a blinding sunlight. Suddenly the sky is overcast, a shower falls. Then the clouds disappear, and the sun shines again upon plants dotted here and there with immense raindrops—raindrops peculiar in Cuba, as large as the largest pearls.

"These drops become burning-glasses in the sunlight. The same real lenses, they concentrate the sun's heat, and on the leaf beneath them the little specks that you venerate are burnt. These little yellow specks indicate the tobacco's quality no more than freckles on a man's nose indicate his ability.

"To choose cigars by their specks is as foolish as it would be to choose salesmen by their freckles."

Chronic indigestion, catarrh of stomach, belching of gases, stomach trouble of all kinds, no matter how severe or long standing the case, will make a complete cure. We mean a cure. Pepsin, soda, and the many dyspepsia tablets may relieve the symptoms, but they do not cure the cause. We want the very worst cases, those that can hardly eat the blandest kind of food, and are suffering with what they may think incurable stomach trouble.

Nau's Dyspepsia Cure

"For the past 6 years I have been a great sufferer with catarrh of stomach, and no one will ever have any idea how I suffered. I was hungry, and could not eat. I seemed relieved when I could starve myself. After continued perseverance by friends I was persuaded to try Nau's Dyspepsia Cure, and after taking 3 bottles, I am happy to say I am cured. I hope this letter will encourage some of the many sufferers to try this wonderful remedy, Nau's Dyspepsia Cure.
"MRS. WM. MASTERSON,
"Lostine, Oregon."

"I wish to state for a period of 8 years I was an extreme sufferer from heartburn and indigestion. With first dose of Nau's Dyspepsia Cure, taken three months ago, I experienced a distinct relief, and I can now eat any kind of food without distress.

THE OPEN SHOP—San Francisco Labor Union Grafters Still Want M

CURRENT COMMENT.

SAN FRANCISCO has at last been handed over, "body, soul and breeches," to the labor union gang of grafters and blood-suckers, of which Abe Ruef and "Pinhead" McCarthy are the principal exemplars, and to whom Schmitz, the nominal Mayor, is apparently content to play second fiddle—being, as it were, a second-class fiddler. If the past record of San Francisco under Schmitz and Ruef may be taken as a forecast of its future, we may expect that a new record for graft, corruption, and labor union crimes will be made in San Francisco during this second term of Schmitz. Ruef, McCarthy, and the rest of the gang, will make the most of their opportunities, and these opportunities will not by any means be few in number nor small in scope.

San Francisco has the reputation of being "the wickedest city in the world," not excepting Chicago, New York, nor Paris. There is no doubt that under the Ruef-Schmitz labor-graft régime it will be amply able to live up to that bad reputation, and even to go it a few points better. The elements of disorder and corruption will have unlimited sway, and the citizens of San Francisco will have no effective remedy. Of course, they have only themselves to blame for the situation in which they are placed, for they had ample opportunity and ample power to throw off the yoke of dominant unionism. Having neglected to take advantage of this opportunity at the last municipal election, they are compelled to accept the situation, and the abuses which accompany it, with as good grace as possible.

"Pinhead" McCarthy is said to be scheming for the control of the so-called "union labor vote" at the next State election, with the expectation that it will be possible thereby to land Schmitz in the gubernatorial chair. This hope is doomed to disappointment, of course. McCarthy and the other lazy louts who talk so glibly of "the labor vote" ought to know, by this time, that such a thing has in fact no existence as a controllable entity. Laboring men, whether union men or non-union men, will vote as they please when they are in the privacy of the voting booth. Intelligent unionists, while they may be deluded, coerced or intimidated into doing many things which they ought not to do, seriously object to attempted coercion or dictation when it comes to the matter of voting. They are more apt to vote against than for the measures in behalf of which dictation is attempted. Man is a stubborn brute. He doesn't relish being driven, and he will not be driven if he can help himself. When he enters the voting booth he is in a position to help himself.

The recent decision of the appellate division of the Supreme Court of New York State, reversing the lower court in a case involving freedom of contract, is in the nature of a two-edged sword. The lower court had decided that it was unlawful for an employer to enter into a contract to employ but union men. The higher court reversed this finding and declared that it is lawful for employers to make such contracts, provided the same be not against public policy. The decision also affirmed the right of an employer to enter into a contract not to employ union men. In other words, the right of unhampered contract extends to discrimination for or against either unionists or non-unionists, as the contracting parties may agree upon.

This dictum seems somewhat illogical, in that if all employers should discriminate against non-unionists the latter would be forced to join unions or starve; while if all employers should discriminate against unionists, the latter would be compelled to disband or starve. It is hardly to be supposed that the right to work, (which means to a wage-earner the right to live,) could properly be made to depend upon membership or non-membership in a union. The decision appears to be about as broad as it is long. It places non-unionists and unionists upon the same plane, and it takes advanced ground in support of the right of free contract within the limitations of public policy.

A novel profit-sharing scheme has been put into operation by the Hammond Typewriter Company of New York. Some three years ago James B. Hammond graded his employés in such a way that after one year of service an employé was entitled to a dividend, each quarter of a year, amounting to 50 per cent. of one week's salary. The dividend was increased 2 per cent. each year until, after the third year, a full week's salary was paid every three months as dividend. Salaries range from $10 to $100 per week. Recently a week's extra salary was paid to 200 employés of the company, the amount thus distributed amounting to $5000, making a total of over $70,000 paid out in this way in a little more than three years. The Hammond system is about as effective a strike-breaker as could be devised.

A. R. Brooks, a Fresno contractor, has applied for the arrest of the entire Board of Supervisors of his county for buying dirt for filling in the courthouse yard from one of his rivals. The ground for this piece of asininity is that the said rival of Mr. Brooks, one John Zapp, has the audacity to exercise his God-given rights, guaranteed by the Constitution, of employing whom he pleases and managing his own business without asking permission of any walking delegate.

It appears that Mr. Zapp is building a hotel under contract in Fresno, and in excavating for the foundation he wanted a place to put the dirt. The Supervisors wanted some dirt to fill in the courthouse yard. A price was agreed upon verbally, and delivery commenced. Then Brooks put forth his complaint, alleging that as Zapp's teamsters were working nine hours a day it was contrary to law to award him any public contract. The Supervisors gave Brooks scant consideration, and he hied himself to the District Attorney's office and demanded that the entire governing board be placed in durance vile for its heinous (?) offense against unionism.

The District Attorney listened to the disgruntled totem contractor's bray and told him that he could not see things that way. Then Brooks, determined to down his rival and show his love for unionism, wrote to the chief of the bureau of labor statistics, W. V. Stafford, in San Francisco, evidently imagining that that official can in some way help him in his effort to bar free labor from public work.

Brooks is one of those employers whose methods render them a curse to any free community, and who have done more than any other class to disrupt industrial peace. In addition to this Brooks appears to be lacking in horse-sense.

The El Paso Herald publishes an interview with "a railroad man," in which it is maintained that there is great danger to the industrial peace of Mexico in present attempts to unionize the native employés of the railroads. One of the results pointed out is a recent strike of the firemen on the Monterey division of the Mexican Central, which was attended with some violence.

No workmen in the world have less reason for complaint than the native railroad men of Mexico. Never have the companies shown the least disposition to take advantage of them or to keep wages at the low level which would no doubt be justified by the strict application of the law of supply and demand.

Firemen, practically all natives on nearly all railroads, earn from $60 to $100 a month, Mexican silver. Most of those regularly employed get nearer the higher than the lower figure—$80 and $90 being probably a very fair average. Brakemen get about the same. Switchmen generally earn about $75 a month, while foremen get as high as $100 and yardmasters, largely natives, get often $100 to $125. Telegraph, station and office work is very largely handled by natives. Wages for clerks and operators range from $30 to $100 or $125 a month, the lowest figure being for boys just entering the service. Agents, even at most of the largest stations on the Mexican Central are natives and they get as much as $150 or $175.

Conductors are all Americans except an occasional Englishman, natives getting this position only on a few small branch lines, if at all. There are, however, a number of Mexican engineers. They operate many of the yard engines and get $100 to $150. A few have runs on the road and are paid the same as others, the earnings on a basis of distance ranging from $150 to $300 a month. All these figures represent Mexican silver.

When railroads were first built in Mexico, wages on the northern border for laborers—there was but little skilled labor—were 75 cents to $1.25, and even in the interior as low as 50 cents, and even 25 cents a day. Today $2 a day is very high wages for almost any kind of native labor in any part of the republic. For clerks wages are on the same basis. Fifty dollars a month is high.

Compared with what their fathers were glad to earn thirty years ago—at irregular employment, too, often times —the wages paid Mexican railroaders are almost princely. In some cases they are more than double what their fellow countrymen of the class from which most of them sprang can earn in other lines today.

The government of Mexico is not friendly to unionism. It has suppressed, and it may be expected to continue to suppress with an iron hand, all outbreaks of violence. For their own sake, as well as for that of their country, it is to be hoped that the Mexican railroaders will turn a deaf ear to all agitators.

They Wax Fat and Kick.

At first it was easy for the public mind to see that certain combinations of capital were organized to feed off the public, so when labor unions became prominent the people gave sympathy to the plea of the wily leaders, for the "poor working man."

Then the unions waxed fat and arrogant, working untold suffering and loss on the common people until, gradually, it became plain that a labor union was in fact a trust to make labor scarce and high and to extract unusual tribute from the people. The labor trust quickly grew to be the largest and by far the most oppressive trust in America. Its work and record of crime is almost too terrible to contemplate.

Started in a spirit of helpful affiliation with high purposes it drifted into the hands of designing, unprincipled men, many of them actual criminals, whose power has made them a most serious menace to the public at large. —[C. W. Post in The Square Deal for January.

Inventor Holland's Prophecies.

When John P. Holland prophesied the submarine boat people looked at him askance and said to one another: "Isn't it a pity? And he looks so intelligent, too!" Now Mr. Holland says that he expects to fly from his home in Newark to his New York office within a few months, and that before the year is out any man who has one of the machines he has invented can easily go through the air at a speed of forty miles an hour or can move at the rate of fifteen miles an hour with no more exertion than is required for walking three miles an hour on land.—[Boston Globe.

SAN FRANCISCO.

WILL GOD HELP SAN FRANCISCO?

In the Firm Grip of Union Labor Grafters.

Pinhead McCarthy's Schemes for More Graft.

Citizens' Alliance is Growing in California.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 12.—The disreputable municipal officers who were elected in November, assumed charge of their respective offices at the City Hall and the Hall of Justice (hereafter to be more appropriately known as the Hall of Injustice,) promptly at noon on last Monday. The change was effected without incident of note with the exception of the fact that each office-holder showered himself with floral offerings.

There were many disappointed aspirants for positions, and hundreds of those who failed to secure appointments, assembled early in the morning in front of the offices of the Mayor, Sheriff and County Clerk. Some complained of broken promises, while others entertained a feeble hope that the lists of appointments as given out by the administration might prove incorrect, and that there might yet be a place for them in the public service.

GOD HELP SAN FRANCISCO.

The feature of the day was the ceremonies attendant upon the assuming of their places by the new Board of Supervisors. God help San Francisco when this gang gets in full working order! It is almost impossible to give a description of the "Rotten Eighteen," as the new supervisors have been dubbed, although one might picture to himself what a fine group can be obtained from bartenders, hackdrivers and the like. Mayor Schmitz and Abe Ruef were present to welcome the newcomers.

COURTS DEFIED.

The Tailors' Union has deliberately defied the courts by refusing to obey an injunction obtained by the Bohay Tailoring Company to prevent the union from picketing the front of the establishment. The strike was declared last month because Mr. Bohay, manager of the company, had discharged a union tailor named Birnbaum for incompetency after warning him several times to be more careful with his work. Birnbaum laughed at Bohay's threats and gave Bohay to understand that the union would refuse to allow him to be discharged. Bohay, not to be intimidated by threats, discharged the incompetent tailor, whereupon every union man in the establishment quit work, and foul-mouthed pickets were stationed on the sidewalk to shower abuse on patrons who had the nerve to pass the picket line. Bohay secured an injunction from Judge Murasky, which was served on the pickets only to be trampled under foot by them. To date, the judge has not punished the lawbreakers, and the indications are that he never will.

PINHEAD'S SCHEMES.

There is no doubt but what "Pinhead" McCarthy, president of the San Francisco Building Trades Council, is plotting to become the boss of the union labor forces for the coming State election. "Pinhead's" actions at the San Jose convention of the Building Trades Councils, clearly exposed his game of graft. It is recalled that McCarthy was an active champion of Union Labor Mayor Schmitz in the San Francisco convention of the Labor party, and also in many public meetings of the late municipal campaign. His compliments for the Mayor seemed to be inexhaustible, and predictions were made that he would attempt to dethrone Boss Ruef when the local engagement developed into a general battle.

Much surprise was manifested that McCarthy did not declare himself a boss when the municipal patronage was under allotment. His friends expected that he would be named for the Board of Police Commissioners or Board of Public Works. The surprise developed into astonishment when it was reported on the best authority that he had positively declined to serve as commissioner on any board. When his followers pressed him for an explanation for refusing to partake of the fruits of victory, he reminded them that his sense of duty to the cause of union labor compelled him to go forth and bolster up unionism throughout the State.

"Pinhead's" recent utterances at San Jose plainly show that he is laying wires to control the union labor gang at the State election. He and Schmitz are playing a deep game to get the State government under control of the anarchistic element. In many of his speeches during the late municipal campaign, "Pinhead" predicted that organized labor would stick to Schmitz until that grafter's flag floated over the State Capitol at Sacramento. Abe Ruef is not attempting to conceal his anxiety, caused by the exertions of McCarthy to capture the State labor forces.

CITIZENS' ALLIANCE ELECTION.

At the annual election of officers for the Citizens' Alliance, held this week, Mr. Herbert George was reëlected president, Mr. R. P. Schwerin, vice-president, and E. R. Dimond, treasurer. Out of 11,326 votes cast, only 27 were against the reëlection of Mr. George. The nominations of the various officers were made by the Nominating Committee composed of the following well-known business men: Jos. Sloss, of the Pacific Hardware and Steel Company; Wakefield Baker, of Baker & Hamilton; W. R. Wheeler, of Holbrook, Merrill & Stetson, and A. A. Watkins, of Montague & Co.

Upon being notified of the result, Mr. George immediately reappointed the following gentlemen as members of the Executive Committee for the ensuing year: Henry D. Morton, Henry T. Scott, I. W. Hellman, Jr., Vanderlynn Stow, R. P. Schwerin, Andrew Carrigan and C. R. Johnson. Mr. W. E. Alexander was reappointed secretary and S. W. Hoyt retained as head clerk. Mr. Bush Finnell will remain at the head of the legal department with Mr. Orrick as assistant and Judge T. C. Van Ness of council.

ORGANIZATION GROWING.

The growth of the Alliance business has necessitated the securing of additional office room, but there will be no offices outside the Crossley Building except those of the various employers' associations affiliated with the Citizens' Alliance. It is the purpose of the association to pay considerable attention this year to the extension of the work throughout the State. There are now well established Citizens' Alliances in the following California cities, that have made much progress during the past year: Santa Rosa, Petaluma, Oakland, Sacramento, Fort Bragg, Stockton, Palo Alto, San Jose, Watsonville, Santa Cruz, Fresno, Bakersfield, Randsburg, Sonora, Jimtown, Stent, Santa Barbara, Los Angeles, San Diego and many other towns.

The State of Oregon was organized from San Francisco, as was also the State of Washington. Portland, Tacoma and Seattle all have well-organized and financed Citizens' Alliances.

The San Francisco organization has just undergone a very careful and exhaustive examination of the books by Knight, McLaren & Goode, the experts, and everything was found to be in most excellent shape. The Alliance is in fine financial condition and reports a very steady and satisfactory growth.

IMPORTANT DECISION.

The Right to Contract for Non-union Labor as Viewed by Appellate Division of Supreme Court.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court in this judicial department has had occasion to set aside as unconstitutional a provision of the Penal Code which involved a flagrant violation of the commonest rights of the individual, in the name of legislation for the protection of the workingman, says the New York Journal of Commerce. This section of the Code made it a crime for an employer to exact an agreement not to belong to a labor union as a condition of employment in his service. The offense thus created was called "coercion by employers," but there is no more coercion in requiring a man to agree not to belong to a union as a condition of hiring him than in requiring him to agree to certain hours and wages of labor. It is no more coercion than insisting upon any condition in a contract, whether for labor or for executing any work or transaction of business, so long as the other party is at liberty to accept or refuse at will.

This provision of the Penal Code was enacted in 1887 when labor unions seem to have had their way in perverting the laws to an extraordinary degree; and the opinion of the Appellate Division in the case just decided shows how regardless such legislation was of the elementary principles of individual rights and personal liberty. Under those principles a man who has work to be done may hire whom he will to do it on such terms as they can agree upon, so long as it does not interfere with the rights of others or the health and safety of the community. The parties to the labor agreement may enter into a written contract embodying their terms, and it is nobody else's business. The employer may insist that the workman shall be a member of a trades union in good standing, or that he shall not become a member in either case, as the workman is at liberty to refuse to work on the terms proposed. To make it a crime to insist upon such a condition is no more reasonable than making it a crime for a workman to insist upon belonging to a union as a condition of working for anybody at his trade. It is his right to do that, but nobody is bound to employ him, and his insistence is not coercion, even if workmen cannot be had on any other terms.

What this section of the Penal Code undertook to do was to restrain the employment of non-union labor in competition with union labor, and to help the monopoly of organized labor by making it a penal offense to contract for non-union labor. This was an attempt to set up a gross discrimination in favor of unions, to make binding agreements to employ only union men and unions could enter into contracts which excluded non-union men from working for the same employers without falling under a charge of coercion. Nobody questions their right to do this, if the employers consent and no unlawful means are used to extort their consent. It is what the unions are constantly doing, and the right to do it is the mainstay of their effort to establish what they call the "closed shop." Suppose it were made a penal offense for a labor union to make it a condition of the employment of its members that no union man should be employed in the same establishment, would there not be an outcry against such a restraint upon the right of contract, and would it not be speedily set aside by the courts?

This is precisely what union labor is now engaged in doing or trying to do, and it is within its constitutional and legal right so long as it only insists upon a voluntary acceptance of its condition and uses no actual coercion through interference with non-union workmen, or with the property or business of those who choose to employ them. The right to employ non-union men is as sacred as the right to employ union men, and there must be the same right of contract with the one as with the other. The collective bargain is no more sacred than the individual bargain, and no more entitled to the sanction and protection of law. The best defense, if not the only defense, that employers can have against the exaction of unions is the protection of their right to employ non-union workmen, and to make agreements with them, if necesary, one condition of which shall be that they will not join unions. There may be valid reasons for preferring non-union men, and the unions are multiplying these reasons and identifying the cause of personal liberty and individual rights, the very basis of our institutions, with the independence of employers and of workmen in their relations with each other. This independence has been curtailed for eighteen years in this State by making it a crime to enter into agreements with non-union labor, whn similar agreements with union labor are treated as lawful and used as a means of crushing competition. The door is now open for agreements to employ men who will keep out of unions as well as those who belong to them.

The Last Straw.

The Typographical Union had the job printing industry where it required the last straw, not quite to break its back, but to make it move for its own self-preservation. These conditions, duplicated even more irksomely in the newspaper publishing business, might come pretty near at almost any time to being the last straw that will never be permitted to break the back of that allied industry. It is only a short step from the composing room of the job office, with its lack of sympathy, under union rule, with the business itself, to the composing room of the newspaper office, where the word of the publisher in any question of importance (like one of actually having anything to say) cannot go. If the newspaper publishers of the country have not yet come close to the impossible exactions of the unions in the way of restriction, discrimination and coercion, then it is because the unions haven't reached them yet, for Mr. Lynch, the warlike leader of the International Typographical Union—losing, it is true, but as militant as ever—is still at his old attempts at monopolizing the printers' labor and will never cease—for he himself has said it—until the bosses are "sticking the type" and the journeyman printer—and the devil, too, we suppose—are riding in the carriages. If the time for the Typographical Union to take complete possession of the newspapers should not arrive, then it will be because employers in collateral lines, and in innumerable other lines, fighting still harder and earlier, and later, have arrested the labor monopoly movement and have stopped it as it relates to them. They have helped to stop it as it relates to the magazine publisher and the daily newspaper publisher. Even if they do not resist, fighting their own battles successfully, these will be fought successfully just the same; for the country will not have the closed shop, nor will employers generally, nor will the manufacturers. It is restrictive, it involves hateful discriminations impossible in a free country, and it will not do. We rather think that the daily newspaper publishers, as well as the publishers of magazines, will be found doing their share, when the time comes, towards relieving their own industries from the incubus of an intolerable present monopoly which, in the last analysis and at the end, must become simply impossible. —[American Industries.

THE PUBLIC'S TURN TO STRI

"STEADY work, good wages, and full police protection" was the conclusion of an advertisement in The Times last week, says the New York Times. It was not premature, for yesterday's newspapers announced the doubling of the police reserves in anticipation of the strikes reported today. "I cannot see why the police order was issued," said one of the strikers' spokesmen. One thing is sure, the police reserve platoons are not doubled in anticipation of murder or violence by employers. The worst thing alleged against them by anybody is their readiness to employ those willing to work for them. If less can be said for the strikers it is the fault only of themselves and their record. It is impossible to forget the shocking violence which attended the previous building strike in this city, when $100,000,000 of work was tied up. Neither is it possible to forget the fifty-three indictments in a single day in Chicago during the teamsters' strike, now transferred to this city. Nineteen killings and uncounted assaults was the record of the strikers in that case. Now that both strikes are "on" here together, it is well that the police reserves were increased.

Both strikes are what may be called political. That is to say, they are not strikes primarily for larger pay or for shorter hours, or for any question between any man and his boss. It is a struggle of organization against organization, for reasons affecting only organizations. And the interests of the public are subordinated as completely as the interests of the individual employer and employé. In fact, inconvenience to the public is one of the strong cards of the strikers. They reckon upon disorganizing trade in a manner to bring distress and thus to put the employers under duress. This is unionism run mad, and if it results in any such extreme action against the strikers as by the strikers they ought to know whom to blame. We are accustomed to think of England as union ridden, but there are no such

A Case in Point.

It takes such a case as was recently reported in the Chicago Tribune to make the blind see—the blind trade unionist—see how much his trade union is actually worth in dollars and cents in some cases. Here is the gist of the Tribune's story:

Mrs. Augustus N. Eddy, 1601 Michigan avenue, assisted the employés at Wade Putnam's livery stable yesterday in defraying the expenses of burial of Harry Insley, a teamster whose union organization failed to assist him when he was fatally injured Saturday morning.

Insley had been a member of the Baggage and Express Drivers' Local 17 for nearly sixteen years, but as he had failed to make the one payment of dues he was not in "good standing" at the time of his death.

Bridge of Reinforced Concrete.

[illegible] MATERIAL OF THE FUTURE USED FOR A VIADUCT ACROSS SAN JOAQUIN RIVER.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

[illegible] largest reinforced concrete [illegible] in the United States is [illegible] bridge in the [illegible] completion at Pollasky. There is added interest in the [illegible] of this stupendous structure [illegible] it is the first of the kind to be [illegible] the Golden State and it marks [illegible] epoch in the bridge building in[illegible] of California. Heretofore the [illegible] built in the northwest have [illegible] principally of steel, wood or [illegible]

[illegible] bridge crosses the San Joaquin [illegible] and is being built for the [illegible] of Madera and Fresno. Friday [illegible] 5 was a memorable day [illegible] people of these two counties [illegible] the completion, or practically of the big structure and in [illegible] some 200 prominent [illegible] of the two counties in [illegible] number of prominent [illegible] contractors from all [illegible] State, visited the bridge [illegible] formal inspection of the [illegible]

[illegible] bridge was begun last [illegible] all that now remains to be [illegible] fill which is to make [illegible]

[illegible] consists of ten spans of [illegible] each and has heavy [illegible] with wing walls extending [illegible] natural banks at either [illegible] roadway is eighteen feet [illegible]

[illegible] bottom, at this point, is [illegible] and gravel under[illegible] soft decomposed granite [illegible] the season when the [illegible] prosecuted the river [illegible] running water being [illegible] feet wide.

[illegible] feet long and 8 feet [illegible] and their foundation [illegible] 12 inches by [illegible] redwood piles in [illegible] piles were shod with [illegible] steel shoes and driven hard into the bedrock with a 3800 pound hammer. Coffer dams were placed round each pile cluster and the water and sand was pumped from around the piles and piles were then cut off about three feet below lowest low water level and the concrete piers were then built thereon.

The end abutments are very heavy walls placed directly on the bedrock, without piles and they, as well as the wing walls, are reinforced with corrugated bars as is the bridge proper.

The arch rings of the spans have a rise of 11 feet 6 inches, the concrete being 18 inches thick at the crown and 3 feet 6 inches at the spring line.

The rings were reinforced by two arch ring concrete. The top of these walls is finished with a coping having a 6 inch projection and the railing consists of pilasters over the piers with walls 2 feet high between, these walls forming a base for a single plain gas-pipe railing.

Expansion joints were put in over each pier to guard against cracking from changes in temperature; this was done by the introduction of a sheet of heavy tarred paper into the concrete and special buttress walls were built on either side of these joints which securely braced and anchored the walls at these points thus broken.

Three 4 inch iron drain pipes were provided at each pier for drainage from the roadway.

The filling for the roadway is the river gravel which was delivered into hoppers near the center of the structure by means of a bucket elevator operated by steam and thence distributed to place by cars over the service track.

The materials were stored at the east end of the bridge on the natural bank, which was about level with the layers of corrugated bars, the bars in each crossing each other at right angles and securely wired at all crossings. The lower course of this reinforcement was placed 2½ inches above the intrados or underside of the arch and consisted of ¾ inch bars spaced 6 inches apart with ½ inch bars, 2 feet apart, placed at right angles. The extrados or upper course, beginning at the piers, consisted of ⅞ inch bars 3 inches apart, then ⅞ inch bars 6 inches apart and, over center, ¾ bars 12 inches apart, all interlaced with ½ inch bars.

The spandrel walls were 9 inches thick at top and 12 inches thick at bottom. These walls might be considered light, and would be, were it not for the fact that they are reinforced with an elaborate system of ½ inch corrugated bars, and braced and anchored to the arch rings with buttress walls again reinforced. This proves to be an efficient and economical construction and a particularly notable improvement over old designs. In the wall proper, the horizontal rods are spaced 6 inches apart in bottom and 12 inches apart near the top, and all vertical rods are two feet apart with lower ends penetrating into the floor line and the mixing was done by an automatic mixer, the concrete being thence delivered to place in mining cars operated over a double service track which was built along the center line of roadway as the work progressed.

The weight of this structure was about 300 pounds per square foot and, to carry this heavy load safely during construction, especially heavy falsework was necessary; 5 pile bents, five in each span, were driven for this falsework, the bents being capped with 6x12 inch timbers, and on this, supported on double wedges each 3x8 inches by 24 inches, were five trusses each made of bottom chords and posts of 6x8 inches and segments made of two layers of 2x12 inches and one layer of 4x10 inches. The lagging was 2½x8 inches, dressed and bevelled. Trusses for six spans only were made, those used in the first four spans being taken out and moved bodily forward to the last four spans.

Golden Gate cement, made by the Pacific Portland Cement Company was used in this work with the local sand and gravel taken from the river bed, and the concrete thus made was of excellent quality and most satisfactory.

The bridge is a county highway bridge connecting Fresno and Madera counties and was built by the two counties jointly.

Mr. J. B. Leonard of San Francisco designed the structure under general direction of the surveyors of the two counties and the Pacific Construction Company of San Francisco, were the builders, the work being done under the immediate supervision of their superintendent Mr. F. B. Field.

THE ASSOUAN DAM.

Dimensions, Cost and Economic Results of the Great Masonry Barrier Across the Nile.

In view of the great irrigation works now under way at Laguna and elsewhere in the Fart West, the following succinct account of the Assouan dam in Egypt is opportune. The statement is by A. W. Hadley in Maxwell's Talisman.

In 1902 the great Assouan dam, constructed across the Nile at the First Cataract, was completed. This huge piece of masonry is nearly a mile and a quarter in length (6,786 feet;) about 80 feet thick at the base and towers to a height in some places of 120 feet above its foundations.

It is constructed of roughly hewn granite blocks taken from the original quarries which have supplied the builders of Egypt with their material for 5000 years. These blocks are laid in cement and the whole rests upon a bed of solid granite. Besides 1,250,000 tons of masonry there was used no less than 15,000 tons of steel in the dam's construction.

The crest of the dam is walled on both sides, furnishing an excellent 26-foot roadway or bridge across the river at a point where it is much needed.

More than 10,000 natives were employed in the work and a thousand Italian stonemasons and other skilled European workmen. With this vast force an average of 3000 tons of masonry was laid each working day.

Above the dam is imprisoned at times several billion tons of water which forms a great lake 150 miles long. Not being an "overflow" dam, the escape of flood water and the prevention of the dreaded sedimentary deposit in reservoirs, is accomplished by means of 180 sluice-ways with steel gates operated by electricity.

Formerly boats were towed up the rapids by a regiment of giant Nubians. By constructing four great 400-foot locks however, the former expensive method of reaching the headwaters of the Nile has been eliminated.

The dam was dedicated in December, 1902, at which time Egypt added 1,600,000 acres to her cultivatable lands and nearly $2,000,000 to her annual tax revenues. As the original cost was about $10,000,000 the dam will have paid for itself in about five years. More than 35,000 peasants have contracted for land, some of which averages $175 per acre and to encourage and assist settlement, the National Bank of Egypt loans the necessary funds to prospective farmers at a rate of 3 per cent. per annum.

Following close upon the heels of this gigantic project are the plans for another which far eclipses in magnitude anything of the kind yet contemplated in modern times. In its crudest form the proposition is to utilize the waters of the White Nile and Blue Nile for stupendous extensions in Egypt and the Soudan. Including the plans for railway construction, which form a part of it, the project will probably cost in the vicinity of $105,000,000 and when completed will provide a tax revenue to the national treasury of more than $8,000,000 every twelve months. The first task will be the completion of the Suakim-Berger railroad at an estimated cost of $8,500,000. Then will follow the remodeling of the Nile channel at Rosetta and Damietta to cost $4,500,000; raising the Assouan dam, $2,500,000, and additional railways and canals to cost about $20,000,000.

Home Grown Tea.

"This year 12,000 pounds of choice tea will be shipped from what is, at present, the only tea farm in the Western Hemisphere," says Freeman Tilden in his article, "Great Chance for Tea Growers," in the February Technical World Magazine. "This farm is at Summerville, South Carolina. In the face of difficulties that at times seemed insurmountable; but on the other hand, with the kindly assistance of the United States government, the Summerville tea farm has grown to a point where it can offer serious competition with the best grades of tea shipped from China, India Formosa, or Java. But above all, it has been demonstrated that, barring the question of labor, the finest tea can be successfully grown at home; and there is nothing that gladdens the heart of an American more than the discovery that he can enter into competition in a field hitherto denied him."

Carnegie Car of Gold.

The famous pay-car of the great Carnegie steel and iron interests makes its trips every fortnight, carrying its paymaster and his eight assistants over a route of about seventy-five miles of railway, from Donora, Pa., to Youngstown, O., paying out in that time upward of $2,000,000, nearly all in gold coin. A well-known authority at Homestead, who is in close touch with the mill hands, says of present conditions as compared with former years: "The boys never made so much money nor have they been as prosperous as now. The increased tonnage and new machinery have made it possible for them to make more money than ever before. Everybody is happy and all is well."—[Technical World.

OIL IN MEXICO.

AN ABUNDANT YIELD.

In the State of Tamaulipas, Mex., the monster yield of oil of the Mexican Petroleum Company, is said to be sufficient to supply Mexico's demands for years to come. An idea of the amount of business done by that company may be gained from a summary of its expenditures which have amounted to $2,450,000 gold in the few years it has existed. Its pay roll averages $20,000 per month and the expenditures for improvements, supplies, machinery and such items have amounted, in the last three years, to $1,800,000.

MEXICO'S GREAT LAND ESTATES.

HOW OLD FAMILIES HOLD IMMENSE TRACTS OF COUNTRY.

Industries in Hands of Foreigners. Americans, British, Germans and French Develop Commerce and the Railroads—But Bulk of Rural Lands Held in Large Haciendas.

[From Modern Mexico:] The tenacity with which the great estates of Mexico are maintained intact by the old families of this country appears all the more remarkable when it is considered how generally all lines of industry, aside from that of the farmer are in the hands of foreigners.

The dry goods trade of Mexico is controlled by the French; the Spaniards of Mexico are the country's grocers; the Germans do the hardware business; the railroads, aside from government interests, are controlled by Americans and English; the bank stock of Mexico is largely held in Europe, while a large percentage of the industrial concerns of the country belongs to foreigners.

Not so, however, the agricultural resources of Mexico. During recent years a great deal of American capital has entered the republic for investment in tropical plantations, particularly in Southern Mexico, but the great bulk of Mexico's rural land is held in the form of extensive haciendas or ranches, often hundreds of thousands of acres in extent.

Some of these estates have been handed down in the same families for nearly four hundred years, not a few titles tracing their origin back to the first grants from the King of Spain after the conquest.

The aristocracy of Mexico is counted among these landed proprietors, many of whom enjoy princely incomes from their plantations, which often produce a great variety of products and embrace several manufacturing plants.

It is largely due to the fact that the tax upon land of this character is comparatively very light that these estates have so long remained undivided, as, in most instances, only a small percentage of their area is under cultivation.

As in many States the levy is practically only a tax upon products, the unused acres are no great burden.

Many who have the country's interest at heart want to see these tracts taxed so that the owners will be forced to sell at least portions of them, and the land of the country divided among a larger number of small proprietors.

Such measures would be vigorously opposed by the wealthy landed proprietors, and such are the number and importance of this class that no active measure of this kind has ever been promulgated.

The ancient estates of Mexico are so large that few individuals can purchase them entire, and the owners can rarely be prevailed upon to divide their holdings in any manner.

Occasionally now one of them is bought by a syndicate or company for development, or for subdivision and sale.

In this way smaller holdings are becoming more common than formerly, though the old order of things is not likely to be greatly altered in Mexico for many years to come.

IRON AND STEEL INDUSTRY.

GREATLY INCREASED DEMAND.

An interesting forecast of what may be expected to happen in the iron and steel trade next year is presented by the Railway and Engineering Review. It says:

"The iron and steel industry is straining to put itself into position and condition to meet an extraordinary increased demand for all furnace and mill products during 1906. A like activity has been manifested for some time past in the Lake Superior ore region where the possibility of a 40,000,000-ton output is being contemplated as possible when pending expansions of productive capacity are completed.

"Furnace capacity, which is now on a basis of 25,000,000 tons per annum, has fixed its standard at 28,000,000 tons, and it is probable that the momentum which is now gathering force will not be checked until that extraordinary figure is reached. Steel rail production for the coming year might be said to be very largely sold up, although the actual production of the last half of the year is not clinched by contracts.

"Enormous requirements are in sight and those requirements which call for delivery during the first half of the year are now receiving attention. The demand for structual material and plate instead of declining appears to be broadening out, and the present estimated requirements, the subject of negotiation now, footing up over 150,000 tons do not include the no small amount of work which has not yet taken the shape of inquiry, but which will soon be wanted.

"All other branches of the steel industry are oversold and the tendency in prices is upward, but the producing interests having contracted for so much of next year's output feel that it would be the height of unwisdom to unsettle the entire market by announcing sharp advances on the tailings of the business yet to be secured."

THOUSAND-HEADED KALE.

Forage Plant Strongly Recommended for Fattening Sheep and Lambs.

A Tasmanian correspondent writes to the Australian Pastoralists' Review: With the advance in the production of fat lamb raising for export, any reference to a fodder plant likely to prove useful to sheepbreeders in general, or to those more closely associated with the production of lambs for market, should be useful. Kale is gradually finding its way to the front rank solely on account of its great worth as one of the very best plants for fattening purposes. The preparation of the land is similar to that for rape, and the larger the amount of work put into the land intended for the growth of kale, the greater will be the amount of food produced. Always bear in mind that heavy croppers, whether it be mangold, rape, carrots, or kale, require plenty of manure if you want the best results. Kale if well cultivated and manured has proved its worth. I have seen it well on to its second year after planting with sprouts as good as ever, having been cut off and fed to sheep the first time, and then fed off by sheep for quite twelve months afterwards. The system of seeding was with a drill, each row of seed being 3 feet apart, and the plants thinned out with a hoe to 18 inches. Plenty of stable manure was used on the land, and the horse hoe kept going until the plants were about 9 inches high. I saw some of this kale cut to feed sheep quite 4 feet 6 inches long, and they ate every part of it. I have seen a 30-acre paddock put in with the horse drill, on which nitro-superphosphate was used as heavy as the drill would pass it, 2 1-2 pounds of seed, costing 2s. 6d. per acre, being mixed with the manure, the seed drills 3 feet apart. The crop of plants is rather thick, but the horse hoe passed across the rows will make a splendid paddock of feed, and give room for cultivating when necessary. Kale alone, unlike rape, will not scour the sheep, fattens readily, and is a grand milk-producing food for cows, and once established, stands the dry summer well—comes again after every rain, in fact. Once tried, no sheepbreeder would be without it. Frost does not affect it, and it is often at its best in winter time. Sow in springtime, and it will be ready when other feed is fading away. Those who read these lines may think the trouble too much, but try a little quarer-acre plot; it will convince you that what you have here read is reliable information.

RECENT AMERICAN INVENTIONS.

From the New York Commercial.

Electric Emery Grinder.

There has recently been introduced in the machinery trade an emery grinder driven by a motor carefully enclosed and mounted in the center of the shaft between the wheels. No rheostat or controller is used in connection with this motor, which can by means of a special device be made to run at any desired speed between wide limits by the turning of a wheel on the top of the casing. The machine is built for wheels up to 3x24 inches and can be used with one wet and one dry wheel if desired.

A Gas Turbine.

A Kentucky inventor claims to have devised a practical gas turbine which utilizes the "wet gas" principle, or that in which the exploded gas is mixed with steam in order to secure an energizing medium of sufficiently low temperature. The motor consists of a compact arrangement of a small, liquid-fuel-fired steam boiler mounted over a four-cylinder gas engine, whose cylinders are arranged quadrilaterally around a common central shaft. On the latter's downward extension is placed a radical flow turbine. From the reciprocating gas engines this provides a practically continuous exhaust into a passage where the steam from the boiler meets the gases and from which the consequent mixture of superheated steam and gas of lowered temperature flows to the turbine—the whole engine running at 750 r. p. m.

Improved Fan and Heater.

A positive circulation of air is essential to the successful drying of all classes of material. An approved apparatus employed to secure such results consists of a fan and a heater placed outside of the drying-room. The air is positively drawn or forced through the heater by means of the fan and is discharged under pressure at any desired point or points within the drying chamber. When the material is not excessively moist the air is returned to the heating apparatus and reheated, thereby increasing the efficiency. This system is applicable to the drying of all classes of material, such as lumber, brick, wool, cotton, hair, etc. Special arrangements of the dryroom are usually required for each specific material.

Pressed Steel Poles.

The scarcity of desirable wood for telephone and telegraph poles and their rapidly advancing price has created a demand for a practical substitute. This demand has been met by a Pennsylvania manufacturer, who has placed on the market an attractive and durable pole made entirely of pressed steel. These poles adapt themselves to all general purposes for which wood poles are used, such as telegraph, telephone, trolley lines, electric lighting, signal uses, etc. They are composed of two principal sections, with all small parts in sets to fit, so that they can be shipped in a compact form. In assembling the parts, hand tools only are required. Every care has been taken to standardize the poles to a technical exactness of dimension, and by a scientific system of construction to secure the maximum degree of strength.

Japanese Iron Foundry.

The exigencies of the war have caused great activity at the Japanese Imperial Iron Foundry at Edamitsu. The works are running day and night and enormous quantities of iron, steel and other varieties of plates and bars are being manufactured. Along the eastern side of the harbor, a hatoba has been constructed, where large quantities of iron products have accumulated. Another large wharf is being constructed along the western coast and will be completed by March next. The dredging of the harbor will also be finished by that time. When these works have been completed, the steamships Taya and Wakamatsu, engaged in the transportation of iron ores, will be able to berth alongside the wharf.

Activity of the Kaiser.

The superhuman activity of the kaiser is well known. He looks after the music, the painting, the literature and the morals of Germany; but that is only his diversion, for above all that he is the German emperor. As Kaiser his work falls under three heads—foreign affairs, home affairs and the army and navy. The department which gives him most work is that for foreign affairs, for last year he read 1267 dispatches from abroad and 341 telegrams and gave a personal decision in 918 cases. He never signs any dispatch without reading it. He also has a great number of verbal reports made to him and it is probably this overwork that renders him so nervous on occasions and leads him to speak out things that he had better have confined to his thoughts or to his confidential correspondence.

WORLD'S RUBBER PLANTATIONS.

ESTIMATE OF THE ACREAGE NOW ACTUALLY PLANTED.

The East Indies Now Lead the Industry—Mexico Also in the Forefront—Immensely Increased Supplies in Sight—Rapidly Growing Demand.

[Ceylon Observer:] We have been devoting a good deal of time to an examination of the best authorities at our command, in order to frame an estimate of the actual extent planted with rubber not simply in Ceylon, Straits Settlements, Java, India and Burma, but throughout American and African rubber-growing States. We cannot pretend to afford information of more than approximate accuracy; because in many cases—in respect of Africa, and Central and South American States especially—it was impossible to frame anything better than a rough estimate. Nevertheless, it is surprising in how many instances we have found, from official reports or private communications in the press, that the regular cultivation of rubber-yielding trees (Hevea in South America, Castilloa in Central America and Mexico, and Landolphia and Kicksia in different parts of Africa) was commenced four, three or two years ago. Thus it comes about that we learn of a plantation at Panama with a good many thousand plants; of 3000 acres being under cultivation in Venezuela; of plantations in Ecuador, Costa Rica, Nicaragua and in some parts of the West Indies.

In regard to Mexico, in putting the extent at 10,000 acres, we may possibly be a good deal below the mark; for, so far back as 1897, we know on trustworthy authority that there were profitable rubber plantations in the hands of American and Mexican owners, and with four different main lines of railway between Mexico and the United States, and the great demand in the latter for the raw product, it is not unlikely that much more has been planted with so promising a tree than has been made generally known. Mexican and American owners of rubber plantations have strong reasons for keeping information as to their progress very much to themselves.

In respect of Africa, without giving heed to the extraordinary story credited to a visitor from Africa in Liverpool lately—of 60,000,000 cultivated plants growing in that continent capable of yielding 60,000 tons of rubber by 1915!—yet, we are aware that a considerable area is under regular cultivation in the French as well as Belgian Congo, in Portuguese as well as German and British territory, and we give our estimate of 33,150 acres as at least an approximation, after studying a great many books and official and non-official papers. Such an estimate for the world as we now present has never been attempted anywhere before. Some one must begin it. We have ventured to try our hands at it in the interest of the rubber planters themselves, and we now present the detailed figures (quantum valeant) for the consideration of our readers:

ESTIMATE OF CULTIVATED RUBBER IN 1905, ABOUT 150,000 ACRES.

Countries—	Extent. Acres.
Ceylon	[illegible]
Malay Peninsula	[illegible]
Borneo	[illegible]
Java	[illegible]
India and Burma	[illegible]
Mexico	[illegible]
Brazil	[illegible]
Venezuela	[illegible]
Ecuador	[illegible]
Panama	[illegible]
Rest of Central America	[illegible]
Natal	[illegible]
Rhodesia	[illegible]
Rest of Africa	[illegible]
Tobago and West Indies	[illegible]
Total	[illegible]

We do not think there is any good reason for investors in even the latest Ceylon rubber company to be alarmed at the prospect. So far as we can judge, there must be a safe market and good return for all cultivated produce gathered up to 1915 at least; and companies who estimate, and really mean, to bring their clearings into full bearing for anything under, say, £50 ($200) per acre, ought, in our opinion, to give a remunerative return to their shareholders. Let us suppose even that there are 200,000 acres planted with rubber in the world at this time,—which seven years hence will be adding 20,000 tons to the world's supply, and what then? Even if the "forest" supply kept up at 60,000 tons (a doubtful point,) is it not very certain that the demand, year by year, is bound to increase, so that 80,000 tons (or more) will be very readily absorbed by 1912—if indeed the cry is not by that time for "More, more—Rubber!"

ARTIFICIAL PEARLS.

[Mining World:] Imitation pearls are usually made of opaline glass treated carefully with hydrofluoric acid. Very good imitations of the genuine pearl are made from mother-of-pearl, also. This material is turned to the required shape and polished beautifully, when it has an appearance very similar to that of the genuine article, though an expert can readily distinguish the imitation from the real one. The beautiful glass beads resembling Indian pearls have been manufactured for a long time. Glass beads of the required pattern are first made. They are then coated inside with a material made from fish scales and having the luster of the genuine pearl. The beads are then filled up with wax. These beautiful imitation pearls are by no means cheap, however. This is not surprising, because it takes thousands of fish scales to yield one pound of the silvery white material which is used to produce the necessary pearlike luster.

"You claim that you will make any sacrifice for my sake, Henry."

"Yes, of course."

"Then invite mother to come and live with us."

"Well, of course, I meant any reasonable sacrifice."—[Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Aside from the sentiment (and there is a sentiment, in the matter, for we all like to be independent) the opportunities to save presented by our grocery sales appeal to the economical side of one's nature. You can snap your fingers in the face of the trust and make money by so doing if you watch our grocery sales. The following items for Monday's selling illustrate the point:

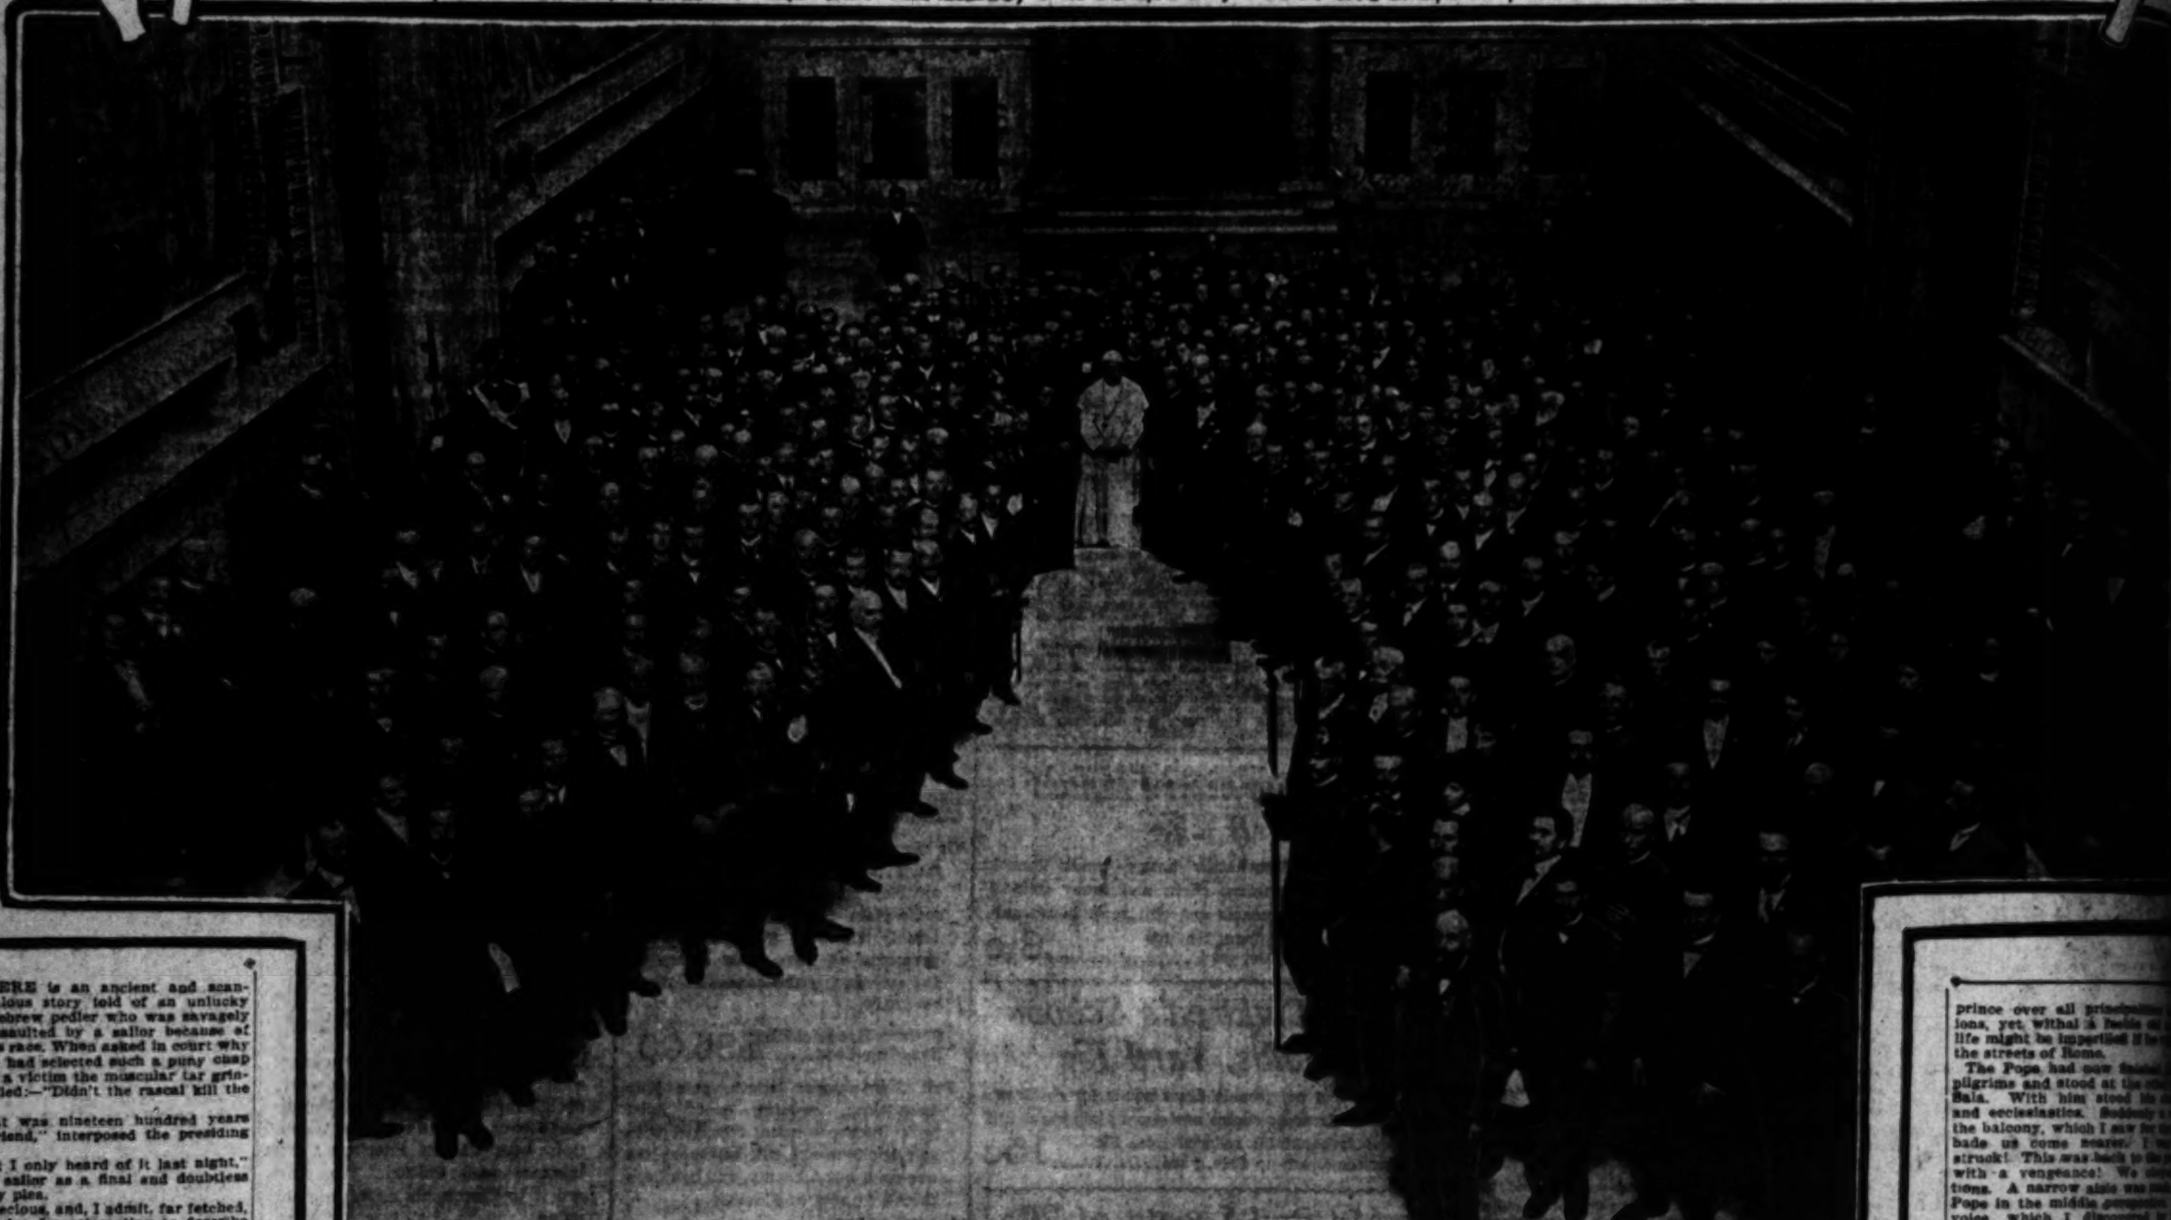
An Audience with Pius X.

BY JAMES GIBBONS HUNEKER.

POPE PIUS X RECEIVING GERMAN PILGRIMS, OCTOBER 5th, 1905 in the SALA REGIA of the VATICAN.



THERE is an ancient and scandalous story told of an unlucky Hebrew pedler who was savagely assaulted by a sailor because of his race. When asked in court why he had selected such a puny chap as a victim the muscular tar grinningly replied:—"Didn't the rascal kill the Lord?"

"But that was nineteen hundred years ago, my friend," interposed the presiding judge.

"Yes, but I only heard of it last night," put in the sailor as a final and doubtless satisfactory plea.

Such a specious, and, I admit, far fetched, excuse is mine for attempting to describe an audience at the Vatican, a feat that requires the brush of a Velasquez and the pen of a Gautier, but as I had never been in the Vatican before my mental condition of childlike innocency was not far removed from that of the simple sailor, except that I went to stare and remained to pray—for at least five seconds—enough, however, to carry any miserable sinner across the gulf of despair into its purgatorial haven.

Perhaps Rome at a superficial glance still affects the American as it did Taine nearly a half century ago—as a provincial city, sprawled to unnecessary lengths over its seven hills, and, despite the smartness of its new quarters, far from suggesting a weltstadt, as does, for example, bustling, shining Berlin or the mundane suavity of Paris. But not for her, in her superb and imperial indifference, are the seductive spells of operatic Venice or the romantic glamour of Florence. She can proudly say "La ville, c'est moi!" She is not a city, but the city of cities, and it needs but twenty-four hours' submergence in her atmosphere to make one a slave at her eternal chariot wheels. The New York cockney, devoted to his cult of the modern—hotels, baths, cafés and luxurious theatres—soon wearies of Rome. He prefers Paris or Naples. Hasn't some one said, "See Naples and die—of its smells?" As an inexperienced traveller I know of no city on the globe where you formulate an expression of like or dislike so quickly. You are Rome's foe or friend within five minutes after you leave its dingy railway station. And it is hardly necessary to add that its newer quarters, pretentious, cold, hard and showy, are quite negligible. One does not go to Rome to seek the glazed comforts of Harlem or Brooklyn.

New D'Annunzio Tragedy.

As a theatregoer I could not resist the blandishments of the Costanzi, especially as a new tragedy by D'Annunzio was announced. "La Fiaccola sotto il Moggio" is its name, which may be paraphrased in English by "The Light Under the Bushel," a singularly inappropriate motto, by the way, for its modest author! And it is worth mention that this poet, who breaks hearts for the mere pastime of serving them up in his multi-colored prose—ah, art for art, how many are thy victims!—is as much the subject of gossip as the police force is in New York. They don't chatter over such significant matters as the removal of a police captain from the Tenderloin to the Bronx district; these intellectually benighted Romans have only poets, musicians and painters to discuss. And it is a loving gossip. As soon as a new work of a dramatist is announced the talk begins in street and boudoir, palace and bourse, church and café. You might suppose an election primary was at hand. The very coachmen volunteer criticism, and if you timidly inform them that in darkest New York Duse's name is known they look the very picture of incredulity smiling on a carriage seat. Thus it was that I heard of D'Annunzio's vain efforts to divorce his wife, the Duchess Gallese, in order to marry the charming Signorina Rosita, daughter of the Marquise Rudini. The interest displayed in this complicated scandal shook all Italy as if by a moral earthquake. In Venice they still speak of Duse and D'Annunzio; not so in Rome. D'Annunzio is now in Milan, working with Baron Franchetti over their new opera, to be produced next March, called "The Daughter of Jorio."

It is his successful drama of that name set to music.

Therefore I listened to his new and bloody tragedy at the Costanzi with more than passing attention. Though interpreted by that robust and gifted young actor, Fumagalli, I did not care for the play, for reasons not to be given just now. But Oscar Wilde's "Salomé" was the afterpiece, and this pleasing entertainment for babes in arms held me in my uncomfortable stall until the final curtain drop. New York will probably see it first, with the seven league boots of Richard Strauss' music, for the tragedy demands acting of a high order and a gorgeous setting. Played by amateurs on bare boards it is no longer Wilde, who is luxurious or nothing in his art. It is a skilful adaptation of Gustave Flaubert's "Herodias," and, horribly morbid as it is in its commingling of blood and lust (these characters have no real life outside the psychopathic ward), it lacks the genuine fibre of tragedy.

But what has Wilde d'Annunzio to do with Rome, with the Pope? Only that Rome, of all cities in the world, furnishes the most surprises. The palimpsests of its various civilizations are not its chief charms. It can be as new as to-morrow while basking in the neighborhood of antiquity. Besides, I didn't go to Rome to see the Pope. It was the marbles of the Vatican that haled me off my projected course. If Leo XIII. had been alive, then, I told myself, an audience by hook or crook; but the former Cardinal Sarti and former Patriarch of Venice had never appealed to my sense of the picturesque. He had always seemed an honest bourgeois Pope, a hard working, rather pathetic Pope, but a Pope without the magnificent intellectual prestige of Leo XIII., or possessing the bonhomie of Pius IX.—of whom his predecessor, Gregory XVI., remarked that "even the very cats in his house were Carbonari." This was when Pius IX. was the Bishop of Imola and a liberal. Those cats changed their tune after 1848!

The usual manner of approaching the Holy Father is to go around to the American Embassy and harry the good tempered secretary into a promise of a ticket, that is, if you are not acquainted in clerical circles. I was not long in Rome before I discovered that both Mgr. Kennedy and Mgr. Merry Du Val were at Frascati enjoying a hard earned vacation. So I dismissed the ghost of one idea and pursued my pagan worship at the Museo Vaticano. Then the heavy hoofs of three hundred pilgrims invaded the peace of the quiet Hotel Fischer up in the Via Sallustiana. They had come from Cologne and the vicinity of the upper Rhine bearing Peter's pence, wearing queer clothes and good natured smiles. They tramped the streets and churches of Rome did these commonplace, pious folk. They burrowed in the Catacombs and they ate their meals, men and women alike, with such a hearty gnashing of teeth, such a rude appetite, that one envied their vitality, their faith, their wholesale air of having accomplished the conquest of Rome.

Their schedule, evidently prepared with great forethought and one that went absolutely to pieces when put to the test of practical operation, was wrangled over at each meal, where the Teutonic clans foregathered in full force. The third day I heard of a projected audience at the Vatican. These people had come to Rome to see the Pope. Big boned and giant like Mgr. Pick visited the hotel daily, and once after I saw him in conference with Signor Fischer I asked him if it were possible——

No Evening Dress.

"Of course," responded the wily Fischer, "anything is possible in Rome." Wear evening dress? Nonsense! That was in the more exacting days of Leo XIII. The present Pope is a democrat. He hates vain show. Perhaps he has absorbed some of the Anglo-Saxon antipathy to seeing evening dress on a male during daylight. But the ladies wear veils. All the morning of October 5 the hotel was full of eager Italians selling veils to the German ladies.

Carriages blocked the streets and almost stretched four square around the Palazzo Margherita. There was noise. There were explosive sounds when bargains were driven. Then, after the vendors of saints' pictures, crosses, rosary beads—chiefly gentlemen of Oriental persuasion, comical as it may seem—we drove off in high feather nearly four hundred strong. I had secured from Mgr. Pick, through the offices of my amiable host, a parti-hued badge with a cross and the motto, "Coeln—Rom., 1905," which, interpreted, meant Cologne—Rome. I felt like singing "Nach Rom," after the fashion of the Wagnerians in act II. of "Tannhauser," but contented myself with abusing my coachman for his slow driving. It was all as exciting as a first night at the opera.

The rendezvous was the Campo Santo dei Tedeschi, which, with its adjoining church of Santa Maria della Pieta, was donated to the Germans by Pius VI. as a burying ground. There I met my companions of the dining room, and after a stern looking German priest with the bearing of an officer interrogated me I was permitted to join the pilgrims. What at first had been a thing of no value was now become a matter of life and death. The mesmeric influence of the large and enthusiastic body of pilgrims was beginning its work. I knew it, for had I not night after night, year after year, sat out execrable plays in the theatres of New York, plays whose sentiments I loathed, whose sentiments, nevertheless, brought tears to my uncritical eyes, and all because no man is strong enough to quite withstand the electric currents circulating through a gathering of his fellow men? Mob-mania it has been called by Le Bon in his "Psychology of the Crowd."

After standing above the dust and buried bones of illustrious and forgotten Germans we went into the church and were cooled by an address in German of a worthy cleric whose name I cannot recall. I remember that he told us that we were to meet the Vicar of Christ, a man like ourselves. He emphasized, strangely so it appeared to me, the humanity of the great prelate before whom we were bidden that gloomy autumnal afternoon. And then, after intoning a Te Deum, we filed out in pairs, first the women, then the men, along the naked stones until we reached the end of the Via delle Fondamenta. The pilgrims wore their everyday clothes. One even saw the short cloak and the green jägerhut. We left our umbrellas at a garderobe; its business that day was a thriving one. We mounted innumerable staircases. We entered the Sala Regia, our destination—I had hoped for the more noble and spacious Sala Ducale.

Three o'clock was the hour set for the audience, but His Holiness was closeted with a French ecclesiastical Eminence and there was a delay of nearly an hour. We spent it in staring at the sacred and profane frescos of Daniele da Volterra, Vasari, Salviati and Zuccuri staring at each other. The women, despite their Italian veils, looked hopelessly Teutonic, the men clumsy and ill at ease. There were uncouth and guttural noises. Conversation proceeded amain. Some boasted of being heavily laden with rosaries and crucifixes, for all desired the blessing of the Holy Father. One man, a young German-American priest from the Middle West, almost staggered beneath a load of pious bric-à-brac. The guilty feelings which had assailed me as I passed the watchful gaze of the Swiss Guards began to wear off. The Sala Regia bore an unfamiliar aspect, though I had been haunting it and the adjacent Sistine Chapel daily for the previous month. An aura, coming I knew not whence, surrounded us. The awkward pilgrims, with their daily manners, almost faded away, and when at last a murmur went up:—"The Holy Father! the Holy Father! He approaches!" a vast sigh of relief was exhaled. The tension had become unpleasant.

POPE PIUS X.

We were ranged on either side, the women to the right, the men to the left of the throne, which was an ordinary looking tribune. It must be confessed that later the fair sex was vigorously elbowed to the rear. In America the women would have been well to the front, but the dear old Fatherland indulges in no such new fangled ideas of sex equality. So the polite male pilgrims by superior strength usurped all the good places. A tall, handsome man in evening clothes—solitary in this respect, with the exception of the Pope's body suite—patrolled the floor obsequiously followed by the Suisse in their hideous garb. A murrain on Michelangelo's taste if he designed such hideous uniforms!

I fancied that he was no less than a prince of the royal blood, so masterly was his bearing. When I discovered that he was the Roman correspondent of a well known North German gazette my respect for the newspaper man abroad was vastly increased. The power of the press——

"His Holiness comes!" was announced, and this time it was not a false alarm. From a gallery facing the Sistine Chapel entered the inevitable Swiss Guards; followed the officers of the Papal household, grave and reverend seigniors; a knot of ecclesiastics, all wearing purple; Monsignor Pick, the Papal prothonotary and a man of might in business affairs; then a few stragglers—anonymous persons, stout, bald, officious—and, finally, Pope Pius X.

Pope Pius' Appearance

He was attired in pure white, even to the sash that compassed his plump little figure. A cross depended from his neck. He immediately and in the most matter of fact fashion held out his hand to be kissed. I noted the whiteness of the nervous hand tendered me, bearing the ring of Peter, a large, square emerald surrounded by diamonds. Though seventy the Pope looks ten years younger. He is slightly under medium height. His hair is white, his complexion dark red veined, and not very healthy. He seems to need fresh air and exercise; the great gardens of the Vatican are no compensation for this man of sorrows, homesick for the sultry lagoons and stretches of gleaming waters in his old diocese of Venice. If the human in him could call out it would voice, "Venice," not the Vatican. The flesh of his face is what the painters call "ecclesiastical flesh," large in grain; his nose broad, unaristocratic; his brows strong and harmonious. His eyes may be brown, but they seemed black and brilliant and piercing. He moved with silent alertness. An active, well preserved man, though he has achieved the biblical threescore and ten last June. I noted, too, with satisfaction the shapely ears, artistic ears, musical ears, their lobes freely detached. A certain resemblance to Pius IX. there is, but Pius X. is not a man of mediocre intelligence. He is not so amiable as was that good tempered Pope, who was nicknamed by his intimate friend, the Abbé Liszt, "Pio Nino" because of his musical proclivities. Altogether, I found another than the Pope I had expected. This, then, was that exile—an exile, yet in his native land; a prisoner in sight of the city of which he is the spiritual ruler; a prince over all principalit

BIGGEST DUCK HUNTING CLUB.

How Bolsa Chica Sportsmen Bag Their Birds.

Pursuit of Waterfowl Made Luxurious and Easy.

A Great Institution and He Who Established It.

Of all shooting none is so full of charm as the pursuit of wild fowl and no other sport with the gun affords such endless variety both of quarry and of shot. Each season, nay, each day's shooting in the marshes brings some experience new to the gunner, however great may be his experience. Neither quail shooting in the scrub, or over dogs in the stubble, nor the driving of grouse on the moors have so great an attraction for the nature-loving sportsman who haunts the marshes and learns to read sounds and signs which have no significance for the great majority of the brotherhood of the breech-loader.

A few years ago wild fowling in Southern California was of unrivaled excellence, for then the pursuit was carried out upon a more natural basis than is now possible, when artificial means have to be used to make the sport possible. Not many years ago there were few gunners, and vast numbers of birds which, being but little disturbed, were far less shy and cunning than they are today. Then every man had his favorite locality, or shooting ground, which could only be reached by driving or riding; everything had to be carried to his camp. Once the haunt was reached, there was little fear that other shooters would mar the sport. A well-trained dog, a sound constitution and fair condition were indispensable to success, and the man possessed of these advantages could enjoy the finest of sports in its most glorious form.

But as population increases this delightfully natural method of hunting soon becomes impossible, except only upon very large and carefully preserved lands. So rapid of late has been the growth of new towns, watering places and summer resorts, all laced together by the cobweb of trolley lines, that but for the foresight of the few prompt steps to avert it, ducks, geese, snipe and curlew had long since been driven away beyond recall. But the crisis was met by the clubs who, by forming quiet sanctuaries for the persecuted birds, and by providing fresh-water ponds with good shelter, and also by the regulation of seasons and the number of days per week, as well as by setting a reasonable limit to bags, have made it possible for tens of thousands of birds to be brought to table that would otherwise pass further down the coast or remain farther north.

Of these duck-shooting clubs there are many, some great and some small. There are clubs which own hundreds and even thousands of acres of marsh lands, while others less fortunate have to rent a small acreage in a suitable locality, form ponds, pump water and attract fowl by protecting them on off days, and the birds soon find these new places where they can enjoy sanctuary and rest.

THE BIGGEST OF ALL.

Of the great clubs the Bolsa Chica stands easily first in magnitude and completeness. This club owes its existence to its president, Count Von Schmidt, a sportsman and naturalist, who formed a syndicate about five years ago to take up the three thousand-acre tract of mixed marsh and flat lands which comprises the estate, and includes about three miles of splendid beach frontage. Under able management the property has been greatly improved in every sense. Many wells have been sunk, dams built, channels made and filled, the tule beds extended, and the blinds so placed that the occupants cannot interfere with each other's shooting. A considerable number of men have been trained that they may attend the different members to their blinds, collect the birds or paddle the canoes when the channels are

STEEL TIRES FOR MOBES.

New Invention to be Used on French Machines.

Will Save Much Time in Case of Punctures.

French Chauffeurs Best for Foreign Mobes.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] An interesting article published in the European edition of the Herald gives a description of a new departure in the always vexed question of tires. This consists of a detachable rim. The wheels of the automobile are fitted with a thick steel rim through which a series of six bolts are passed, and the tire is mounted in the ordinary manner upon a separate steel rim, cut flat on the outside and made to slip over a steel band on the wheel. Projecting from the near side of the rim are six steel eyes, which pass over the six bolts already referred to, and nuts keep this tire in place. The advantage of the new device is apparent in racing as also in touring, as in case of a punctured tire all the chauffeur has to do is to pick up the automobile wheel, and in five minutes slip on a new tire, which is inflated and ready.

Local interest has been manifested in the discussion waged in New York as to the capability of French chauffeurs, the general view here that it is absurd to consider that nationality influences the question, but it is pointed that if French chauffeurs from long training naturally understand the mechanism of the French machines better than Americans, so they may be more capable of driving an imported automobile.

FOOTBALL PEACE.

FACTIONS GET TOGETHER.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] After a long session at the Netherland Hotel the football solons last night finally announced that the two factions had agreed to amalgamate. The official announcement reads: "The two committees have amalgamated upon the understanding that the chairman should be elected from the old committee and the secretary from the conference committee and that Mr. Camp act as editor of the rules. Upon ballot Mr. Dennis was elected chairman, Dr. Babbitt, secretary, and Mr. Camp editor of the rules. Dr. Babbitt then tendered his resignation as secretary in favor of Mr. Reid, who was elected from the conference committee."

PINCUS TURNS UP.

NOW LIVES IN ENGLAND.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Jacob Pincus made his appearance at the Hoffman House yesterday for the first time in four years. The veteran trainer who prepared Iroquois for his victory in the English Derby, now makes his home at Newmarket, England, where he trains a string of his own horses. He looks to be in splendid health and had a successful season with his horses last year, winning two races once in one day. He came to the paddock to meet A. J. Joyner and J. J. Hyland and the three experts had an interesting confab of it. Trainer Enoch Wishard of the J. A. Drake string was also present and reports his lot now at Sheepshead Bay to be wintering well. Superintendent Gorman of Belmont Park dropped in and reports the "Boots" Durnell and Johnson strings that are wintering there to be in good condition.

Official report from motor cars registered in Moscow, Russia, is to the effect that out of 250 machines, 180 are Oldsmobiles. Of the balance 75 per cent. are French make, 15 per cent. Belgian, and 10 per cent. German.

AUTO SHOWS IN NEW YORK.

Rival Exhibitions are Open to the Public.

Competition Has Brought Out Fine Displays.

Airships and Balloons Shown as Air Autos.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Two automobile shows opened to the public at 8 o'clock tonight that will be epoch-making. For those who go first to Madison Square Garden a revelation is in store. For those who visit the magnificent new Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory at Lexington avenue and Twenty-sixth street, a delightful treat awaits. In each it is apparent that a new era in industrial expositions has begun. The two shows are the lining up of two great forces in the automobile industry. In Madison Square Garden is the Selden show. In the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory is the anti-Selden show. Selden is the name of a basic patent in the construction of gasoline automobiles. All the makers of gasoline vehicles exhibited in the garden pay license under that patent. All the exhibitors of gasoline machines in the armory deny the validity of the Selden claims and refuse to give tribute. That is one reason why there are two shows. The other reason is that no single building in New York City is sufficiently large to house all the 1906 models of automobiles manufactured in the United States, not counting imported models.

Two shows were essential and the Selden patent fight brought about a natural line of demarcation. The exhibition in Madison Square Garden is given by the Association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers, commonly known as The Selden Syndicate. That in the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory is promoted by the Automobile Club of America. The latter organization, antithetically though it may seem, takes no side in the Selden patent fight. The club lost its lease to the garden, where it has been interested in five previous exhibitions and rather than go out of the show business, obtained permission to use the new armory for that purpose. A show open to the world was announced and quite naturally the anti-Seldenites flocked to the club standard.

From a show point the patent fight has been a blessing. It has instigated a rivalry that has brought forth the handsomest exhibitions of the kind ever attempted here. It has revolutionized the industrial show business, for in the two shows there are 424 exhibitors of automobiles, parts and accessories. Of these 220 display their product in the garden and 204 in the armory. In the garden there are thirty makes of American gasoline pleasure vehicles, eleven makes of imported gasoline cars, eight makes of electric vehicles and seven of commercial vehicles, giving a total of fifty-six different makes of motor vehicles. In the armory are forty-four makes of American gasoline pleasure vehicles, two of electric vehicles, two of steamers and seven of commercial wagons, giving a total of fifty-five and eighteen of foreign cars.

An interesting feature of the armory show is the exhibit of airships and balloons by the Aero Club of America. This includes four airships, four balloons and two aeroplanes, besides numerous small models of air craft. Members of the Automobile Club of America were given a private view of the armory show at 4 o'clock this afternoon. Both shows will be closed tomorrow and will reopen on Monday morning for six days.

BELMONT RE-ELECTED.

CHAIRMAN OF STEWARDS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] August Belmont was again elected chairman of the stewards of the Jockey Club at a meeting at the Windsor Arcade yesterday. The two terms of four stewards having expired, Mr. Belmont, James R. Keene, J. Bradford and Frank K. Sturgis were reëlected. Schuyler L. Parsons was admitted to membership in the club.

BUY FRENCH AUTOS.

ONE COMES TO CALIFORNIA.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] There is no dearth of American purchases of French automobiles. Robert Hamilton of San Francisco is preparing to tour Europe by acquiring a twenty-four-horse-power Delauny-Belleville Chassis with a double phaeton body machine, destined later for use in California.

WHICH STYLE BEST?

WRESTLING OR JIU-JITSU.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The respective merits of wrestling and jiu-jitsu are undergoing another argument. Last winter the Japanese art of self-defense attracted much attention here, but the interest died away, after George Bothner and Alex Swanson wrestled one Higashi, who claimed to be the most expert jiu-jitsu man in New York. Wrestling and the Japanese game did not seem to mix well, and for several months but little has been naedr of the latter. But Alex Swanson has stirred up another discussion by claiming that he defeated Higashi. At that time Higashi posed as the only real exponent of the art. Now comes Prof. Tomita, who says that Higashi might have known something of jiu-jitsu, but that his knowledge of the game was very limited. In short, Tomita wants to take on Swanson.

LEWIS A BAD ONE.

SPORTS SORE AT HERRERA.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Sports today discussed the Lewis-Fitzgerald fight and all agreed that Lewis was a great disappointment. He gives as an excuse for his lack of ginger that he had an inflamed toe and this had to be lanced immediately after the fight. It would probably have been better to lance it before the scrap as Lewis's showing has put him out of the running here. Fitz made a very clever fight and gained prestige, as Lewis was full six pounds heavier.

Young Corbett's defeat caused mourning here as many bet on him, arguing that from the reports of his good condition he would easily defeat the Mexican. After the reports came in they all agreed that the Mexican won by a fluke. It's astonishing the popularity of Young Corbett in San Francisco. If a match is made for him here he will prove a big drawing card.

AUTOMEN BUSY UP THE COAST.

Santa Barbara Now Mecca of the Motorists.

Touring Conditions Better; Farmers Favorable.

Many Big Foreign Cars Now in the Channel City.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.] SANTA BARBARA, Jan. 13.—Automobiling is now at its zenith in this locality. Many of the wealthy tourists who regularly come to the Channel City for the winter season have arrived, and have brought their machines, some having three or four large touring cars. Santa Barbara has become the favorite destination for runs from Los Angeles and San Francisco, and every day brings in new touring parties.

The favorite long-distance run this winter is along the coast highways, and many automobilists stop over here for a few hours or days en route.

The agitation raised against automobilists generally along the coast line seems to have died out altogether. Late arrivals say that every one gives them a hearty welcome, and offers any information in regard to roads or distances, or other assistance to the travelers that is requested. This mutual friendship between the coast residents and the owners of chug wagons is probably the result of the careful handling of automobiles by those who are making long-distance runs of late. Few speed trips are being made at present, and automobilists have come to a realization that it is to their interests to look out for the safety and convenience of those they meet on the road. The residents along the highways have also learned that automobilists have become a profitable source of income, and are beginning to cater to their patronage.

Among the recent arrivals in this city are Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Russell and daughter, who are registered at the Potter Hotel. Mr. Russell is a prosperous real estate dealer of Portland, and is now on his way to Los Angeles and San Diego in his twelve-horse-power Franklin car, making the run by easy stages. For several years he has made this trip annually, and has now become so much attached to the journey that he intends to make it an annual affair. He says there is no place on the route that he likes so well as Santa Barbara, and has, therefore, decided to remain over here for a longer period than at other stops on the trip. He reports that roads are fair, but that they require constant attention to keep them in repair, and expresses the opinion that it would be to the interest of Californians to keep their highways in the best of condition in order to attract those who usually spend their winters in speeding over the good roads of Southern France, and who would prefer to come to this climate if the roads were as good as those across the water.

Nat F. Moore, a Chicago millionaire and son of James Hobart Moore of the Rock Island Railroad, arrived in the city on Sunday in a private car with his bride and a party of friends, who will remain for the winter in Montecito. Mr. Moore has brought out his new forty-horse-power DeDietrich automobile, a swift and powerful French machine, and three more arrived today. While in Los Angeles last winter he purchased a DeDietrich machine, which was brought to that city by a French count. The one he has now is a new one, just imported from France. His are all French makes, two Mercedes and one Panchard.

H. C. Clark, a prominent resident of Minneapolis, has shipped his fifty-horse-power 1905 Thomas automobile to this city. It arrived from Seattle by steamer yesterday, and Mr. Clark and party are coming down by train to remain here for the winter. His machine will be driven by Alex Hanson.

William Disston of Philadelphia, manager of Henry Disston & Sons, the saw manufacturers, who has been at the Potter for several weeks, with his family, has just returned from Los Angeles with his thirty-horse-power Peerless. He is here for the winter season, and will make many excursions in his automobile out from this city.

Mrs. Daniel McBirney of Chicago arrived with her maid, and is registered at the Arlington Hotel. She shipped her thirty-horse-power Autocar down from San Francisco by steamer. She will soon be joined by her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Gilbert. She will remain for the winter with friends in Mission Cañon.

Mrs. Edward V. Price, who is connected with the well-known Chicago clothing firm of the same name, has just returned from an automobile excursion to Portland, made in her Pope-Toledo touring car. She was at the Potter Hotel early in December, and is now here for the rest of the winter season.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Foster of Seattle, Wash., arrived from the north yesterday in a Peerless touring car. They are registered at the Potter for a few days, and will then continue their journey to Los Angeles.

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Kliesner, prominent residents of Portland, arrived in the city Sunday afternoon en route south in a large Peerless car. After a visit at the Potter Hotel, he will go south to Los Angeles.

H. E. Harrison and Dr. J. Lansing, automobile owners of Los Angeles, arrived in the city in a Maxwell machine on their way to the northern part of this county. They are on a pleasure and business trip.

Pat Exercised It.

"See here, Pat, this automobile of mine looks as if it had had some pretty lively usage. You didn't have it out while I was away, did you?"

"Why, yes, sor; I did. I was afraid it would git shtiff shtanding in the shtable so long, an' so I give it a little lively exercise, d'ye moind, every plisint day"

PRETTY INLAND RUN; ENTRIES ARE PLENTY.

PICTURESQUE in the extreme, and not promoted by any dealer, or combination of dealers, the Los Angeles-San Diego endurance run bids fair to attract the attention not only of the motoring amateurs, but also that of all of the trade who can secure their new model cars in time to avail themselves of so splendid an opportunity for a public demonstration.

It is estimated now that between seventy and one hundred cars will make the run, many of them being driven by the leading motorists of the city, particularly the venturesome sort which rather enjoy "out-of-line" stunts, such as pioneering the back country.

A general opinion that the Los Angeles-San Diego run is impracticable for an ordinary automobile does not seem borne out by the facts. Notwithstanding the sixty-odd miles of mountain passes en route, there are long stretches of magnificent mesa roads, level as any floor and as hard, over which a speed of thirty-five miles an hour would be possible if permissible. There is little sand or heavy pulling, and the magnificent wildness of the scenery absolutely beggars description. It affords an opportunity to see rural California that no tourist should miss, and from present prospects few of them intend to do so.

From Temescal to Escondido, the motorists will find plenty of hill climbing, but the roads this side and beyond are all that could be asked in any part of this country. In San Diego county after the mountains are left behind, the touring party will spin over oiled thoroughfares of pleasing hardness and resiliency, over spacious mesas, mountain-rimmed, with occasional cañons for variety, and plenty of timber to relieve the eye.

The accompanying itinerary is correct in every detail, and is official data for the run, which starts from 7 to 9 o'clock of January 25 at the Plaza, cars assembling there and starting on Main street.

Route, first division, Los Angeles to Monrovia, seventeen miles. Cups will be given to the touring car and the runabout making highest scores and to car using least gasoline per passenger. Certificates will be awarded to cars finishing and following route. First class to all losing not over fifty points if with tire troubles and twenty-five points if without tire troubles. Second class certificates go to those losing not over 100 points and third class certificates to all finishers. Medallions for each car finishing will probably be conferred by the Coronado Country Club.

CLASSIFICATION.

FRANKLIN'S SCHEME.

Automobilists generally are in favor of the plan advanced by H. H. Franklin of Syracuse, who urges that cylinder displacement per mile of travel be made the basis for engine construction, and that the classification of automobiles by weight in racing be abolished. He believes that the adoption of his plan would add great value to speed contests, and would tend to encourage manufacturers to enter racing and to build machines of practical value for competition.

Cylinder displacement per mile of travel means that all cars would be geared to displace a certain specified number of cubic inches per mile on the high gear of the car. The displacement is the number of revolutions per mile, multiplied by the area of the pistons and by the stroke of the pistons, and then by two, there being two explosions per revolution.

Second-hand Cars.

Automobile dealers are beginning to object to the practice of taking second-hand cars in trade for new ones, and the majority of the reputable dealers in the big city now decline to take in trade any makes other than those in which they are interested. In such transactions it is generally a case of making two sales to get one profit, for the dealer is lucky to get as much for the second-hand car as he allowed in the trade.

MEXICAN GARAGE.

IT DOES BUSINESS.

Mohler and DeGress, automobile agents in Mexico City, are constructing a large garage which will have a floor area of 1450 square yards and is located near the business center of the city. The building will probably be ready for occupancy within a few weeks.

In addition to their automobile line they do an extensive business in Rambler cycles, the Mexicans being greatly interested in the pastime. The firm has ordered a complete equipment of American repair machinery and has secured the services of expert American mechanics.

"Get a Horse."

Thackeray, in "The Irish Sketch Book," originated the expression, "get a horse," which children are prone to shout at passing automobiles.

CRACK TEAMS FOR FLORIDA.

Foreign Makers Going After Honors in Earnest.

Three Big Builders of Cars Enter Five Each.

American Representation is Dwarfed—Drivers.

Foreign makers are to make a determined bid for the two-miles-a-minute championship at Ormond this winter, and have entered, shame to say, a majority of the cars that will contest in this midwinter classic of American automobiling.

Whether the American manufacturers are unwilling to take a chance alongside the Mercedes, Fiat, Renault, Napier and Darracq creations, or are just too busy, is a question that affords the best of fields for the exercise of charity; the deduction is not very favorable to American motor makers.

When the Fiat concern can get together five of its powerful racing machines manned by such drivers as Lancia, Young, Cedrino, Fletcher and the Darracqus oppose them with five more cars, steered by Hemery, Guinness, the big Irish brewer, and others of the same class, it seems pitiful that American sportsmanship cannot hold up its end in better shape. Nor are these all. The Mercedes concern will have five cars on the beach, driven by Jenatzy, Foxhall Keene, and others of equal class. Sziss and Bernin in Renaults; Duray's DeDeitrich; a Zust, and more galore are to represent the other side of the big pond while most of our own millionaires have found it necessary to drive foreign wagons if they get enough power—Willie Vanderbilt's machine being a 200-horse Darracq guaranteed to do a mile in 0:30.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt and a few others came forward gamely; Mr. Vanderbilt's creation is rated at 250 horse power; Walter Christie will have a rehabilitated freak in the running; there will be a Ford to be handled by Henry Ford, a Tohmas or two, but very few in the strict sense are racing cars.

The Americans have made up in numbers, perhaps, what they lack in quality, about forty ordinary-power cars being named.

The absence of H. L. Bowden, holder of the straightaway mile record will be felt sorely. His big "double sixty" Mercedes looks more like a winner than any other American car.

What the Pope-Toledo special creations will do on the straightaway is to be demonstrated, but they cannot beat more powerful cars. Thus far few American makers have dared to try putting much over three figure horse power into even a freak car, and those who have hardly made a success of it.

Nearly all the Florida men will take a shot at the Cuban races. Joe Tracy and his locomobile, one of the best American racing cars ever built, will be there if the "loco" stands the previous strain. The visiting experts will cross the Florida straits en masse, and it is hard to see how President Conill's pet scheme can fail to achieve the success it deserves.

NOVEL CAR IS OUT; LOCAL TRADE BUSY.

THE "Elmore Surprise" that this pioneer two-cycle engine concern has had under cover for the New York show it out, and bids fair to prove as sensational as its name. It is a three-cylinder-two-cycle machine of twenty-four horse-power, consisting of three such cylinders as are used in the 1905 Pathfinder, it having been found that the two large cylinders, as proposed, racked the car to such an extent that it would eventually tear itself to pieces. With the three cylinders, vibration is practically eliminated, the Elmore people claim. Their new car is to sell at $1650. A speed of from two to forty-five miles an hour on the high speed is claimed. It is as nearly self-starting as an automobile can be.

Andrew J. Smith, the local agent of the Pathfinder, reports that he has sold one of these three-cylinder machines to W. S. McGiffert of Covina, and expects deliveries about February 1. The cars are shaft-driven.

L. C. Lull of the Auto Vehicle Company has left for New York to inspect the New York shows and ascertain what is the prevailing idea in Eastern motor practice.

Dr. Williams of Santa Barbara and Mrs. Fred Steinway of New York are local purchasers of new Whites.

C. A. Hawkins, Coast manager for the White, says he is ninety cars behind orders on Coast business, despite delivery of twelve cars weekly. Eight more carloads have been allotted for February.

F. C. Fenner recently drove his White up to his mine beyond Old Baldy, and found it necessary to travel over three miles of ice, climbing several steep grades.

Mrs. Robert J. Burdette, wife of the well-known humorist, has joined the White squadron, having purchased a 1906 model last week for use between this city and Pasadena.

The first Model L, two-cycle, twenty-horse-power Oldsmobile will go to W. H. Thayer of this city, he having placed his deposit for one of these novel cars.

C. D. Blaney is back in Los Angeles on the return trip of his tour down the coast, which had its southern terminus in San Diego. A broken leaf in a spring is the only trouble reported. He ran into a snow storm at Arrowhead.

It is reported around automobile headquarters that the well-known firm of Leavitt & Bill has dissolved partnership, Mr. Bill to take Southern California and continue the bicycle and motorcycle business with the addition of the Stoddard-Dayton car.

C. A. Canfield, head of the Associated Oil Company, has placed his order for his second Pope-Toledo, and is having it fitted with all the special equipment of leather top, Gabriel horn, speedometer, etc., which makes a car up to date.

Chauncey L. Clark and F. L. Auten of Altadena received their Packards last week.

The Pope-Toledo demonstrator was received by the Western Motor Car Company yesterday and is a most highly finished and elegant appearing car, painted such a lurid red that it will need no tuba, Gabriel horn or muffler-cut-out to announce its coming within a mile.

Robert Clark of Peoria whisky fame is in town visiting his uncle, Chauncey Clark.

Just before leaving the East, Robert Clark, an enthusiastic automobilist, declares he went out for a little hunting trip in his machine and on leaving it to flush some game in a field alongside the road, the float in the carburetor did not seat, and there being a strong wind the gas was distributed over the adjacent country and readily turned into ice. When he returned, Clark solemnly avers the vicinity looked like the scene of a snowstorm. He had no more gasoline and was out of range of supplies, but had a bottle of the firm's product with him as a sort of gate-opener for the farmers, and it occurred to him that as a last resort it might be worth while to try it in the gasoline tank. He lifted his spark, shut down the throttle and made a very fair trip home on the booze.

It is understood that this prescription works better in the engine than in the driver.

The Western Motor Car Company announce obtaining the agency for the Buick, formerly held by D. M. Lee in this city.

These cars are well known here, being of the two-cylinder-opposed type of motor and rated at twenty-four horse-power. They are designed to accommodate five passengers. This year's model will be finished in French gray with red upholstery, and will be very striking in appearance.

The first shipment is due next week.

Among the week's purchasers of Wayne cars are Dr. Francis L. Auten of this city, who bought a runabout for use in his practice, and B. W. Fletcher, who took a touring car.

In another respect, too, the new champion differs from most of his predecessors, and that is in his love for good clothes.

Nobody in the pugilistic line ever dressed better than he does.

There have been other boxers who did the Beau Brummel act, but as a rule their taste was garish. They went to the extremes; the loud plaids; the vociferous neckwear.

"O'Brien" dresses in perfect taste. His clothes are the best that money can buy, and they are either imported from London or modeled on the best English lines.

No one of his fashionable neighbors presents any better appearance than the champion, for in addition to having the liking for good clothes and the knowledge of how to select them, "O'Brien" has also the ability to wear them.

His big shoulders set off a great coat to advantage, and his square-cut face, with the powerful jaw, never looks so well as when it is topped by a silk hat.

It is an entirely new type of champion which "O'Brien" presents, one about as radically different from the old type of barroom swagger as could well be imagined, and it shows that even in pugilism, modern ideas are taking hold, and that the premier in the slugging game has more regard for appearances and the conventions than did his forbears.

IN FOR SPORT.

CHANNEL BOYS BUSY.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SANTA BARBARA, Jan. 13.—Track athletics are now attracting the attention of the High School boys of this city. They have laid aside their football and baseball equipment, and have started in with the new school term on active practice in all school field sports. There are 110 boys in the High School to choose a team from, and there is no lack of good material to represent it this year in interscholastic field sports. The boys have turned out in good shape this week for daily practice, and general enthusiasm in their work exists. William Porter has been selected as manager of the track team. He says that this year's team will be the best that Santa Barbara has ever had, and is anxious for an opportunity to show what his men can do in competition with other school teams.

Several field-day meets have already been arranged. On the 10th of February there will be an interclass meet on the High School grounds, at which the boys will contest for places on the big school team. Later there will be a field-day contest between the Santa Barbara and the Ventura high schools, if proper arrangements can be made, and on March 24 the big field-day meet of the Southern California Athletic Association will be held in this city. This includes many of the best schools of Southern California, and among the high schools represented will be Los Angeles, Pasadena, Anaheim, Azusa, Ventura, Oxnard, Santa Paula and Santa Barbara.

The high-school athletic field has been improved and put in good shape for practice events. The cinder path has been enlarged, now extending around the tennis court, and the present rain will lay the dust and put a good surface on the ground.

SNELL'S BIG SCORE.

HIGH TENPIN ROLL.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SANTA BARBARA, Jan. 13.—A. E. Snell of this city, who was formerly a bowling expert of San José, made one of the highest tenpin scores of the year on the Bath-house alleys Thursday night, when he rolled 264. He was playing in competition with John Jung, who made 214 in the same game. They were playing in a ten-game match in which Snell won out by a majority of 92 pins, their averages being: Snell, 184; Jung, 175. In his high-score game Snell started off with nine in the first frame and rolled nine successive strikes.

The small ball game of 3-11-33 has become very popular in this city among bowlers, and a tournament will be played among those who are most expert, beginning next week.

Several changes have been made in the Cuban racing schedule for next winter. The sprint races will take place on Monday, February 12.

MORE SPRIGS COMING DOWN.

Long Moonlit Nights Spoil Sport for Hunters.

Big Birds Plentiful, Also Warier Than Usual.

Rain Helps Sport Somewhat. Snipe on Clubs.

Big flights of sprigs floated in last week from far-away fastnesses of the wildfowl where Nature's marshy sanctuary apparently has been rudely defiled by the spiteful crack of nitro powder. Wilder than their wary kind usually are, and favored by long, moonlit nights that permitted them to revel to their heart's content in fresh water and grain, the big birds kept out of hunters' reach quite effectively, and gave pleasure only by the sight of their sweeping squadrons sailing through the sky hundreds of yards overhead. Though they came in off the sea at usual hours, lower they would not; a shot sent them scurrying back again as fast as strong pinions could speed the flocks, and gunners Wednesday left the blinds in disgust long before the noon flight.

No duck is more tantalizing than the sprig, and not even the wary, scary mallard knows better how to take care of himself. It is ever the old, duck hunters who bag the sprigs, and they do it only through infinite patience—by lying in wait over perfectly mounted decoys, usually made of the dead birds themselves, and posed as nearly perfect as the ingenuity of experienced men can place them. Yet the very difficulty of circumventing the wily sprig is the chief delight of bagging him. He who kills teal need only swing past the proper spot in the air some two to ten feet past the bird's bill to assure a clean kill; the festive spoonbill is easier yet, because slower. Even the canvasback is simple in the hunting; he departs but little from established lines of flight, and cares less for a man. Not so the sprig; let one hunter rise from his blind to peer around, and apparently every old papa pintail in the air sees him at once; there is a whirring of wings, a few scattering and ineffective shots and a climb into certain safety. The sprig is preëminently our greatest game duck.

Late rains helped the Saturday squads quite a bit, and probably will result in increased slaughter of spoonbills and teal today, with possibly some bigger game for variety. The dark nights, especially when rainy, tend to keep the birds lying closer, so they are not hustling for provender, and the next day's shoot is always better in consequence.

Jacksnipe are quite plentiful on many of the club marshes at present and it is becoming quite "the thing" to go out after the morning's duck shoot and bag a few long-bills. Strings of ten and fifteen for two hours' tramping are not uncommon, particularly in Orange county where some of the clubs, notably the Chico, have large patches of snipe bog.

The unusual scarcity of geese has caused much comment among sportsmen this winter. Seldom have so many ducks been seen in this part of the country. The relative rarity of the honkers and checker-breasts is therefore surprising.

UP-COAST BALL.

HATCHET BURIED.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SANTA BARBARA, Jan. 12.—The management of the Athletic baseball park has changed hands, and the long and bitter fight between the two rival baseball factions that has been waged for several weeks, seems to have come to an end.

It is announced by a prominent business man of the city that he has obtained a lease on the park, and will manage it hereafter, putting the Santa Barbara professional baseball team in the field for weekly games with outside teams. The professionals will play under the management of Jack Huston, the umpire, and the team will be reorganized, the best players from the two teams which have been at war being selected for the new team. The man who has taken the park is not expecting to get rich from the proceeds of the games, but has leased it in order to unite the warring factions and to insure good baseball to those who enjoy watching the game.

It is announced by the new management that the first game will be played on Sunday afternoon, probably with the Los Angeles Leonardts, with whom Huston has been in communication for some time. Other teams are looking for games and the proposition is to put on games every Sunday, and to assure the local sports of baseball as it should be played. Ladies will be admitted to the grounds and grand stand free of charge and carriages will be allowed to enter the field, so that those who drive can watch the games from their vehicles.

BAD SEASON FOR RACING.

LAST YEAR SAW DOWNFALL IN WESTERN STATES.

War Between Western Jockey Club and American Turf Association Results in Dire Disaster to Game in Many of Former Strongholds of the Sport.

The year 1905 has closed an eventful chapter in American turf history. In the West and South racing, largely owing to the war between the Western Jockey Club and the American Turf Association is tottering, while in Chicago it has been blotted out entirely, and in all likelihood will not be resumed for years, or until the death of one or the other of the rival controlling bodies.

It may take ten years' time to again put the sport in the West on the sound footing, and even then there will be no Washington Park or great American Derby to point to, and these were among the few redeeming features of Western racing.

While the thoroughbred sport has been dealt a finishing blow in three States—Illinois, Missouri, and Tennessee—and is in a precarious condition in Louisiana and Kentucky, where the war is still being waged, it still flourishes in the East. In the vicinity of New York, Saratoga, and Washington the season recently closed was in many respects the most profitable ever known to the sport in this country.

While Washington and Morris Parks, the two most famous race tracks in America, have passed out of existence, only the West has suffered by the loss. Supplanting Morris Park is the great Belmont course, which more than fills the place held by its historic predecessor.

Few great race horses were developed in 1905. Sysonby stands out as the one exception, and this magnificent son of the imported English sire, Melton, and out of Optime, is regarded by many critics as the best horse America ever produced, with the possible exception of the peerless Hamburg.

Beginning with his first start, when, out of condition, he ran a dead heat with Race King in the Metropolitan handicap, Sysonby went through the season without the semblance of defeat. The marvelous 3-year-old placed a fortune to his owner's (James R. Keene's) credit, and retired without a blemish and as sound as a bell.

Among Sysonby's victories were the following rich stakes:

The $50,000 Great Republic, at Saratoga; the Metropolitan handicap, dead heat, at Belmont Park; the Tidal, at Sheepshead Bay; the Brighton Derby, at Brighton Beach, and the Annual Champion at Sheepshead Bay.

In all his races Sysonby showed that he could outrun his fields from the very start, and that he could pack extremely heavy weight and carry his wonderful flight of speed over the longer distances as well, thereby being the ideal race horse in every respect. In conformation, size, and beauty, Sysonby fills the eye of the most exacting critic.

Of the fillies in the 3-year-old division Artful earned the title of champion of the year. She raced but little, but in each start demonstrated her superiority decisively.

Of the 2-year-old colts, Mohawk II, Burgomaster, and the Futurity winner, Ormondale, divided the honors of the year. The best of the Western youngsters was undoubtedly George C. Bennett, now dead.

There was not really one sensational 2-year-old filly out during the year, either in the East or West, unless it was Perverse, who did not race often enough to show that she was anything wonderful.

The all-aged division was a distinct disappointment in both sections of the country. There were no Water Boys, McChesneys, Africanders, Hermises, and Major Daingerfields—when these great horses were at their best—out last season. Old Caughnawaga, who won the Saratoga handicap, and Delhi, winner of the Brooklyn, were probably the best of the class in the East, while Bearcatcher was the only Western animal to attract more than an ordinary amount of attention.

Beldame, winner of the Suburban and other events, and Hamburg Belle were the best of the mares.

TRACKMEN BUSY.

VENTURA ATHLETICS.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

VENTURA, Jan. 13.—Track work is again contemplated by the athletes of the local High School. A meeting of the athletic association was held yesterday afternoon. Officers were chosen for the present term. Thomas Snell was elected president; Collins Flint, vice-president; Harold Dudley, secretary, and Clarence Argabrite, treasurer. It was decided at the meeting to hold an invitation field meet here on February 22 at the race track. It is proposed to invite Santa Barbara, Oxnard and Santa Paula high schools to send teams, the affair to be conducted under the rules of the S.C.H.S.A.A., except that each school be allowed to enter three men in each event and not allow any man to enter more than three events, besides the relay race. It is hoped that this meeting will stimulate interest in track athletics and induce more of the boys to take an active part. Last year only seven boys entered the annual meet from the local school owing to the fact that only one man from a school could enter an event. There is regret in the school at the loss of Stiles, the fast mile sprinter, who has gone abroad to school. The school baseball club is this year, however, exceptionally strong.

Pat's Wit Fixed It.

During the initial trips of the new motor buses on Fifth avenue, New York, they often became overcrowded, and on one occasion an Irish conductor in charge, called out to the passengers standing in the aisle: "Will thim in front plaze to move up, so that thim behind can take the places of thim in front, and lave room for thim who are nayther in front or behind?"

WINTON
$2650 $2650

A New York man, Mr. Paul McCormac, who has bought a Winton every year since 1902, says: "In all my experience, with both foreign and domestic cars, I never rode in one that was so quiet and so easily managed as this one."

Here are some of the features of the new Model K Winton which make people talk that way:

A 4-cylinder, vertical motor, the most accessible ever made.
Thirty horse power or better.
Thirty-four inch tires, on 12 spoke wood artillery wheels.
The new precision oiler, which mechanically and infallibly drives the oil to each friction part, even though frozen to the consistency of butter.
Winton Twin springs that adapt themselves automatically to light or heavy loads, on any kind of road.
New automatic compensating carburetor.
Infallible jump spark ignition. Roller contact commutator with hardened tool steel contacts.
This Winton ignition system starts the motor running from driver's seat, without "cranking."
All cylinders, pistons, piston rings, crank shafts, valves, universal couplings and transmission shafts are ground to a perfect fitting, anti-friction surface.
Luxurious tonneau, and superb upholstering, with new wrinkles for comfort and convenience added.

FOR SAFETY, SPEED, LUXURIOUSNESS AND PERFECT CONTROL, GET A WINTON MODEL "K." We will be pleased to give you a demonstration.

BOLSA CHICA.

being shot over. Kennels are provided so members may leave their dogs at the club. A boathouse stands a couple of hundred yards above the dam, and here, when the boats come in, the scene is animated and picturesque.

The Bolsa Chica is the standard of excellence, both as a country club and a shooting ground. It is an unrivaled wild-fowl preserve, and no doubt induces great numbers of ducks to remain in the vicinity, where large numbers nest and breed, to the great gain of every club for miles around.

Count Von Schmidt is a soldier and a traveler, as well as a sportsman, and has long been acquainted with this Coast, having hunted in every corner of the State with Sir Lester Kaye, an English baronet, well known as a keen shot, and to the Count's experience and knowledge is due, in great measure, the successful development of this fine estate.

The electric railway lands the visitor at a singularly pretty station, within a couple of hundred yards of the clubhouse, a good road leading from the station, crosses the dam and climbs easily around and to the crest of the knoll upon which the house stands, and from whence it commands a fine view of the marshes and of the bay with its great sweeping lines. The building is irregular and rambling, distinctly picturesque with its broad verandas and broken lines of shake-covered roof and wall, on which the dark stains have been softened by the sun and se abreezes. The central block is formed by the hall, a room of generous proportions, with a lofty open-timber roof. A cavernous brick fireplace with broad hobs and heavy andirons is the chief feature; a good head of elk (Wapiti) spreads its broad beams above the mantel. The timber construction is shown everywhere, and being left as it came from the saw, pleasantly accentuates the nature and purpose of the building. Card and reading-room are a step or two below the floor level of the hall, and here, buried in a huge Morris chair, one may turn over the illustrated pages of one of the volumes of sport and travel which form the small, well-selected library. At one end of the hall is the gun room, where the enthusiast will find fowling pieces made by every great maker, some worth $600 or $700. It is instructive to note the growing favor of the 16 bore, which seems to be as surely displacing the 12 as that time-honored caliber once extinguished the old-time 10 and the cumbersome 8.

LUXURIOUS APPOINTMENTS.

As might be expected in a community composed of very wealthy men, most of whom are millionaires, the appointments of the culb are very complete, almost luxurious, in fact, there being bath-rooms and lavatories well fitted up like those of a first-class hotel, and the bedrooms number twenty-five. A copious supply of the purest spring water is conducted to the house, which is well lighted throughout by natural gas, found near by.

Luncheon and dinner are admirably served in the hall, and the president handles the carver with the same enviable dexterity upon the anatomy of the turkeys (raised on the grounds,) as he displays with his gun when walking up the wily snipe or doubling up an overhead sprig.

A dam with automatic gates, erected at great expense, serves to keep the tidal waters from flooding thousands of acres, and at the same time the fresh water is maintained at an even depth, being regulated by the gates. This capital piece of engineering, which is equal to anything of its type on the Coast, has served to convert large areas of desert into fine land bearing crops of alfalfa, sorghum, celery, etc. Sorghum has been planted about the estate, and many varieties of wild ducks frequent these patches. Entirely successful experiments, too, have been made with Japanese rice, which is a favorite food for all wild fowl. In addition to making these various provisions for entertaining our visitant game birds, about fifty sacks of grain are weekly spread about the blinds and feeding places.

The members are divided into two squads, one squad shooting on Friday afternoon and Saturday forenoon, while the second shoot takes place on Tuesday and Wednesday. The bag is limited to thirty-five birds for the afternoon, and the legal limit may be completed on the following morning, thus affording the shooter the full benefit of the morning flight. If the shoot were limited to two full one-day shoots, it seems that the results could not fail to be more satisfactory, especially if the shooting took place on the same days as those which the other clubs in the district use, as the birds would thus be kept upon the move with great regularity and would enjoy five days of complete immunity. In so great an area as 3000 acres the birds find plenty of sanctuaries among the vast beds of thickly-growing tules, the winding channels and more remote spots which can only be approached afloat, and thousands of birds make for and lie close in those haunts unless vigorously stirred up by some hunter of the channels more intent upon providing sport for the blinds than seeking it for himself. This same patrolling of the channels frequently affords some pretty shooting as one sits in the bow of a canoe or a duck punt, stealthily propelled by a paddler who takes a sporting interest in the game. It is picturesque sport, full of panoramic variety.

THE MORNING FLIGHT.

On the Bolsa Chica, as elsewhere, the morning flight, when birds are plentiful, is the acme of wild fowling. There is the early rise and the somewhat perfunctory breakfast, followed by a brisk walk in the fresh, keen air, lighted on one's road by the myriad stars blinking brilliantly in the deep blue dome. As one goes splashing across the small streams or overflows and rustling along the dykes, bodies of fowl flit ghostlike across the face of the sky, gulls appearing supernaturally huge in the dim light. Arrived at the blinds, the shell case is unlocked and placed handy, the gun is carefully wiped dry of dew and a sack is arranged upon which to sit, the sweetest of briars between the teeth; then comes the supreme hour of any in the twenty-four, that immediately preceding the dawn of a fine day. At first one becomes aware of the presence of ducks as they talk to each other subduedly, then one can hear them moving about and the rushing sound they make when darting at each other, and the paddling, dabbling noise grows louder and louder until the deep warning note of a sentinel silences the clamor with startling suddenness. After a pause it all begins again, reinforcements arrive from time to time and increase the clangor. As the stars begin to pale and a wan light comes into the east, the fowl begin to be distinguishable as little dark, quickly-moving dots. Then the stars vanish, the horizon begins to incarnadine and the restless birds in trios and strings make their way seaward. With the now quickly-approaching day these flights grow greater and greater, in teams, in companies, at last in serried ranks spreading wide in the air, thousand upon thousand of widgeon, spoonbill, sprig and teal, seem to emerge from the growing light and swarm to the sounding ocean.

At length the report of a gun sounds with sudden violence, instantly followed by another and then an unbroken fusillade continues for several minutes as birds sweep past in twos and threes high up, or low down, but all making for the sea at top speed. The firing slackens, almost ceases, bursts out again, dwindles once more to a dropping shot here and there, breaks out fitfully, lulls, flares momentarily and dies as the fiery rim of Old Sol rises majestically above the verge. A man calls to his dog as it splashes about after a wounded bird; the charm is broken.

During the summer when the musical clang of the wild fowl is no longer heard in the land, many of the members resort to the club with their families or their friends, and enjoy the fine boating and sailing to be had on the main channels, and bathe in the surf, which is perfectly safe at this point. Black bass have been turned down and already many pretty fish up to twelve and fifteen inches in length may be seen, giving promise of yet another inducement to the sportsman in the near future.

Following is the roster of the Bolsa Chica Gun Club: Jaro von Schmidt, W. F. Botsford, O. P. Posey, W. G. Kerckhoff, William Bayly, J. J. Fay, Jr., T. J. Lendrum (Dublin, Ireland,) T. E. Gibbon, Gail B. Johnson, Dr. Milbank Johnson, M. J. Connell, Dr. G. McGowan, A. L. Hawes, Isaac Milbank, J. S. Cravens, M. H. Sherman, E. J. Marshall, John B. Miller, James Slauson, H. C. Merritt, H. SLUSH MAKES HARD GUESSING.

ASCOT BETTORS SEE SPORT IN DRIZZLING RAIN.

Rubric Comes to Life and Annexes Feature Event in Easy Style, With Price Right to Suit Him—Sanfara Beats a Warm Odds on Favorite at Five Furlongs.

Flying slush that covered the jockeys with a dull dun ploster, and a drizzling rain that made racing uncertain, was the greeting handed the sports at Ascot yesterday and there was a big skirmish of the bettors to guess the right ones in the mud. Things broke fairly well considering the conditions, two favorites winning in the six races. Two fierce favorites went down in Lotus at 2 to 5 in the third race and Dr. Leggo and Orchan coupled at 1 to 2 in the fourth race. Sanfara won the third race at the opening price of 15 to 1 and the inconsistant Rubric came to life and took the fourth at 6 to 1. There was no particular feature except the condition of the jockeys at the finish, each one being so plastered with thin mud that his own mother wouldn't have known him.

Results:

Four furlongs: Sylvan Dixon, 100 (Miller,) 7 to 2, won; Lady Allece, 109 (Moriarity,) 8 to 5, second; Edwin T. Fryer, 102 (Hudlin,) 40 to 1, third; time 0:49½. Mabel Hollander, Esther B. Duke of Orleans, Hoot Mon, Allaric, Capt. Jarrell, King of Spades, Tony Faust, Ed Tracy and Algro also ran.

Mile and one half: Graphite, 88 (Neubert,) 5 to 2, won; Nine Spot, 96 (Preston,) 2 to 1, second; Fille d'Or, 92 (Miller,) 9 to 1, third; time 2:41¾. Capable, Courant, Iron King, Hoodwink, Meadowhorn, Exapo and Young Marlaw also ran.

Five furlongs: Sanfara, 106 (McDaniel,) 8 to 1, won; Lotus, 112 (Prior,) 2 to 5, second; Neatness, 100 (Miller,) 7 to 1, third; time 1:01½. Marpessa, Rezia and Alma Gardia also ran. Red Queen, Bribery, Lotta Gladstone and Evelyn Griffin scratched.

Brooks course: Rubric, 107 (Miller,) 6 to 1, won; Marshall Ney, 107 (Jackson,) 5 to 1, second; Orchan, 104 (Wiley,) 1 to 2, third; time 2:04¾. Hippocrates and Dr. Leggo also ran. Borghesi, El Otros, Wire In and Masterson scratched.

Mile and fifty yards: Clydeo, 106 (Wiley,) 13 to 10, won; Secret, 90 (Swain,) 8 to 1, second; El Otros, 105 (Miller,) 4 to 1, third; time 1:47½. Chimney Sweep and Memories also ran. Rubric scratched.

Six furlongs: Judge Denton, 108 (Moore,) 8 to 5, won; St. Winifrede, 103 (Clark,) 4 to 1, second; Parvo, 88 (Neubert,) 14 to 5, third; time 1:17½. Bert Arthur, Montezuma, Anona, Minna Baker, Antara, Chief Aloha, Florence Fonse, Lady Travers and Elfin King also ran. Tender Crest and Katie Crews scratched.

LATHAM VICTORIOUS.

WINS AT COURT TENNIS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Peter Latham left for England this morning with the knowledge that he is George Standing's superior at court tennis. Latham met Standing at the racquet and tennis club yesterday and conceding odds of fifteen to his opponent, so easily defeated him as to arouse enthusiasm on the part of the many admirers of the sport who were present. The spectators included Messrs. Clarence H. Mackay, Harry Payne Whitney, L. E. Waterbury, L. E. Larocque, M. S. Paton, J. Insley Blair and C. E. Sands, the last named himself the amateur racquet champion who acted as referee. Most of Latham's previous matches in this country had been four-handed ones. In yesterday's match he found his first opportunity to show how well he can play alone. He complained of being a trifle stiff in the first set, as he had come on from Philadelphia and had gone directly from the train to the court. In the opening set Standing won five games, but Latham was always in the lead and won the set with a score of 8 to 5. In the second set Latham made short work of his opponent, who could score only one set out of nine games. The winner was especially good in his play for openings in this set and all traces of his "stiffness" had disappeared. The match was the best two out of three sets.

BULLFIGHTER OUT.

PRIZE FIGHTER BEATS HIM.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PHILADELPHIA (Pa.) Jan. 13—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Black Bill knocked out Neuromis the Mexican bullfighter, in the fifth round last night at the Broadway Athletic Club before a big crowd. Neuromis was willing enough, but lacked experience and was forced to depend solely upon his strength. He was down for the count in every round except the fourth, when he more than held his own. In the first round Black Bill forced matters from the bell and at the close of the initial inning caught the Mexican with a right upper cut to the jaw. It was a staggering blow and only the gong saved the bullfighter. In the second round Black Bill by well measured blows had the Mexican dizzy again and he was carried to his corner at the close by his seconds. The third round found Neuromis holding on continuously to escape punishment, but in the fourth round he more than evened up matters by starting a hurricane rush and soon had Black Bill tired from his rights to the jaw and awful welts in the stomach. In the fifth round Black Bill rained blow after blow on the bullfighter and soon had him groggy, sending him to the floor three times from vicious right hand swings to the jaw. The last time the Mexican failed to come to time, taking the full count.

MOTOR BOAT RACES.

SPEEDY ONES ENTERED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PALM BEACH (Fla.) Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The second annual speed carnival for motor boats under the auspices of the Palm Beach Power Boat Association on Lake Worth, January 29 to February 2, is now an assured success as the entries of high speed boats have been received by the association's representative in New York. The entries are from the owners of the Dixie, the Simplex III, the Allen, the Mercedes U. S. A., the Six-Shooter, the Clarke and the White Fox. Other speed boats entered for the sprints are the Boestrum, The Birchwood, The Dewey, The Andrews, The Lake Worth and several smaller power boats built in Florida waters. The majority of those who will witness the Ormond-Daytona beach races will go on to Palm Beach and see the water carnival, and thence to Havana to see the automobile road race.

GOLF BY MOONLIGHT.

SPORT IN NORTH CAROLINA.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PINEHURST (N. C.) Jan. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Donald Ross and "Jack" Jolly played a golf match by moonlight this week over the links here. The pair were followed by a big crowd, and in the end Ross won by 5 up and 4 to play. The winner was around in 88, while Jolly required 93. Four fore caddies were employed, with the result that neither player lost a ball.

Los Angeles already has one auto factory, making "The Tourist," one of the best cars in this market. They report a demand away beyond their capacity. California leads every State in the Union in the sale and use of automobiles. There are more than 2000 cars owned in Los Angeles alone. At the estimated cost of our 3-cylinder machine, $1500, you will see the local investment in autos to be over $3,000,000. The number will grow rapidly as soon as our line of cars go on the market. Thirty makes are represented. Our share of this market, one-thirtieth, is $100,000 to begin with. At a profit of only 10 per cent., the first year's increase would amount to as much as the entire present stock subscription and this estimate is based on the Los Angeles market only. No one with money to invest can afford to pass this proposition.

To wash down our liquor and wash up our feechers—
Then what in the deuce
Is the swish-bingled use

To give folks a headache and make people dizzy?

"'Some poets and children and cripples and fools
They say that them falls is eternal. That so?
Say, what is Eternity, Nature and God
Compared to the Inter-graft Gaslighting Co.?
Could all the durn waterfalls born in creation Compete with a sugar or soap corporation?
But Nature, you feel,
Has a voice in the deal?
She ain't. For I'm deaf both in that ear and this un—
If Nature talks Money, I'm willin' to listen!
So bring on your dredges,
And shovels and sledges,
Yer bricklayers, masons, yer hammers and mauls—
The public be damned, while we damn up the falls!'"

Neither has "The Ballad of Grizzly Gulch" been forgotten:

"The rocks are rough, the trail is tough,
The forest lies before,
As madly, madly to the hunt
Rides good King Theodore,
With woodsmen, plainsmen, journalists,
And kodaks thirty-four."

"The Reveries of a Whitewasher," "The Missionary and the Standard Oil," "The Merit System in Hell," are all good; and the poem in the serious vein, "If Christ Should go to Church," shows what Mr. Irwin can do in satire of serious vein.

Child Verse.

CHRONICLES OF A LITTLE TOT. By Edmund Vance Cooke. Dodge Publishing Company, New York. (Price, cloth, $1.50; leather, $2.00.)

These poems, originally printed in the Saturday Evening Post, have won for themselves much praise from the critics. They contain humor and pathos of delicate quality, and are eminently true to nature in their psychology and child dialect:

"When I was born, I wasn't nothin' but
A little baby. Was my eyes shut
Like kitty-baby. Papa, will you buy
A skitching-rope and chatelaine-pony fer my Birthday? En a paint brush, too?
Wolves cant' talk, rilly, just like people do.
Kin they? But mebbe once they could,
Er how'd the wolf say, 'Kaoh-choo-up!' at Ridin' Hood?

"Is it tomorrow, papa? Well, why ain't today
Tomorrow? Yesterday, what made you say
Tomorrow'ld come today? Mm-mn, I don't see
Why. Papa! papa, can't you hark at me?
Aw, papa, if tomorrow was today
Does that make yesterday tomorrow? Say?
En, papa, will you buy me a numbrella
Like's on the groc'ry wagon? How could Cinderella
Dance without breakin' 'en was her sisters mad
That used to scoff at her, or was they glad?
Why didn't she lose the other slipper off?
Say, papa, will you learn me how to scoff?"

The little boy's description of the moo-cow—

"The moo-cow-moo's got a tail like a rope
En it's raveled down where it grows,
En it's just like feelin' a piece of soap
All over the moo-cow's nose.

"En the moo-cow has lots of fun
Just swinging his tail about
En he opens his mouth and then I run
'Cause that's where the moo comes out—" like his description of the theater, with the lady who was evidently going to bed because she had so little clothes on, and the people who pat-a-caked with relief because she finaly got through—and numberless other descriptive touches, are evidently first-hand studies.

But the verse of this collection that is by far the best is the serious reflection of the father on the sweetness of fatherhood—and the poems in remembrance of the dead child. The finest thing in the volume is probably "At Night:"

"Sometimes when Darkness spread for me her robe of rest,
And Silence guarded by,
The night-bird, Sleep, would startle from her nest
Stirred by the baby's cry.

"When night is deepest now, again and yet again
I lie with wide eyes wet:
It was his little cry that waked me then:
His silence wakes me yet."

Negro Songs.

BANJO TALKS. By Annie Virginia Culbertson. The Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis.

These are songs in the negro dialect—very successful reproductions of the mood and mode of the negro singer; and as original as anything in the line that has appeared for a long time. As good as anything in the book is the cake-walk song, "Go Lightly, Gal:"

"Sweetes' li'l honey in all dis lan',
Come erlong an' gimme yo' han',
Go lightly, gal, go lightly!

Cawn all shucked and de barn flo, clear,
Come erlong, come erlong, come erlong, my, dear,
Go lightly, gal, go lightly!
"Fiddles dey callin' us high an' fine,
'Time fer de darnsin', come an' jine,'
Go lightly, gal, go lightly!
My poty li'l honey, but you is sweet!
An' hit's clap yo' hon's an' shake yo' feet,
Go lightly, gal, go lightly!

"Hit's cut yo' capers all down de line,
Den mek yo' manners an' tiptoe fine,
Go lightly, gal, go lightly!
Oh, hit's whu'll yo' pardners roun' an' roun',
Twel you byst dey feet clean off de ground',
Go lightly, gal, go lightly!

"Oh, hit's tu'n an' twis' all roun' de flo',
Fling out yo' feet behine, befo',
Go lightly, gal, go lightly!
Gre't Lan' o' Goshen! but you is spry!
Kain't none er de urr gals spring so high,
Go lightly, gal, go lightly!

"Oh, roll yo' eyes and wag yo' haid,
An' shake yo' bones twel you nigh most dai,
Go lightly, gal, go lightly!
Doan't talk to me 'bout gittin' yo' bref,
Gwine darnse dis out ef hit cause my def!
Go lightly, gal, go lightly!

"Um-humph! done darnse all de urr folks down!
Skip erlong, honey, jes' one mo' roun'!
Go lightly, gal, go lightly!
Fiddles done played twel de strings all break!
Come erlong, honey, jes' one mo' shake,
Go lightly, gal, go lightly!

"Now teck my arm an' perawd all round',
So dey see whar de sho-nuff darnsers foun',
Go lightly, gal, go lightly!
Den gimme yo' han' and we quit dish yer,
Come erlong, come erlong, come erlong, my dear,
Go lightly, gal, go lightly!"

This, like the other poems of the volume, has the true negro swing and rhythm. Many of the poems contain, too, very pretty touches of sentiment, grave and gay:

"Li'l bird in yonner tree
Winging', Singing',
If on'y I a bird cu'd be,
Singin', Wingin',
Den, li'l bird all white an' gray,
I'd mock de urr songs by day,
An' keep my own fer her at night,
Oh, li'l bird all gray an' white!

"Bird's mighty sweet, mighty sweet, mighty sweet,
Sounds mighty clost, mighty clost, near my feet;
Neenter try ter toll me off,
I'll let yo' nes' alone;
I'se got a li'l fambly nes'
An' young uns uv my own.

"Oh, de cradle hit goes swingin',
De yaller oats a flingin',
W'ile my song goes ringin', ringin',
To'des de li'l nes' I own."

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

The Human Hand.

THE HAND. By Lewis Dayton Burdick. The Irving Company, Oxford. (Price $1.50.)

Lewis Dayton Burdick has gathered into one book a large body of facts regarding the human hand—its use in symbolism among the ancients, as the foundation of our systems of decimal reckoning, etc. That cruel old ordeal, the Trial by Hand, has a chapter devoted to it; and there are chapters on the laying on of hands in religious ceremonies, on the hand in social ceremonies, in the administration of oaths, and as represented in the proverbs and sayings of different nations. The material is gathered from the widest range of sources, scientific, religious, historical and literary; and the book is one of those curious ones, the work of a mind of peculiar bent, and of interest, possibly to no very large number, yet including matter valuable to sociologist and moralist and many another student of the social evolution.

For Mothers.

RADIANT MOTHERHOOD. By Margaret E. Sangster. The Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis. (Price $1.50.)

"This book," says the author, "is a friendly message to mothers, to those who believe in the life simple and the life beautiful, to those who think this a good world to live in, and who would fain bring up their children to adorn it. I have had the confidences of many mothers. I know how true they are, and sometimes how worried, and I send them my note of cheer in the midst of their toiling days."

Perhaps it is but natural that a philanthropist like Mrs. Sangster, who has lent so much cheer to other lives that the reflection of it could hardly fail to fall brightly into her own, should view things in general with a somewhat optimistic eye. There is, unfortunately, more of sentiment than of truth in her assertion that the mother is "the central figure of our modern life, the queen regnant of every home," not alone in civilized lands but "in the tepee of the red man, the harem of the Turk, in the zenana of the Hindu, in the flower-wreathed homes of Japan;" "in the palace, in the hut." The world would be a great deal better place, undoubtedly, than it is, if this were true.

However, Mrs. Sangster's words, when she comes to talk of the training of children, are of the finest and wisest, the words of a woman of both intellect and heart.

The book is not a superficial one, either, as are many of the books on this and similar subjects that have been brought out of late years; it is a book of a sort any lover of children, man or woman, will be likely to enjoy for its insight into the child heart and the thorough up-to-dateness of its ideas of child-training, its knowledge of child-psychology, of the needs of the childish imagination, the unfolding will and reason, as well of the growing body. To this knowledge, moreover, is added the charm of literary style.

Mrs. Sangster begins with the child in its infancy and follows it through childhood up to manhood and womanhood. An especially good chapter is that which describes some of the mistakes of training most prevalent in this country. "Mothers and Manners," "Home Reading," "A Mother's Conversation," "When the Children Marry," are also good. One is not sure that Mrs. Sangster's opinion on the subject of adoptions—that the adopted child is about as likely to turn out well as the offering by blood—is quite so warranted and wise.

The book is not one of special rules of training, but of general advice and observation.

A Man's Vocation.

CHOOSING A CAREER. By Orison Swett Marden. The Bobbs-Merrill Company.

We—that is, the American public—have been writing many books of advice to young men, of late years. We began gently with the 'Letters of a Self-made Merchant," because it is so likely to hurt a young man's feelings if you talk to him seriously on matters of morals; but now we have arrived at the point of speaking more frankly. "Choosing a Career" is a book of practical advice to boys and young men starting in life and contains a great deal of sound wisdom. But really, one ought not to confine mention to the advice to young men, for the book is of the new century in that it takes note of the place that woman also are beginning to hold in the business and art world.

Nothing in the book is better than the emphasis laid, in the very beginning, on the value of encouragement and sympathy in the training of the young, as opposed to a course of continual harshness or severe criticism. The assertion that many a sensitive child has been made cranky or stubborn or sullen for life by harsh treatment, misunderstanding and belittling, is not too strong. Equally worthy of attention are the chapters on the ruinous nature of an unsettled mental habit and the weakness of allowing oneself to "drift." In choosing and carrying out one's life work. Mr. Marden puts much stress on health as a means to success—with good reason, of course; yet his emphasis of it as the sine qua non goes a little beyond the fact, since some of the most famous men and women have suffered from illness all their lives; Darwin and Spinoza are eminent examples.

The newer and better spirit of the times is in Mr. Marden's exhortations to continual self-improvement and to aspiration that has something better than simply wealth as its aim. Courage, enthusiasm, energy, persistence and concentration are the practical intellectual weapons that are especially enjoined in the struggle, and nothing in the book is better worth reading than the author's chapter on the overcoming of obstacles by these means. "Every vocation," he says, "is full of thorns, and he who hunts for the roses and ignores the thorns will never get very far.

"Look at our successful business men today. Like the soldiers of a hundred battles, they bear the scars of innumerable encounters with obstacles. Many of them have gone through failure after failure, but have gone on with greater determination than ever.

"The habit of stopping when the load goes hard, of growing discouraged and giving up, demoralizes character, weakens manhood, ruins reputation. Everybody likes the stayer, the sticker, the man who stays by his proposition to the bitter end; the man who never quits, the man who has the tenacity of purpose, who can grip his aim with an iron grasp and follow it through thick and thin. . . .

"There is no future for the timid soul. Grit is the final test of ability, the final test of the achiever. If a man cannot hang on, if he is going to give up just as soon as difficulty confronts him, he will never get anything in the world.

"When you have set your teeth firmly and have said 'I will do this thing, no matter how long it takes and no matter what obstacles confront me,' when you are convinced that you are right, never unsay it—stand by it, talk it, think it, live it."

The chapters on the qualities of leadership and on personal adjustment to environment are also very good. They close the first, or general, part of the book; the second consists of observations regarding particular trades and professions. The most of these are good.

The book is illustrated with the portraits of men and women eminent in various vocations.

A Garden Book.

A GARDEN IN PINK. By Blanche Elizabeth Wade. A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago.

This is the story of how Mis' Best of All and the Other One planned a garden spot that should be all pink, and how they planted, and what they planted, and how they talked things over in the garden room, specially furnished and decorated with a view to garden inspirations; also how the garden blossomed and delighted all concerned. The book is prettily written and exploits a charming idea. The illustrations, drawings by Lucy Fitch Perkins, are beautiful work.

PEOPLE AND THINGS LITERARY.

H. M. Caldwell & Co. of New York are publishing, in their Red Letter Series, reprints of many literary gems—selected poems of Tennyson, of Browning, of Mrs. Browning, of Shelley, of Keats, of Milton, of Byron and others, "The confessions of an Opium Eater," selected essays of different authors, etc. These volumes, about 4x6 inches, beautifully printed on fine paper, come in cloth, with gilt top, at 70 cents net, and in limp leather, at $1.

The library of Congress prints a "Select List of Books on Railroads in Foreign Countries." It may be had of the Government Printing Office at Washington, D. C.

From the Golden Gate Orphanage, originated and maintained by the Salvation Army, comes a booklet descriptive of the institution and its aims. The statistics of the home for the last year show the number of children in the home on October 19 as ninety. Those interested in this very admirable work may secure the booklet by writing to the institution, Lytton Springs, Sonoma county, Cal.

Charles Wagner has nearly finished his "Impressions of America," which are to appear in La Revue des Revues. There is, of course, to be a chapter on President Roosevelt. Translations of "The Simple Life," by the way, are to be made both in Japanese and Hebrew, and an edition of it is being arranged for the blind.

The J. S. Ogilvie Publishing Company of New York announce publication of "The First County Park System," a book of 300 pages, with ten full-page illustrations, written by Frederick W. Kelsey of Essex county, N. J., who was the vice-president of the board of commissioners appointed to lay out a system of Parks in New Jersey, and is, therefore, well qualified to write this history.

The Policy Holders' Protective Association, with headquarters at No. 11 Devonshire street, Boston, Mass., prints an address on "Life Insurance, the Abuses and the Remedies," delivered before the Commercial Club of Boston by Louis D. Brandeis, counsel for the Protective Committee of policy holders in the Equitable Life Assurance Society.

Messrs. Henry Holt & Co. have recently sent "The Divine Fire" to press for the eleventh time, and are printing the Williamsons's "Lightning Conductor" for the twenty-third time. May Sinclair, the author of "The Divine Fire," is being royally entertained in New York.

Luxurious Thieves.

A gang of fifteen burglars, who lived in great luxury in a house in its own grounds in St. Maur, have been captured by the police.

They owned three motorcars, victorias, broughams, buggies, and a couple of smart American trotters. The furnishings of the house were most elaborate, though erring slightly on the side of the ornate. The cuisine was admirable, an accomplished chef being kept at a large salary. The wines were irreproachable.

Everything in the house was the proceeds of robberies, and besides the articles in use enormous quantities of stolen property were packed away. An adjoining building was also used as a store for the stolen articles.

Nearly £10,000 worth of property has already been found, and the examination of the place is not nearly concluded.

The thieves went out on their foraging expeditions in their motorcars, in which they used to convey back the stolen goods. Their specialty was stealing from parcel delivery vans and pantechnicons, and in removing the furniture from houses into which new tenants had not yet entered.

Their leaders were an ex-police sergeant and a barrister, who had been convicted of malpractices.

One leader was caught entering his motorcar. His accomplices dashed off in another car, but they were followed by a policeman on a motorcycle, who traced them to St. Maur. He brought a strong force of police, who surrounded the place and captured the entire gang.—[Paris Correspondence, London Express.

The Colonies of England.

They wish to be on the most cordial terms with the home government. As in 1887, 1897 and 1902, they will send delegates to confer about common interests. In a crisis like the Boer war some of them will vote money and send men to aid England. In all questions relating to peaceful development they are more than willing to confer and coöperate with the English ministers. But they do not propose to bate a jot of their control over their own affairs. "Our Lady of the Snows" only speaks for all the great self-governing colonies—nations, they might better be called—when she says:

"Daughter am I in my mother's house,
But mistress in my own!"

It means something when this failure of a misdirected British imperialism falls in with the assertion of old-fashioned principles of self-government elsewhere. Signs multiply that the wave of empire is receding.—[New York Evening Post.

In a Parliamentary paper on the progress of East Africa it is stated that one or two lions have been run over by trains, evidently while asleep on the track after feeding.

In 1904 the average annual deaths in France were 797,001, of which 413,954 were males and 383,047 females. The annual average excess of births was 49,245. For the year 1894 the excess of births was 57,026.

CONSERVATIVE ACTION URGED.

FUTURE OF IMPERIAL VALLEY DEPENDS UPON IT.

Annual Report of President of One of the Mutual Water Companies Tells of Conditions There and What is to be Done to Overcome the Difficulties.

Despite the tribulations and troubles which has caused so much uncertainty as to the future of the great Imperial Valley, the officials of at least one of the several mutual water companies there appear to have not lost faith in what is in store for that district. In the annual report of I. W. Gleason, president of Imperial Water Company No. 1, filed with the stockholders on the 9th inst., a most hopeful view is taken. Conservative action is the text upon which the report is written and Mr. Gleason has endeavored to point out how the interests of the stockholders would only be jeopardized by following the advice of those who would rush at once into the courts and precipitate what he thinks would prove to be costly and practically endless litigation.

At the outset he refers to the flood conditions in the valley, saying that the continuous and unprecedented floods of the Colorado River have thus far baffled all attempts of the California Development Company to get that stream under complete control.

"Each failure, however, has promptly called forth more strenuous efforts, and so it will be until success has been achieved. As Epes Randolph has said, 'It is not a question whether or not we can control the river—we have got to do it.'

"Some portions of the valley have been out of or not fully supplied with water for short periods of time, and a few thousand acres along New River have been overflowed; otherwise the only injury to the valley from the floods has been the injurious advertising it has received by the press of the country. The unusual condition of a great tract of country lying below the level of the sea has appealed to the imagination of sensational writers and all sorts of wild, wierd and extravagant yarns have been invented and published all over the country in large type and accompanied with trumped-up photographs, without the slightest effort to verify their accuracy, or consideration of the great harm that might be done to our interests.

"Aggravating as all this has been to us, it will turn to our account when settled conditions have been restored and will help to bring on the rapid development to which we are entitled and which we have expected to have; for rare indeed are the men who have not heard of the Imperial Valley and its wonderful productiveness.

"We have been persistently urging the settlement by compromise of the damage claims by water shortage last year. We had the question up repeatedly with Mr. Heber before the election of June 6, which placed the control of the company in other hands, and have never let the subject rest since, and now a basis of settlement has been agreed upon which we believe is fully as favorable as could have been secured by litigation in far less time, and at a saving of great expense.

"No one is in any way bound to accept this settlement, but we have argued the interests of our stockholders and arrived at the basis which we believe is the best that can be obtained for their interests and the welfare of the company as a whole.

"We are entitled to receive from the California Development Company 400,000 acre-feet of water per annum, together with enough to cover all loss by seepage and evaporation. We have the distribution of that water and it is nothing to the California Development Company whether we put it upon a greater or less acreage, but we must come to them when we wish to increase the supply.

"If it is demonstrated later on that we, as a whole, will never use four feet of water to the acre upon our entire area, but that 400,000 acre-feet is ample for 110,000 acres of land, giving 3.63 acre-feet per acre, we can increase the capital stock by a two-thirds vote of the stockholders, and our company receive the entire benefit of the increased capitalization, by selling the stock and turning the money into the treasury to meet our operating expenses and maintenance expenses.

"The California Development Company, like the corporations of the country, is our most powerful ally. There is not a particle of danger of that company ever becoming stronger than the people of the Imperial Valley. It would quickly go down before any fight of the people entered into with members of the California Development Company themselves, hence our greatest strength and absolute safety lies in the unity of the people.

"The poorest director you can get for any of the mutual companies of the valley is the man whose chief recommendation is that he represents a sectional or factional interest; while the man who is broad-minded enough to represent the whole, restraining each faction in their unreasonable and extravagant demands that would work injury to the others, standing universally for a square deal for all, may actually accomplish vastly more for all than could be done by the wrangling of factional or sectional representatives.

"Our assessments for maintenance the past year have been 25 cents per share, while every other mutual water company of the valley has levied 50 or 60 cents for that purpose, and out of this fund we have the permanent office building, and, although our canals are not in as good shape as we wish they were, we do not believe they will average any worse than a year ago, some being better and some worse. It is due to the fact that we have hoped to find a more economical way of doing the required work, and hesitated to spend large sums of money upon work which might prove to be unwisely expended and partially wasted."

Identified.

As is generally known, "seamen's return" tickets are issued by most railways at seaport towns to sailors at reduced rates; but when the other day a somewhat stylishly-dressed young man demanded one to Birmingham, the booking clerk at the southern seaport town demurred.

"Seaman's returns are only issued to sailors," he snapped.

"Well, I'm a sailor," was the reply.

"I have only your word for that," said the clerk. "How am I to know it is correct?"

"How are you to know it?" came the answer. "Why, you leather-necked, swivel-eyed son of a sea cook, if you feel my starboard boom running foul of your headlights you'll know I've been doing more than sit on a stool and bleating all my life, and you'll haul in on your jaw tackle a bit."

The station master had been standing near by.

"Give him a ticket," he said; "he's a sailor."—[Tit-Bits.

LITTLE NEMO
IN SLUMBER-LAND
I WILL TAKE YOU TO LITTLE NEMO.
POOR LITTLE DEAR. HOW SHE DOES CRAVE A PLAYMATE. I HOPE SHE GETS HIM.
WHO ARE YOU?
I AM LITTLE NEMO
I'M LITTLE NEMO
SO AM I
THATS MY NAME TOO
YOU ARE GETTING TOO THICK FOR ME, NEMOS.
WE ARE YOU, DON'T YOU SEE?
WE ARE ALL NEMOS
YES. THAT'S WHO WE ARE.
COME OUT HERE AND WE'LL FIND OUT ABOUT THIS RIGHT QUICK NEMO! OH! LITTLE NEMO! THE PRINCESS IS WAITING FOR YOU ON THE OUTSIDE. SHE'S WAITING FOR YOU TELL HER I'M COMING! YES!
THAT'S MY NAME
THAT'S ME
I'M COMING
ALL RIGHT
HERE I AM!
I'LL BE THERE!
WHICH ONE OF YOU IS HIM? IS NEMO
THAT'S IT LIFT HIM UP HERE, MY GOOD BLOPP
NOW! YOU SEE WHAT YOU FELLOWS HAVE DONE!
GOODNESS! OH! GRACIOUS! WHAT WILL EVER BECOME OF ME? OH!
OH! IF I COULD ONLY GET AT THOSE BOYS! OH! OH! OH! PAPA! MAMMA! OH! LOOK OUT IN THERE! I'M COMING IN—
I'VE A GOOD NOTION TO POUND YOU, NEMO, AFTER YOUR MOTHER CAUTIONING YOU ABOUT EATING SARDINES BEFORE GOING TO BED, EH?

1 SHORTLY AFTER RETIRING FOR THE NIGHT, LITTLE NEMO WAS SOMEWHAT STARTLED TO SEE HIS DOUBLE PEEPING FROM BEHIND THE FOOT OF HIS BED.

2 AT FIRST HE COULD NOT BELIEVE HIS EYES BUT WHEN HIS VISITOR CLIMBED IN TO THE BED WITH HIM HE PROCEEDED TO GET ACQUAINTED. HE FOUND THIS

3 A DIFFICULT TASK, HOWEVER, FOR OTHER NEMOS CAME POURING IN SO FAST THAT GREETINGS OF ANY KIND WERE IMPOSSIBLE. HE THOUGHT IT A

6 EXCLAIMED IN CHORUS AND THEN NEMO WAS MORE PUZZLED THAN EVER. THEY WERE IN A GREAT SQUABBLE ABOUT WHO'S WHO WHEN DOOFLAP APPEARED AT THE GARDEN GATE AND MADE

7 AN ANNOUNCEMENT THAT THREW THE WHOLE BUNCH, AS IT WERE, INTO A RIOT. THE PRINCESS OF SLUMBERLAND CRAVING FOR A PLAYMATE HAD CALLED FOR LITTLE NEMO, AND WAS WAITING

8 FOR HIM JUST OUTSIDE THE WALL. WHEN HE SAW HER NEMO BECAME GREATLY EXCITED. SO DID ALL THOSE CLAIMING TO BE HE. WHEN HE FOUND HIMSELF UNABLE TO MAKE HIMSELF KNOWN HE BE-

Each and All Given Over For a Day To The Engaged Girl

AREN'T you girls interested in the Engaged Girls' Club? I should think you would be, whether your engagement be of the past, the present or the future. There is nothing the married woman enjoys much more than inspecting a trousseau—unless it may be looking over baby clothes—and the girl whose engagement is still something to look forward to has an even livelier pleasure in the dainty furbelows of the girl who is going to be married. While, as to the engaged girl herself—but I need say nothing about her interest in the subject. It speaks for itself.

Of course, clothes are the things of which one thinks first in planning for what takes the attention of an engaged girl. Clothes and all that go with them, the delicate finishings, the sachets, the ribbons, the chest or the case in which the underwear is to be stowed; the accessories of the toilet, in all the extravagant delights with which dressing is accompanied nowadays. But there is a big lot to the engagement adjuncts besides clothes—and this not from the side of sentiment or of preparation for marriage, either.

In the first place, there is the plenishing of the house. I am sorry for the girl who does not consider that very thoughtfully and derive a good share of her pleasure from it. Not only the big things like the furniture for the dining room and the parlor, the bedroom sets and the like, but all the little things that have so much to do with making and keeping the house neat and comfortable. Take the advice of an old housekeeper, and plan for them early in the action. I mean sheets and pillow cases and towels and table cloths and napkins and more than these. Dusters and glass and china towels and sweeping sheets and mops and wash cloths and floor cloths, and all the little unconsidered things the good housekeeper must have. Of course, there are plenty of people who will tell you that it will be the easiest thing in the world to pick these up after you are married. Don't you believe it! It sounds absurd to say that these unimportant things—looking at them in comparison with bed and table linen—make a serious drain on the purse; but they do. When you once go to housekeeping, you will find a formidable list of "must-haves" awaiting you in the line of necessities for your house and kitchen, that no one will have included in a wedding present. The day has not yet come, unhappily, when brides are given brooms and dust pans, instead of fancy "throws" for their furniture or bits of absurd needlework to hang about their rooms—when pots and pans and double-boilers are presented, instead of useless bric-a-brac. When that fortunate day comes, a talk like this will be out of date; but I fear it is still far enough away to make this word of advice timely for a good while to come.

Perhaps, you can't accumulate these desirable articles—I mean the kitchen utensils—but you can get the cheesecloth dusters, the heavy floor cloths, the window rags. Yes, rags! This may sound ridiculous, but one of the keenest recollections of my young housekeeping days—a good many years back now—is of the terrible dearth of rags that prevailed in my establishment. New things galore I had—new dusters, new sheets, new everything—but when windows were to be washed and paint scrubbed, not an old thing was to be found. I recollected, longingly, the story in the "Arabian Nights" of the man who offered to exchange new lamps for old, and wished that he would come around offering old clothes for new. I would cheerfully have bartered some of my pretty chiffons for a good bundle of old, soft cotton cloth. My mother was not near enough to help me out, and I finally had to turn to my laundress and buy from her old cloths to do my cleaning with. I tried the expedient of getting cheesecloth and having it washed—but it was only a substitute, after all. So see about your rags, girls, while you may, and don't throw away all your worn-out garments when you are accumulating the new.

Of course, you may make window cloths and the like out of new soft material, and subject it to enough washings to get the dressing out of the fabric. In France they have a nice way of making cloths for each office of the house, hemming them and marking them in colored cotton with the name of the function they are to discharge. They can be purchased in the shops there. You cannot buy them in this country—at least, I have never been able to find them—though you may make them for yourself. But do it now, before you are married, and don't have to spend the first money after your marriage in such things as this that show for nothing in furnishing the house. You will find enough to do to get it in the order you wish, be sure of that. No matter how much you may have done in advance, there will be chinks to fill, and the money you drop into them will just close up openings, and do no more. It will not have much power in the way of making the house pretty or comfortable.

I am giving this advice to the girls who are already engaged, and yet it can apply as well to the girls who are not engaged yet, but who are looking forward, as all healthful, normal young women should, to having homes of their own one of these days. Why don't you begin getting ready for them now? Don't laugh, and talk about counting chickens before they are hatched. Even if you don't get married, it is possible that you may some day have a home of your own. Many a woman do I know who has her shrdluemfwhrdluemfwy woyiqnfnmfaw married. The plenishings come in well there. Indeed, I knew a woman once who said she thought it was abominable that the brides should get the trousseaus and the presents. Were they not getting husbands and homes? The women who did not win either were the women to whom the pretty outfits, the presents and the like should be given!

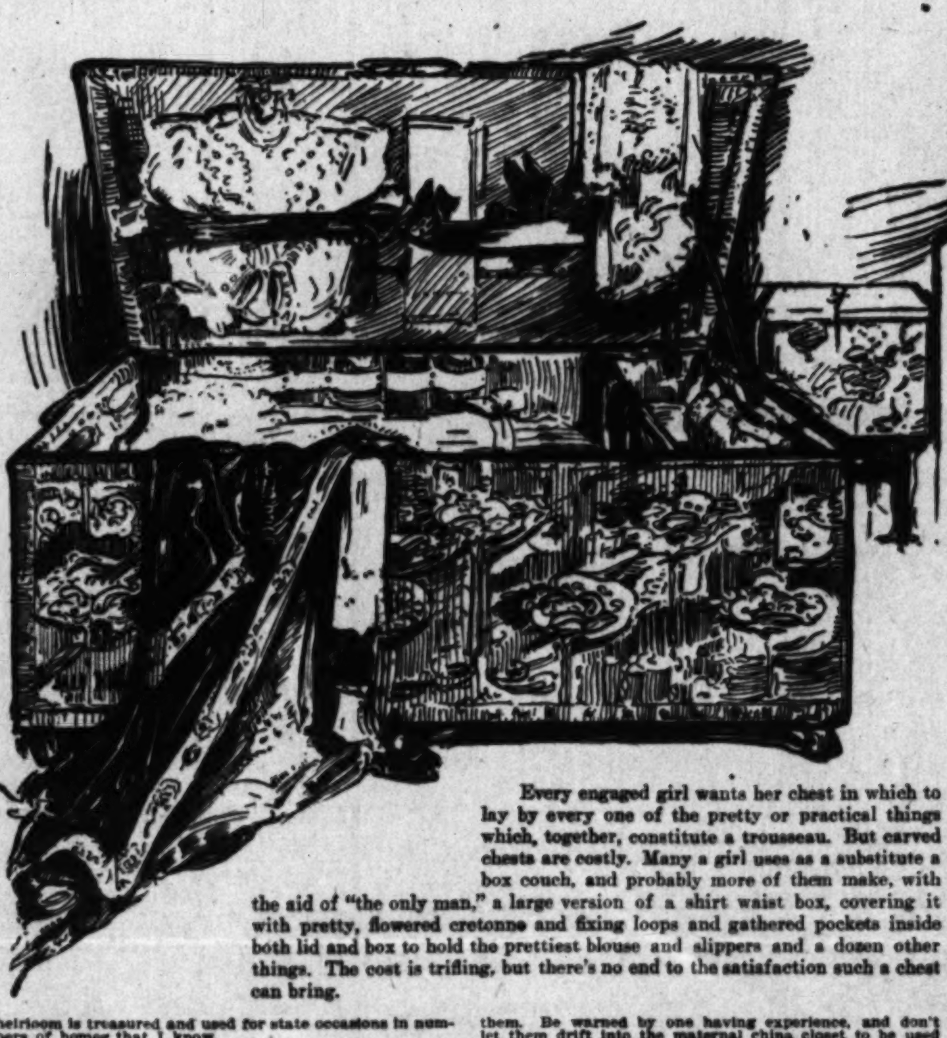
Without going so far as that, I think we may yet borrow from our German friends the habit of beginning a linen chest for a girl while she is still young. Into this may be put all the little things that the girl and her mother accumulate from time to time—the doilies, the centre pieces, the dainty napkins, the extra kerchiefs, the embroidered trimmings and laces. They will not grow so yellow that a good bleaching will not make them right again. The linen that has been handed down as a family heirloom is treasured and used for state occasions in numbers of homes that I know.

Not only in linen may such accumulations be made. I know of small girls to whom a relative presents a silver spoon on each birthday or Christmas. By the time those children are old enough for homes of their own they will have a good display of teaspoons. Some of our girls are collecting souvenir spoons—they are usually coffee spoons—and they, too, will have a stock with which to begin housekeeping. All these little things cost a small amount in the gathering one by one, but they amount to a good deal in the end.

So think about the possible home and plan for it. Perhaps your mother has begun it already. One dear old lady of my acquaintance put in many happy hours piecing quilts and devising comfortables for her daughter, whom every one else looked upon as an incorrigible spinster. But one day the man came along to whom her heart turned, and the old lady triumphed over all the friends who had gently jeered at her for planning Nannie's bed coverings. Very well they came in, too; as did the doilies and table squares and scarfs the mother had hoarded ever since the daughter was little more than a child.

A pretty fashion is that of giving engagement cups to a girl whose betrothal has just been announced. But you needn't wait for that. If you have dainty cups and saucers or other bits of china given to you, take care of them. Be warned by one having experience, and don't let them drift into the maternal china closet to be used by the family as they please. One of these days those odds and ends will come in well for your own home. And write to the chairman of the Engaged Girls' Club, and tell her you are a recruit for her band. Like Tilda Squeers, you are "not engaged, but expecting to be," and go on that basis.

Christine Terhune Herrick



Every engaged girl wants her chest in which to lay by every one of the pretty or practical things which, together, constitute a trousseau. But carved chests are costly. Many a girl uses as a substitute a box couch, and probably more of them make, with the aid of "the only man," a large version of a shirt waist box, covering it with pretty, flowered cretonne and fixing loops and gathered pockets inside both lid and box to hold the prettiest blouse and slippers and a dozen other things. The cost is trifling, but there's no end to the satisfaction such a chest can bring.

Some Musical Letters

A Chance for Pleasant Companionship Among Lovers of the Art

WE HAVE so many musical members in the club that I am grouping together to-day a number of their letters in the hope that, by bringing the music lovers to the notice of one another, I may further plans for a large musical sub-club. The publication of these letters may also lead to some pleasant companionships and correspondences:

A Chance for Some Musical Member

I am very fond of music. I would like to help with the family sewing or help with light housework in exchange for money or music lessons, vocal or instrumental.

I would give a few hours each day four days a week. Would like to have it in or about Allegheny City, Pa., and would be glad to hear from any one this proposition would suit. CHARLIE (Allegheny, Pa.).

Wants Music Pupils

If any members in this district would like to take piano lessons, I would like to hear from them, and the rates for members would be 25 cents a lesson. DOROTHEA (Allegheny, Pa.).

A Sub-Club for Music and Embroidery

My sister and I have written to you before, stating that we were interested in music and embroidery, and that we desired to form a club, but so far could not get any girls who were interested in these branches, except two very nice young ladies to whom you had the kindness to give our address.

I think the larger the club the more interesting it would be, and we would be very much pleased to hear from the girls. L. and H. H. (Camden, N. J.).

Send your name to "L." and "H. H."

Interested in Music and Tennis

I would like to meet or correspond with any of the girls interested in vocal and instrumental music; also tennis. I don't feel proficient enough to teach any of these, but would like to join a sub-club, and will gladly do anything I can. F. C. (West Philadelphia).

Four Girls Ready to Join a Music Club

I would like to know some girls in this city who are interested in music. WILL (Philadelphia).

If you know of any girl in Philadelphia or near here that is interested in music, or if there is a music sub-club in Philadelphia, please let me know to whom I can go for information in regard to joining same. BROWNIE (Philadelphia).

I know a little about music, and I can also make a little fancy work; so, if there is any one I can help, I would be only too glad to do so. ZEN (Mahanoy City, Pa.).

I am passionately fond of music, and I play the piano, and would like to hear from girls who play; also, those who exchange postal cards. E. H. (Woonsocket, R. I.).

To Correspond About Music

If there are members who would like to correspond about music, I would help them along. I am a great lover of music—all kinds, classical and popular. E. B. (Egg Harbor City, N. J.).

A Good Chance for a Violin Student

I am taking lessons on the violin, and am quite far advanced, as I have been taking them for four years. I am 18 now, and by the time that I am 19 I will be playing in concert; that is, if everything goes as I hope it will. Now, the reason that I tell you this is because I would like to write to some girl who also plays the violin.

I am also exchanging post cards. O. H. (Los Angeles, Cal.).

Can't Some of My Girls Help Her?

I love music and singing. If my parents had the money to spare to give me lessons in each, I have been told that in time I would be hard to beat. My voice is low; so it would be contralto. I am 17 years old. ARLINE (Compton, Cal.).

Wants a Good Singing Teacher

I have talent for music—play the piano, recite very often and sing some. I am quite anxious to take up vocal music as a study; that is, if I could find a good teacher. Do any of our Los Angeles girls know of a good one? I would especially like to hear from some of the girls over 18. LOUGOUTOE (Los Angeles, Cal.).

The names of other music-loving members shall appear in future issues of the paper.

Questions of Interest

Recipes and Patterns Asked For

Will some of the members please give me recipes for pastry and cakes? I live on my father's farm, so get no chance for learning; also, I should like patterns of eyelet embroidery. The winter evenings are long, and I am very fond of embroidery work.

Will some of the girls write to me? I am 18 years old. W. T. (British Columbia).

Here is a girl to whom it would be a friendly deed to write.

Who Will Make an Each and All Pillow?

I would like to have a post card from New York city, but can find no one on my list to exchange with.

I could help girls in music, fancy work, cooking, passing on reading matter, exchanging post cards, and will order work from the needy girls.

Will some girl that is well educated in grammar help me? I have no chance to go to school, and would like some help. You do not know how I long for an education.

What girl that is in need of work will make me an Each and All cushion? I would like to have one so much.

I wish there were some Each and All girls in Fairmont, so we could form a sub-club. I would like a music club. BROWN EYES (Fairmont, W. Va.).

There must be some one who would like to exchange post cards, music, books or knowledge with "Brown Eyes," of Fairmont. This letter will surely call forth many replies.

A Kindergarten Girl

When I graduate from high school this year I will begin my two years' course in kindergarten work. I would like to form a sub-club down here. Can you suggest something?

Please give my name as a correspondent, and in the postal-card column. F. C. K. (Cohasset, Mass.).

Who can make some suggestions to "K. C. K."?

A Co-Operative Plan

There is a way that Each and All girls may be of help and at the same time help themselves—that is, in furnishing lodging, at a reasonable price, to members who are compelled to be in or near Boston, on business or shopping. Those living in or near city might insert prices on "Our Page," and thus members could then correspond accordingly. References could be given through you, our president, if desired. A MASSACHUSETTS MEMBER.

What do the other members think of this suggestion?

MAGNIFICENT GEMS

MAGNIFICENT and very old are the gems in the great rope of pearls which Princess Fredericka of Hanover wears at State functions. A romantic story attaches to them.

Centuries ago, it is said, a princess of the house loved these gems so passionately that, even in death, she was not parted from them. They were buried with her.

In course of time, however, the thoughts of succeeding members of the family turned more and more to the pearls. They argued that to waste such splendid jewels was a shame.

So the tomb of the princess was opened, and the rope of pearls was removed. But they seemed to be entirely spoiled; they had lost their lustre and beauty.

This worried the new owner not a little. She wept over the gems and dreamed about them. In one of her dreams she was told that three generations of lovely women must wear them before they regained their original beauty.

Three princesses of beauty and grace, it is said, have worn them, and now their splendor is almost peerless.

CAMERA CLUB NOTES

Things of Interest to the Sub Organization of Photographers

Two "Camera Fiends"

The number of those who are interested in photography grows, as the following letters will show. I wish we could have a sub-club formed of photograph enthusiasts. Who will join it?

My husband and I are very much interested in photography, and he does quite a little work that way, although only an amateur. It would be nice if we could start a camera sub-club. I am unable at present to do anything toward starting one; but a little later, if "E. S." or some of the other girls would start one, I would join and do all I could to help. A. M. C. (Waltham, Mass.).

I am interested in photography, as is "E. S." I travel much. I am a dressmaker, but do other kinds of work if necessary. I would like to hear from girls far and near, also those who would like to travel. I am willing to work and be well paid, and fond of adventure, in good company. I wish to exchange postals. I have those of Yellowstone Park and other noted places. I do all kinds of fancy work, and will be glad to do anything I can to help any one in any way for the pleasure of doing so. C. L. (Jamestown, N. D.).

Another Photograph "Crank"

If it were possible, it would be very nice to have some place in each large city where the work of members might be displayed for sale, possibly in connection with a lunch room and meeting place for "Eaches."

I am somewhat of a photograph crank, and, if there is to be a club or exchange for such, should like to join it.

Have any of the girls new ideas for fairs that they could send me? When I think of this great, big club I feel it a thing too big to grasp, and I simply don't know where to "get a holt."

I have lots of ideas for all sorts of things, and I should like to help some of the girls, if only the girl and idea could be made to meet. Mrs. C. H. P. (Woodfords, Maine).

Here are some excellent suggestions. Who responds to them?

A Generous Offer

Is there any "lonely" girl in Philadelphia who is fond of the theatre, and would enjoy spending an occasional "afternoon off" in going with me to a matinee?

This, of course, to be entirely at my expense.

If there is, let her ask Mrs. Herrick for my address, and write to BONNIE (Philadelphia).

This is so charming and generous an offer that I am sure many girls will be eager to accept it. But I wish to fence it with a restriction, which "Bonnie" herself is too generous to make. The invitation should not be accepted by any girl who is able to go to the theatre at her own expense, or who is often invited by others. It is meant for the girl who has no money to spend on plays or music, and who yet longs for them. Such a gracious invitation should put the girls at once on their honor not to abuse the kindness that makes it.

Correspondence by Members and Comment by Mrs. Herrick

Another Bright Letter From "Lady Babbie"

I was pleasantly surprised lately to see your words of approval of my letter on girls going out to domestic service. I am sure there are others that think as encouragingly of it as I. I often wondered why girls in service should be looked down on, for is it not as honorable a work as standing behind a counter or something similar? It may be more congenial to go dressed up all day and do less exhausting work, but are there not ins and outs in all work?

Of course, I know the work is confining and the hours are sometimes long; but one doesn't need to be walking the streets every evening.

I will exchange letters, either friendly or instructive. I love dearly to write, any way. LADY BABBIE (Somerville, Mass.).

I am glad to indorse everything "Lady Babbie" says in her letter. She writes well and interestingly, and I don't doubt she will have many correspondents. For awhile she asks that letters be sent to me to be forwarded by me to her. Kindly bear this in mind.

For Framing Membership Cards

A pretty Each and All frame can be made by taking blue cardboard, according to size of photo of membership card, leaving about three inches all around it, and cutting an opening, square or round or oval. Around the opening paint the words, "Each and All Society, 1905," with gold paint. If you can, paint some gold bees here and there also. Put in photo and paste paper over back; take a piece of glass size of cardboard, lay on over the face of frame and bind together with gold passepartout binding. H. W. (Salem, Mass.).

More and more the girls are framing their membership cards. The foregoing suggests a very attractive frame.

Wants Pieces for Her Quilt

I am making a quilt out of pieces of silk, satin and velvet, but have not enough to finish; so I would gladly exchange with some one for weekly magazines. A. N. (Shamokin, Pa.).

Who would like to make this exchange?

Join the Los Angeles Sub-Club

Don't you think that an interested "bee," who has but one Each and All correspondent, and who can very easily handle more than one, should have more?

I am a freshman in the High School here, am 14 years old, have rather a light complexion, am interested in music and have studied it for five years. Now, write to me right away! MONA (Los Angeles, Cal.).

A good plan for "Mona" would be to join a branch of the Los Angeles club. I hope she will get her correspondents.

Will One of My Baltimore Girls Answer?

I am very fond of art and music, and would like very much to correspond with some one in Baltimore who is interested in the same; some one about my age, 19.

I am also interested in collections, especially of souvenir post cards. I wish some one of both Baltimore and Washington would write me, for I would be very glad to exchange scenes and buildings from our city.

Hope to be of help to Each and All. INTERESTED (York, Pa.).

I hold the address of "Interested."

A Word of Advice

There are a few words I, as an older woman, would like to say to some of you girls. Learn everything you can, for you know not what the future has in store for you. Very many women realize this when too late, and they are called upon to take up burdens which they are wholly unfit for.

I do pyrography (burnt wood), using the colors with it, and I will do any piece of reasonable size the girls will send me, if they will give me a piece like the piece they wish done; or, if they wish, I can give catalogue prices.

I also crochet very pretty slippers, 75 cents for large sizes, 50 cents for small sizes, the girls to furnish all materials. I can give exact cost and what is needed to any who write me; also references.

I would like to correspond with some woman near my own age who lives in New York city. DARKIE (Minnesota).

This is another one of our married girls. I will give her address to any who wish it and send stamped and self-addressed envelope.

Opinions on the Dancing Question

You girls may recollect that a while ago I asked your opinions about dancing. I have had several very interesting letters about it, and I print some of them below:

I notice a letter from "Sylvie," asking your opinion, also that of the girls, on dancing. I also read what "Daisy Deane" says about it, and I feel that I must have my say.

No girl but one who has danced knows the pleasure to be derived from it. The girls of whom "Daisy" speaks most certainly must have gone to dances they had no right to go to, or they would not have gone to the bad.

I don't think too much can be said against public dances, where any one who has the price can go, especially such dances in a large city.

So far as dancing, as well as other things, is concerned, a girl should always consult her parents, or those who have her interests most at heart. I would no sooner think of going to a dance without my parents' consent than I would think of flying.

I say, it all rests with the girl. Let her select her men friends with care, and be pretty sure where she is going and with whom she will be brought in contact before she consents to go. And, above all, ask her parents. DANCER (Pittsburg, Pa.).

I, for my part, think dancing is all right; but I think if the girls would have to dance with partners of their own sex there wouldn't be quite so many dancers.

A dancing class is so cheap that any and everybody can go, and a private dancing class is too expensive; at least, I think so. It isn't only the expense of entering the class, but you must dress accordingly. And dancing at public places I detest. M. L. (Lancaster, Pa.).

I see that "Sylvie" would like to discuss dancing. My mother and I were discussing that only this morning. As regards what "Daisy Deane" says about it, it does not always follow that a girl who dances must turn out badly. I know of lots of girls that attend both school and dances that are as good morally as others who do not. I would advise any of our girls who have money to spend, to spend it on something that will benefit them in after years. I have also studied music, and, of the two, I would name music as numbering first at any time.

Give my address to any who may want it to correspond or exchange postals.

I will help the girls in music, fancy work, entertainments, readings, socials, etc. TRIXIE (Gloucester, Mass.).

There seem to be as many differing views on dancing as there are on most subjects.

For Housekeeping Girls

If any of the girls would like to have any nice recipes for cooking cakes, cookies, ices and creams, soups, etc., I would be pleased to send them any of them. I have been to cooking school two years and learned some nice recipes, and if any one would like me to send them any of them, I would be very much pleased to do so. Would also exchange post cards. VELMA (Salem, Mass.).

Surely, there will be some one who would like "Velma's" recipes.

"My Path a Constant Reminder"

I think the pins are very pretty, and I think they are as necessary for the girls to have as their membership cards. Some girls write that they have their membership cards framed and hung in their bedroom, as a reminder.

I, too, have my card framed and hung where I can see it constantly, but does that act as a reminder when I am out mingling with the world? Then is when the pin gets in its effective work for, if worn as it should be (at all times, as one girl said, as a Mason wears his badge), it will be a constant reminder of our pledge. They are so neat, and yet so attractive, that everybody who sees mine admires it and asks where I got it. Then I tell them about our society and how to become a member. TED 2ND (Shamokin, Pa.).

This is the right spirit. May we have more of it all the time!

Offers to Do Copying

I have not been able to do anything for the girls yet, but if any of them would like copying of any kind done, I will be only too glad to do it, without charge, as I have the use of the machine after office hours and during the lunch hour. O. B. J. (Scranton, Pa.).

Objects and Aims of "Each and All"

PERHAPS some of you, seeing this page for the first time, wonder just what the Each and All Society really is; what there is about its aims and objects to create so widespread an interest among "young girls of all ages."

The society was founded in February, 1905, with Christine Terhune Herrick for its president, and with an almost instant membership of girls in almost every State in the Union and in Canada.

Its object is to help girls help themselves by developing their talents into something the world wants; to solve difficult problems—the sort a girl wants a calm, unbiased, out-of-the-family opinion upon; and to promote the exchange of general help.

Any girl can belong. There is no red tape about it. The sending of your name for membership gives you the range of every opportunity the society boasts. And Mrs. Herrick stands ready to welcome, to advise and to help.

A NEW ICE GAME

How the Game Is Played

CRACK-THE-WHIP

OUR BOYS and GIRLS

CONDUCTED BY

POLLY EVANS

JANUARY BRINGS THE SNOW,
MAKES OUR FEET AND FINGERS GLOW

A NEW ICE GAME

AS ALL this month skating will probably be good, Polly Evans' boys and girls may like to try a game on the ice of which the Swiss children are very fond.

Fix a certain goal or point toward which to skate, and appoint a starter or umpire.

Then give to each girl a kind of flat stool on which a boy sits in such a way that his feet do not touch the ice. All girls and boys wear the skates. The players are drawn up in a straight line. At a given signal the umpire waves his flag, and away they all start toward the goal, the first to reach it being the victor.

The difficulty is for the girls to guide their stools as straight as possible, to keep it from see-sawing, and to avoid spilling the boys off headlong. This frequently happens, and makes the game very amusing.

CRACK-THE-WHIP

ANOTHER jolly ice sport, though not new, is to play crack-the-whip.

Most of you girls and boys have probably played it, but some may not have, and they, I am sure, would like to try, for it is great fun.

In the first place, you must be sure to have a very broad, smooth piece of ice, without air holes or rough places.

Then all catch hands and form in a straight line, with a very strong boy as handle, or head.

Away you skate, as fast as possible, and when you are going at a tremendous speed, the leader makes a sharp, swift turn, and then another, as if he were tracing a giant S.

Of course, the line follows along after him, and alas for the poor tail of the whip if he or she hasn't a good grip, for away he will go at a rate of a hundred yards or more, usually ending up on his nose or [illegible]

There is no greater fun than to play crack-the-whip on a great broad river, where you have a fine long sweep, but Polly Evans would not advise any one to try it who cannot skate very well, or who is afraid of bumps and hard knocks, because he is pretty sure to get a good many, especially if he is down at the end of the line.

DIANA, FLUFF & COO-EE

Did you ever see a cat and dog who were really friends? Most of us know how the naughty pussies and doggies act when they meet one another. Sometimes I'm afraid boys really like to set Bruno on poor Malty just for the fun of hearing the "sputter-spitter" and sharp "bow-wow-wow" that usually are part of the meeting. But so many of us have met a friendly dog and cat.

An artist had a lovely greyhound named Diana, who was a great pet of his. Then some one gave him a fine white cat called Fluff.

At first, Diana and Fluff were just as unfriendly as most of their kind, but the painter, by petting them both at the same time, coaxed them to be friends.

After that, each winter evening Diana would lie on the floor before the fire and Fluff would curl between his paws in the cosiest manner.

Then there came a new member of the family, a little turtle-dove named Coo-ee. You know both dogs and cats usually will try to kill a birdie, so the artist was much worried how his pets would get along.

To make them friends he would take Fluff and Coo-ee on his knees at the same time, and then call Diana to lay her head beside them. In this way they all learned to love one another, and each evening the turtle-dove would sleep with her strange companions, as you see in the picture—[illegible] to Diana and Coo-ee [illegible] Fluff's back.

This strange friendship lasted several years. Not only would the three sleep together, but even eat out of the same dish. But at last Coo-ee died, and Fluff was so lonely and unhappy without her that she ran away and never came back to the artist's home.

Made It Too Little.

"Father, if I give you five cents every day, how much will that make at the end of the week?"

"It will make thirty-five cents."

"Well answered, my boy. Here are [illegible] cents as a reward for being such a good mathematician."

"Oh, father, how sorry I am [illegible] say it made fifty cents!"

Polly Evans to-day sends you a story that all the Japanese boys and girls love. She hopes you will like it quite as well.

ONCE upon a time there lived an old man and an old woman. And they were very lonely, because they had no children left alive to keep them company.

One day the old woman went down to the stream to do her weekly washing. And there floating in the water she spied a great, rosy cheeked peach.

"Ah! what a lovely present for my husband," thought she. So down she knelt, and, reaching far out, succeeded in capturing it.

Her husband was delighted with it. "Thank you, my honorable wife," said he, "and let us enjoy it at once." So he got a nice, sharp knife, and when he had measured the peach carefully, so as to divide it into exact halves, he drove his knife into it. As the knife went in the two halves of the peach slowly separated. Then pop! p-r-r-r! Much to the surprise of the two old people out burst the dearest, plumpest baby you ever saw!

They fell in love with him at once and adopted him for their own, and they named him Mo-mo-ta-ro.

Not a child in the village was as strong and active as Mo-mo-ta-ro. Why, even in the bath he turned handsprings, stood on his head and did other such things.

As he grew older he became fonder and fonder of playing soldier, and the little boys always chose him for their captain. Then when he became a schoolboy he took a great liking to athletics. But he was so big and strong that he only laughed at the usual kind of dumbbells, and got his father to make a special size for his own use.

After a while he noticed that his poor old father had to work very hard to clean and polish the rice on which they had to depend for their daily food.

"My father uses too small and light a pounder," thought he, so he made a huge and heavy one and said, "Now, father, let me take your place. You are too old to do such heavy work any more." And he started in to pound so powerfully that the rice barrel actually sank into the ground.

Now for many years Mo-mo-ta-ro had heard stories about Devil's Island, where wicked devils lived and did cruel things to make people unhappy. At last, when Mo-mo-ta-ro was 15 years old, he resolved to destroy the devils and make his friends and neighbors happy forever.

So one day he got his mother to give him a bag full of rice cakes and said, "Good-bye, I am going to fight the devils." And his parents wished him good luck.

He walked many miles before he stopped to rest. While he was eating, a dog came up and looked hungrily at his rice cakes.

"Good dog," said Mo-mo-ta-ro; "here, have a cake."

This made the dog his devoted friend and companion. A little way on they met a pheasant, whom Mo-mo-ta-ro also won over by means of a rice cake.

Then they met a monkey, who so appreciated the rice cake he received that he also joined the company and led the way to Devil's Island. And before long Mo-mo-ta-ro had them so well drilled that they made capital soldiers.

At last they came within sight of Devil's Island, but a stream lay between them and it.

"How shall we get over?" asked Mo-mo-ta-ro.

"I'll arrange that, if you will let me fly over," said the pheasant.

"You may do so," said the captain.

So, the pheasant flew over and brought back a boat, in which the whole company soon made its way across to the island. The pheasant carried along a torpedo and dropped it within the walls of the Devil's Castle. The explosion killed most of the devils at once. Those that remained tried to escape by a tunnel, but Mo-mo-ta-ro and his company pursued them and put an end to them one by one, until only their giant leader was left, and he had to surrender and give up all the contents of his treasure house to Mo-mo-ta-ro.

The next day a basketful of jewels and gold was loaded on a cart, and Mo-mo-ta-ro and his company carried it back to his home, where he presented it to his father and mother, so that they were rich for the rest of their lives, and the neighbor boys and girls were invited in to a lovely party and to hear Mo-mo-ta-ro tell the story of how he overcame the wicked devils.

OVERHEARD IN THE CAR

ONE morning little Ross and his father were coming downtown in the street car.

Ross, who was of rather an inquiring turn of mind, espied an advertisement for cold cream in which Old Father Time was putting his finger on the forehead of a young woman, leaving a wrinkle behind.

"Oh, father, look at Santa Claus; what is he doing to that woman?" asked Ross.

"That is not Santa Claus, son; that is Father Time, with his scythe, who, when you get old, comes along and puts wrinkles in your face, unless you use cold cream."

"I've no wrinkles, father."

"Why, you're not old enough yet, my boy. Father Time lets the little people alone."

Then Ross began to look around the car in search of Father Time's handiwork.

"Father Time has got you and mother, hasn't he?" asked the child. "You've ever so many wrinkles!"

"Yes, dear, I am sorry to say, he has."

"And that old gentleman has wrinkles, too!" continued Ross, pointing to an elderly man who sat near.

Then he suddenly espied a very gaily dressed woman who, though really old, was dressed like a girl of 16.

"Oh! father, look!" said Ross, in his clear voice, that could be heard all over the car, "that lady must be awful old; she has such lots of wrinkles I guess she'd just have to butter her face all over with cold cream, wouldn't she?"

TWIRL THE PLATTER

A JOLLY game for a winter's day is this. All sit around a table or on chairs, and if they prefer it, they may stand, which makes it easier to move quickly.

The leader takes either a tin pie plate or one of those thin wooden plates that are often used for picnics, and spins it rapidly in his hand. Just as his hand leaves the plate he calls for some one else to catch it.

Now this boy or girl must be very quick if he is to catch the platter before it falls to the ground. This player in turns spins it and calls on some one else to be catcher.

Those who fail to catch the plate are out of the game. At the end they are made to pay forfeits. It is very amusing for the leader to set all the losers at once to spinning around like tops to see which can keep it up the longest. Often the girls and boys get dizzy and fall down in heaps or stagger around in a most ludicrous way.

NAME FOR JANUARY

WHAT do you think our old Saxon ancestors used to call the month of January? Wolf-monat, or wolf month.

This was because in that month the people were more in danger of being eaten by wolves than in any other season of the year, for amid the bitter cold and snow the wolves could not find enough beasts to eat and so would devour every man and woman, boy and girl, that they could find out of doors.

Aren't you glad there are no ravenous wolves now to run around during the next four weeks seeking whom they may devour? It's rather pleasant to live in civilized America after all, even if boys who love to hear stories of adventure do sometimes wish they had lived long ago.

AN ODD IDEA

LITTLE Bessie went with her father to visit at her grandfather's farm on the Hudson, near Saratoga.

To the city child life in the country was so delightful that she could not stay in bed, but was always up bright and early—almost before the chickens.

One morning, when the sun was scarcely up, Bessie and her father were leaning on the front gate. Right opposite was a high terrace with the dew still shining on cobwebs, which the sun had not yet struck.

"Oh, papa, what are those?" asked Bessie.

"Why, what do you think they can be, daughter?"

"Well, papa, I guess the sun just stopped to spit."

PUZZLES and PROBLEMS

A Great American.

These five pictures represent important events in the life of a famous American, whose 200th birthday will be celebrated this week.

Who can guess the name of the man and tell Polly Evans what part these things played in his life?

WHAT fun it is on cold winter evenings, just about bed-time, to make all kinds of queer shadow pictures on the wall.

Would you like to see Jumbo or the baby elephant? Cross your left hand over the right, hold out the right thumb as far as it will go, and hold your hands between the light and a white wall.

If it's Jumbo you wish to see, father's hands will have to make him, while one of you children's tiny little paws will be just right for the baby elephant.

Very Facetious.

Bobby—If I had a pair of spectacles, I would walk on my hands.

Paul—Why do you need spectacles for that?

Bobby—Because, goose, when you walk on your hands, you are shortsighted, ain't you?

A Bicycle Course.

Algernon Ulysses Jones is very much puzzled. Before him is a bicycle course, which he must enter at A and come out at B, going through every square just once and never retracing his steps.

Poor Algernon is worried, for if he loses, his fine new wheel will be taken away from him.

I wonder if any of Polly Evans' boys and girls can tell him how to ride the course and save his wheel?

What Can it Be?

I have no eyes, and yet by me
The starry heavens one can see;
I've taught men much about the sky—
Indeed, I seem to bring it nigh;
Yet oft I'm stuffed and held by straps,
And carry gowns or shoes or caps
And travel far upon a train,
Or even on the raging main.
I ne'er can guess that, do you cry?
Oh, yes you can, if you but try.

A Dinner Plate Trick.

How can you place a dinner plate in a room in full view of every one but one person, and yet that person is not blindfolded or blind either?

A Charade.

My first is furry and whiskered,
And rats regard it with hate;
My second is gray and has long ears,
And his speech changed Balaam's fate.
My last is what every schoolboy
Is proud to have justly won,
At football, tennis, running or quoits;
At baseball, golf or with gun.
Whenever a great affliction
On any one does fall,
On nations as well as women or men,
Then people my whole it call.

A Drawing Trick.

"Mary," said the teacher, "Draw this hard figure for me in a single stroke without once lifting the pencil."

Poor Mary could not do the lesson and was well scolded.

I wonder how many of you boys and girls would have fared any better?

Try it and see.

Marion's Trouble.

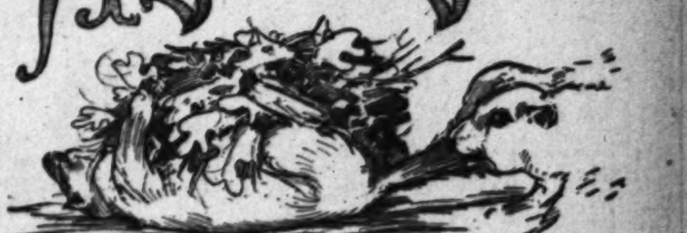
THERE was nothing little Marion S— hated so much as the feeling of wool. When winter came and his mother made him wear his heavy flannels, the little boy became rather cross, I'm sorry to say.

The season he was 4 years old Marion's mother bought him little lamb's-wool shirts, and one very cold morning insisted on him putting them on.

The child fretted and fumed. After he had worn his new shirt about an hour, he became very much annoyed by it and ran to his mother, crying:

"Mamma, I think those lambs must have had fleas. They are biting me!"

A Sound Sleeper



PERHAPS when you are, oh, so sleepy, nurse says, "Susy sleeps like a marmot, I can't waken her."

Well, if you really did sleep like this little animal, which looks like a rat with the body of a bear, I'm afraid nurse would have a very hard time indeed to waken you. For it goes to bed early in October, and never wakes up till the warm sun of April shines forth.

What's more, the marmot makes its own bed in the strangest way. It digs a sort of double hall, or two galleries. One of these is the nest, filled with quantities of dried grass and moss, and the other slopes away from it and acts as a sort of sewer or drain, so all the water and rain runs off and leaves the nest warm and comfortable all winter.

As about a dozen marmots go to bed in one nest to keep warm, they all work together to prepare this winter sleeping place.

It is an odd sight to see them getting it ready. One allows his body to be used as a sort of sledge. He turns over on his back and is loaded with as much of the grass and moss and roots as he can hold between his paws. Then his comrades pull him along by the tail. When these marmot horses get tired, others take their place, and when the sledge himself gets exhausted, then his friends unloaded him and load up another marmot.

These little animals are very playful except when they are angry or before a storm, when they whistle shrilly. They can be taught many tricks, and little Swiss boys often travel all over Europe exhibiting the funny looking animal just as we see organ grinders in this country with their monkeys.

GROWING TOOTHBRUSH

HOW do you get your toothbrushes? Do you buy them at a drug store or do you grow them on a tree or vine?

"Why, Polly Evans," you say, "what a silly question! Who ever heard of growing a toothbrush? Of course, everybody buys them!"

No, they don't, my dears, for down on the island of Jamaica there is a very curious plant, a species of creeper, which is called the toothbrush plant. By cutting a piece of stem and fraying the ends the natives make a toothbrush. Not only that, but they pound up the dead stems and make a tooth powder to use on their brushes.

There is also a tree, the Salvadora, that grows in India which is called the toothbrush tree because its stems are used by the people to clean their teeth.

Then in America we have a small tree with a very big name, Zanthoxylum, that is found from Canada to Virginia.

Can you remember that? Of course not. But, fortunately, you don't have to, for it has another very funny name that you can remember — "the toothache tree."

It is so called because its bark is very sharp and biting like pepper, and many people make a hot drink or capsules from it to give to boys and girls to cure them when their teeth begin to hurt, oh, so badly.

A SOAPY LAKE

BLOWING soap bubbles is great sport, is it not? What is finer than to blow and blow, puff, puff, puff, and watch a huge bubble shining with wonderful rainbow colors grow bigger and bigger till it floats away? Then, when it has touched some solid surface, how we hold our breath till, crack, it suddenly dissolves into nothingness!

The worst thing about soap bubbles is getting the suds ready. It is so hard to have them just right.

Now, the little Nicaraguans are spared all that worry; at least, they should be, for we learn that they have a sheet of water down there called Lake Nejapa, which is nothing but a big soapy lake. As soon as this water is rubbed on a greasy object it at once forms a lather, and the people use it for a hair wash or shampoo.

Wouldn't it be a glorious place to give a big soap bubble party? No bother at all, just a dip in the lake and blow away in great shiny bubbles.

How nice it would be if we had lakes or rivers like that in the United States! But then it would not be very nice to drink, and, really, you know we are thirstier much oftener than we want to blow bubbles.

AN OLD SAYING

AFTER a boy or girl has played a piece of music as he or she thought very nicely, has some teasing old person said to you, "Oh, that's the tune the old cow died of"?

Possibly your friends have never been so unappreciative of your music, but Polly Evans' have often, and not very polite did she think them.

This silly saying is very ancient, and they tell this story of how it first was used:

An old farmer, having nothing to feed his cow, thought he would make her forget her hunger by music. So he took up his fiddle and played and played and played. But the cow evidently did not have an ear for music, or at least not enough to make her prefer it to good corn and oats and grass, and while her master was fiddling she died.

Then the old man's friends who did not like his music said the cow died more of the farmer's bad playing than from hunger.

This, then, was the origin of this rather rude saying, and it is just about as silly a story as that of the other farmer, who put green goggles on his horse to make the poor beast think he was eating grass instead of shavings.

A SUDDEN CHANGE

BLACK SNOW? Well, we have seen it so soiled and dirty that it is hard to recognize the pure shining snowflakes that perhaps only a day or two before fell like a dazzling white cover on the earth; but, really, black snow is a sight not many of us have seen, I'm sure.

Over in Switzerland, though, not long ago, they had what the people called "black snow," though, of course, it was not.

One morning when the boys and girls of the Grisons, which is one of the cantons or divisions of Switzerland, awoke, they saw that the wide stretch of snow was a great sweep of jet black. What made the change?

Why, millions and millions of small black insects, without wings, but with two long legs on which they hopped like a grasshopper, had fallen on the country in such clouds as to entirely hide the white snow underneath. Not knowing what these insects were, the people called them "black snow."

QUEER COLORED HAIR

WHAT color is your hair? Brown, black, yellow, golden, auburn, carrotty, drab, chestnut? I don't doubt all those shades and more are to be found on the heads of Polly Evans' boys and girls. But have any of you green hair?

What's that I hear? Giggles?

Well, I must confess green hair is rather startling and not very common, but there are people living to-day with locks of that color.

Painted? No.

In a side-show. No, once more.

Most of this green hair is found on men who work in copper mines. When the crude ore is roasted in furnaces, although no one can tell just how, some strange substance goes out into the air that produces a chemical change which makes the workman's hair and beard as green as grass. This change does not seem to harm the hair, which still remains smooth and glossy, though the color is so startling.

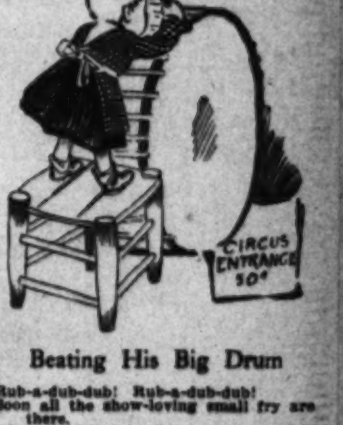
But Bennie thinks now is a good time to view
The elephants, tigers and big kangaroo,
The lions and snakes and the gay cockatoo;
The cage full of monkeys, the dogs that do tricks,
The camel's great humps and the donkey that kicks;
The long-necked giraffe, and the fat dancing bear,
The great floundering whale and the swift little hare,
For there's no struggling crowd to shut off the sight
Of the girls and the boys as there will be to-night.
So, Rub-a-dub-dub! Rub-a-dub-dub!
Beats the small drummer perched high on a chair.



Beating His Big Drum

Rub-a-dub-dub! Rub-a-dub-dub!
Soon all the show-loving small fry are there.
"Go right in," cried Bennie, "and see all the fun,
'Twon't cost you a cent, for the show ain't begun!"
With a loud whoop of joy, right in they all went,
Till there wasn't a spot left unfilled in the tent.
Still, Rub-a-dub-dub! Rub-a-dub-dub!
The proud little drummer kept beating away.
Rub-a-dub-dub! Rub-a-dub-dub!
Shouting yet louder, "You don't have to pay!"
But father soon comes on a run at the noise,
And from the tent chases the girls and the boys;
Then jerks the young drummer from off his high perch;
Pulls out from his pocket a long switch of birch,
And cries to scared Bennie, "Come, Benjamin, come!
I shall now do some beating, but 'twon't be the drum!"

Anklets

An Old-Time Symbol of Bondage

A Present Day Ornament

Of pliable gold with a tiny buckle of brilliants

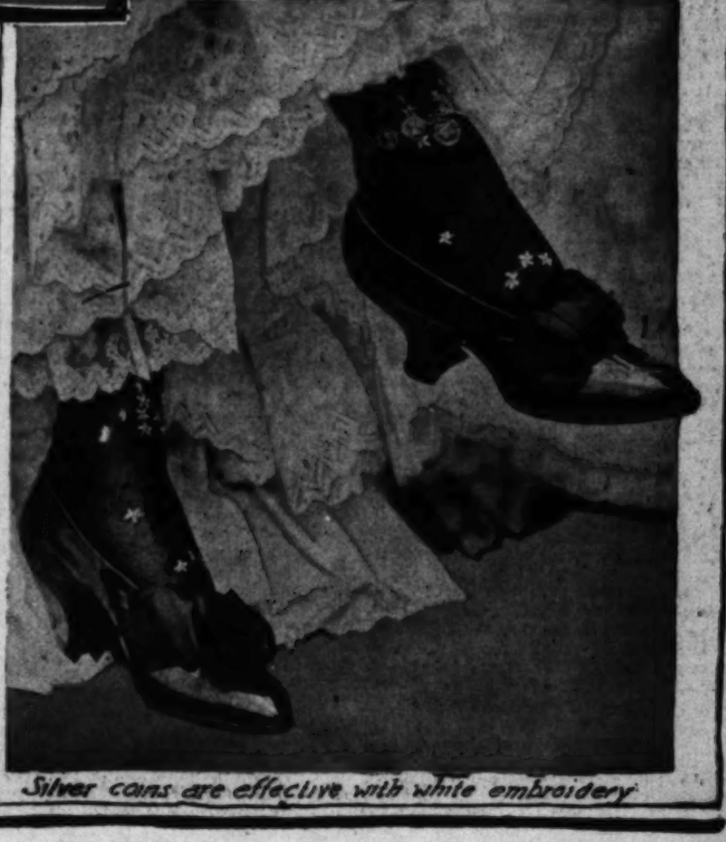
A duplicate of her bracelet

A new species of garter snake

The finishing touch

In Oriental Style

"As a dancer wears it"



Silver coins are effective with white embroidery

THAT part of London society which is comprised of debutantes is all a-flutter over the recent advent of a new ornament, which, though a bit daring (possibly for that very reason!), bids fair to be wonderfully popular. And the idea has taken to itself wings and flown over the seas with all the speed imaginable. Yet that ornament is but a revival of an old-time symbol of bondage—a copy of the anklets worn in ancient days by slaves.

The first anklets ever known were of iron—the sort Ben Hur wore when he bent to the oars of a galley. But upon the pretty slaves—the girls who danced before the King—the symbol was developed into its prettiest form—a band of beaten gold heightening the beauty of the tiny ankle it clasped.

For hundreds of years they have been forgotten. But since everything old and unusual in the jewelry world is being diligently searched out, they must needs be "discovered" by some enterprising designer, who straightway fell in love with them and launched a hundred pretty fancies upon the sea of commerce.

At first they were hard to get—a little hard, for jewelers were afraid to carry a heavy stock of them, not knowing whether or not the demand would equal the supply necessary for the sake of variety. Almost all of them had to be made to order, and were correspondingly expensive.

So one girl, impatient of delays, chose a bracelet instead, and then, carelessly enough, tried it on her ankle. To her surprise, it fitted, and since there has been no trouble about procuring them.

The heavy gold bangle bracelet—the kind that is made with a tiny, invisible hinge and an equally invisible clasp—is nearest of all to the copies of old-time anklets. But there are as many others almost as there are anklets. To some of them tiny pendants are attached, an especially attractive anklet made of quaint silver coins, having another coin dangling just in front.

With all the fluff that is characteristic of evening dress in fashion, the hem of the skirt, often a mass of lace and chiffon, with the fluffiest, laciest of skirts under it helping to hold it out; petticoats and slips and outside, all cut very long, there's scarcely any possibility of the anklets being seen (except when the skirt is held up) and that was the only objection to it.

An occasional woman wears hers under her silk stockings; but for that, one must be chosen which is so fine and light that there is practically no bulging out of the stocking over it.

Anklets in the form of golden serpents, with gleaming eyes, are shown side by side with odd ones carried out in Oriental style, every one of the flexible, glittering golden scales joined to the others by strong little rings of gold. Others radically different, but as Oriental in effect, are of dull silver, carved and set with queer, dull stones. Some, frankly modern, are jewels joined together with tiny chains, and an attractive one of pliable gold has one end which passes through a tiny buckle of brilliants.

CHAPTER II.

IN SAN FRANCISCO.

San Francisco in 1851! The Eldorado of the goldseeker, the rendezvous of desperate adventurers from all nations and zones, the Golconda of gamblers, the Smyrna of the old world! The prudent, calculating American; the indefatigable Chinese; the blond and broad-shouldered Danish and German sailor; the vain and showy Mexican; gigantic Canadian trappers and hunters of the desert,—the whole world seemed to exhibit her races and species in this cosmopolitan city.

The city consisted in those days mainly of tents and rows of buildings rudely constructed of dry wood. There were, however, also some larger and more substantially built houses, highly embellished with flags, banners and inscriptions of all sorts. These were the "Headquarters" of the divers companies and associations, who offered attractive terms to those who would join their proposed "expeditions" for the discovery and utilization of—according to announcements upon enormous posters—fabulously rich bonanzas and placers.

More than by all these pictures and announcements, however, the public interest was attracted by and centered upon the person of a genuine Indian prince, the Maharaja of Bithoor, Srinath Bahadur or Nana Sahib. This dignitary, rich and a passionate hunter, had arrived from Calcutta with two of his most famous and adroit tiger hunters, Messrs. MacScott and Harry Gibson, to engage a party of the famous hunters and trappers of the Rockies for the purpose of hunting tigers in India. The California Chronicle commended the enterprise of the Raja to the skies, and some posted announcements from the Free Press of Singapore under the heading "Rapid Depopulation of Singapore, by Tigers" conveyed the startling intelligence that during the past ten years several thousands of people had been devoured by the beasts in the district of Malacca.

The terms offered by the Raja, being exceedingly generous, the desired number of fearless and experienced hunters had been secured without difficulty, and the Maharaja's handsome brig, the "Sarah Elise," began already to prepare for the homeward journey. But before leaving the green shores of California, the Indian prince became the hero of a somewhat romantic affair, which subsequently proved of momentous consequences.

Two of the most attractive figures among the adventurers and fortune hunters abounding in San Francisco, were a young man, of careless but sportsmanlike manners, with short red hair, an open, freckled face and an easy grace of bearing; and, accompanying him, a girl of about nineteen years, of that special type which distinguishes the Irish beauty.

These were Edward O'Sullivan and his sister Margaret of the Irish gentry, who, like many of their countrymen, were seeking a new home in America. Descended from an old and respectable Irish family, brother and sister had lived on their estate in Kilkenny till Master Edward's dissolute life had financially ruined them. After many struggles and bitter experiences, they had come to America, been robbed in an eastern State by some swindler, and landed finally in California. Returning late one night to their humble abode, the couple was set upon by some drunken footpads. Without even a pretense of defending his sister, young Edward, thoroughly frightened, disgraced himself forever. Choosing, for his part, discretion rather than valor, he escaped, leaving his fair sister a prey to the ruffians. But help was at hand. The Hindu prince, who was enjoying the invigorating sea breeze on the veranda of his house, heard the cries of the helpless girl. Sword in hand he rushed gallantly to her rescue and dispersed the aggressors. And now fortune smiled upon the O'Sullivans. Greatly attracted by Margaret's beauty and gentle demeanor, the impulsive prince urged brother and sister to accompany him to India, an invitation which Edward O'Sullivan accepted the more willingly as the Maharaja's marked attentions for Margaret aroused in him great hopes for future glory.

It was in the afternoon of the day set for the departure of Nana Sahib with his followers. The Maharaja, with the O'Sullivans and his guest, Count Boulbon, a daring French adventurer who claimed direct descent from the royal Bourbons, sat under a light summer tent, on the upper deck of the "Sarah Elise."

In appearance Nana Sahib was a young man of about twenty-eight years, of medium height and rather delicate figure. His head was small and oval, his complexion like that of a European, save a slight yellowish hue, his forehead broad but low, and his nose straight and full. The face betokened strength and energy. His eyes were of a peculiar brown, and languid and dreamy in expression, behind which veil, however, the close observer might catch a slumbering gleam of passion and fire. On his forehead just above the nose and fastened by two thin gold threads around the head, he wore a small round piece of white clay. This strange ornament was the Tilluk, the token of the first caste.

The topic in discussion was India and the approaching journey thither, and the Hindu gave a glowing account of the beauty of his native country.

"What you have told us of your native land, Prince," said Count Boulbon, "has aroused my keenest interest. I also have often heard of your famous relative, the Begum of Somroo, and I should be glad if you would yourself tell us more of that remarkable woman."

"You shall hear the story of the Begum, the grandmother of the friend and protector of my younger days, David Sombre,—or David Dyce, as the English call him. When a boy I have often seen the royal woman in her palace in the golden Delhi. My father, the Peshwa, was her friend and relative." The group of listeners around the Maharaja had meanwhile increased and the Hindu prince continued his narrative:

"The Begum," the Maharaja began, "is said to have been of Mongolian origin; she was born in 1753, and reared in the Mohammedan faith. Of her earliest youth nothing definite is known. Her beauty attracted an adventurer named Le Sombre, in the service of some French colony in India, whose wife she became. After a romantic career, Le Sombre retired, with the rank of general in the army of the Raja of Bithoor, to his valuable estates near Delhi in Oudh, where he died. After a short widowhood the Begum married again. Her second husband, Le Vassu,—by whom she had one daughter,—longed for his native country, and persuaded her that she would be happier in Paris than in the deserts of India.

"The Begum was a prudent woman; she foresaw that in the foreign land she would lose her power. She consented, however, to the journey, only demanding of her husband that, in case her servants and subjects should discover their flight—for flight it really was—and try to bring her back by force, neither she nor her husband should survive the disgrace of submitting to their subjects. Le Vassu consented, and swore that he would not survive his wife. But the Begum herself had laid an ambush for them. They were taken prisoners after having traveled a few miles, and a faithful servant of the Begum hastened to the captured Frenchman, handing him a cloth soaked with blood: 'Your wife,' said he, 'sends you this and reminds you of your oath; she is dead.' The unfortunate man, who had really loved his wife, drew a pistol and shot himself. The Begum returned in triumph to Sirdhana, and reigned henceforth unmolested."

"Horrible!" cried Margaret O'Sullivan; "how could a woman who loved her husband ever sacrifice him?"

"It was a heroic sacrifice of her love for the good of her people," said the Maharaja gravely.

"And did she never feel remorse?"

"Brahma alone knows the heart of men. She died in 1836, loved and mourned by all who knew her. Her only daughter, Juliane, married the colonel of her bodyguard, Dyce. A son, David, and a daughter, Anna Mary, were the offspring of this marriage. There was a third child, but no one knows whether the mother was Juliane or a slave woman. It was believed to be the child of Colonel Dyce and a slave. The slave woman, three days after the birth of the child, was buried alive by command of the Begum."

"Dreadful! And what became of the child?"

"It was a girl, and the Begum educated her. Georgia—this was her name—eloped after the death of the Begum with an Italian adventurer, Savelli. David Dyce Sombre and his sister followed her to Laodon and never returned to India."

Count Boulbon rose. "The time has arrived, Prince, to take leave of you. I regret not being able to follow you to your interesting country, but America is the place of my destiny. Farewell! May the God of the brave, who dwelleth over San Francisco, protect you all in the jungles of India."

A few moments later the guests of the Raja were in their boat, returning to San Francisco, while the cannon of the brig, at the Maharaja's command, thundered forth their last salute.

Then the Maharaja's vessel weighed anchor and glided over the quiet water of the bay, en route for Singapore.

CHAPTER III.

GEORGIA SAVELLI.

It was about the hour of midnight when Captain Ochterlony stepped into a carriage on Buckingham Square and ordered the coachman to drive him to Hyde Park. Leaving his carriage at the entrance of the Park Lane, he walked to the garden gate of an elegant mansion on Mount street. A dim light shone through the high glass door, which opened upon the porch.

"She is awaiting me," murmured the Captain. "It must be done, then. And yet,—whither will it lead? We must part!"

He unlocked the garden door with a key and walked through the garden toward the glass door of the porch, then stopped suddenly and looked around. A sound, ever so slight, had reached his ear, and he thought that a dark shadow glided along the bushes which grew around the veranda. He listened, but not a leaf stirred. The Captain continued his way, ascending the stairs leading to the veranda, and approached the glass door.

He had hardly passed through when a shadowy body rose from the bushes, his eyes shining like glowing coals through the darkness. He remained quietly standing for a moment.

"What does he want with her who was the enemy of my master, although his blood flows in her veins too?" he whispered. "Are the white men ever false and faithless? Shall the noose of the Thug choose him for the first victim? But no! His brows—like those of the boy Srinath—bear the sign of the dark Kali: the death of thousands. But I will hear what he wants with the serpent of the Somroos." With these words he moved noiselessly up to the veranda.

About half an hour before Captain Ochterlony reached the house on Mount street, the Baroness Savelli, garbed in a sailor's dress, had entered the mansion through the same gate through which the captain afterward entered the garden. She passed through the glass door of the veranda into a spacious salon and threw herself, exhausted and excited, upon a divan.

The room was magnificently furnished in yellow India silk and purple velvet. The light of several costly Astral lamps fell upon chairs and tables of rosewood, black and white marbles, groups of tropical flowers and plants, and those many costly pieces of art and luxury which fill the boudoirs of rich and cultured women.

The lady rang a small bell which stood on the table and threw her sailor hat into a corner of the room. A French maid entered the room.

"Enfin, my lady!" she said, without showing astonishment at the disguise of her mistress. "I had become quite anxious at your prolonged absence. Will you disrobe?"

The Baroness nodded and allowed her maid to envelop her in a robe of white and pink cashmere.

"Has anybody been here, Fanchette?"

"My lord the Duke of Devonport. His Grace seemed annoyed at my lady's absence."

"Pooh! does he think I wait for his call? Is that all?"

"Yes, my lady. Shall I order tea?"

"No. Place a plate of sweets and some Spanish wine upon the table. And, listen, Fanchette! Let all the servants retire, but remain yourself in the kitchen. In about two hours a man will ring the bell at the entrance. Admit him and inform me of his arrival, but be careful that no one meets him."

The maid nodded with that impudent familiarity which servants so easily acquire when they have to aid in the secrets of the masters. Then she withdrew.

The Baroness remained for some time alone, seemingly absorbed in reveries, until a slight noise at the glass door made her start, and presently the tall figure of Captain Ochterlony appeared. The member of the lower house for Ballycastle threw his cloak upon the floor and approached the lady. He seated himself at her side, looked gravely but not unkindly into her face, and took her hand with a gentle pressure.

"You wished to speak to me, Georgia," he began; "here I am. speak, for it must be the last time that I answer your call. Our ways have long since parted."

Her hand trembled in his; she looked at him sadly.

"It was not always so, Ralph; I remember the time when you spoke different words."

A shadow passed over his broad forehead. "That time, Lady Savelli, has passed. Twelve years of stern life and of suffering have gone since. I have done with it."

"Cruel, hard-hearted man!" exclaimed the lady, throwing herself back upon the cushions. "Son of an icy land that boasts of sentiments and practices usury with virtue! And I? Have I not suffered? Am I a stranger to sorrow and grief? I was a child, Ralph, when I came to this country. The hot blood of India flowed in my veins, my imagination indulged in a thousand pleasures and enjoyments, till I discovered that I had sacrificed my youth to a contemptible, heartless gambler and adventurer. I was the most wretched being under the sun. Who was it, Ralph, who then forced the wretch who called himself my husband, to give me back my freedom—who was it, Ralph?

The captain arose. "I did not suppose, my lady, that your purpose for this interview was to make these confessions and excuses. Your views of life and its duties may be a sufficient excuse for the luxuries around you. Tell me, if you please, in what I can serve you?"

The eyes of the Baroness flashed, but with a supreme effort she mastered her indignation.

"My brother has appointed you executor of his will?"

"Sir David Dyce Sombre has indeed bestowed this confidence upon me."

"My brother, if you please, sir! You know that my brother, with a shameless disregard of our relationship, has disinherited me."

The captain bowed silently.

"I know, too, that he disposed of his estates in India; a third document authorizes the holder of the document to receive certain jewels and valuables from the Maharaja Nana Sahib at Bithoor. Is it not so?"

The captain looked surprised. "I do not understand, my lady, from what source you have learned this. Mr. Duncombe's character is blameless."

"Do not trouble yourself with suppositions," said the lady, scornfully; "I know even more; for example, that Captain Ochterlony, member of Parliament, has close connections with secret organizations in Ireland and the revolutionists of the continent."

"Madam! My lady!" Ochterlony's face was pale with indignation. "The gold of the Duke of Devonport—and his fortunate rivals," he continued with sarcasm, "seems to be used for the employment of excellent spies." The captain picked up his cloak and walked to the door.

At this moment the sound of a gentle knock was heard upon the door leading from an adjoining room.

"I will not disturb you any longer, my lady," said the captain ironically, "and deprive you of more agreeable and more profitable company."

He bowed and turned to leave, but Georgia was at his side instantly. "Ralph, for Heaven's sake—do not leave me thus! One moment, I beseech you! Your suspicion is not worthy of you—you shall convince yourself!" She almost dragged him back into the room and pushed him behind the portieres. "Remain here quietly for a moment, I beg of you."

She stepped back and rang the bell. Fanchette entered.

"Is the man here?"

"Yes, my lady."

"Let him enter!"

A moment later Jack Slingsby or "Beauty Jack" stood before the Baroness.

"My lady," said the gentleman-crook, "your command has been obeyed—here is what you wished."

He put a portfolio upon the table; the lady quickly threw a cloth over it.

"Is that all?"

"Everything, my lady, that I could find—upon the honor of a gentleman!"

"And how?"—her voice was so soft that even a listener could not possibly hear her. "Without obstacles? Without leaving any traces behind?"

"My lady, London will say tomorrow that magicians still exist, or that Old Nick himself had his hand in the play," returned the thief in an equally low tone. "Rest assured; not a living soul has noticed us."

"Take this, sir," said the lady, raising her voice and handing him a purse. "Here is your pay."

The thief looked curiously around.

"Upon honor! My lady, you are living in luxurious surroundings. Will you permit me to kiss your fair hand? I am a gentleman and know what is proper."

The Baroness, to get rid of the impudent rogue, extended her hand.

"Go now, our business is done."

She turned her back toward him and rang the bell.

Jack Slingsby scanned the room and its doors once more with his eyes. "Not quite, ma belle!" he murmured between his teeth. "We shall meet again sooner than you think."

Fanchette entered.

"Open the door for this gentleman, Fanchette," said the Baroness, "and then you may retire; I do not need you any more."

"Beauty Jack" made a fashionable bow and followed the maid, whose chin he gently pinched as a first overture of love-making.

Lady Savelli considered for an instant; then she stepped to the table and took the portfolio. It was locked.

"Will Lady Savelli allow me now to withdraw?" asked the voice of the captain behind her.

The Baroness flew at him and drew him to her side upon the soft cushions of the divan.

"Ralph, it was madness to insult you! Forgive me! And if this hour shall be our last together, it shall be mine and yours, yours who have once loved me."

As a serpent coils around his victim, so the soft arms of the passionate woman wound themselves around the man, while her quivering lips pressed kiss after kiss upon his.

"Georgia, let me go!"

"Listen to me, man of my soul! Ralph, I cannot be poor. Poverty is misery—grief—horror! Shall I live for the rest of my life in shame and agony? Is it you, Ralph, who will condemn me to pain and despair—are you the cruel tool of an unnatural brother?"

"I do not understand you, Georgia."

"The letter!" gasped the Baroness, "that accursed, fiendish paper which directs Nana Sahib to deliver those documents, who has it?"

"Oh, the letter? My lady, it rests safely here in my breast pocket, till I shall be able to discharge the duties confided to me."

"The letter, Ralph,—for mercy's sake, for the sake of my love give me the letter!"

"But, my lady, what is the letter to you?"

She threw herself at his feet.

"Ralph the document—my birth—it would prove that I am a beggar; while if it is destroyed I share the inheritance. Have mercy, Ralph, give me the paper!"

"I cannot, Georgia; the honor of a man, the promise to the dead——"

"Wretch! You will not? Then you shall not leave the house alive!"

She sprang to her feet, and reaching under the pillow of the seat drew the creese from beneath it, and darted at him like the tiger of her native country.

Capt. Ochterlony awaited her onset with perfect calmness; grasping her arm, he wrested the dagger from her hand and threw it into a corner of the room. The weapon had torn his coat, however, and inflicted a slight wound on his breast; the issuing blood stained his clothes.

"If you intend to do murder, my lady," he said, "remember that you are not on the shores of the Ganges but on those of the Thames."

"The letter, traitor, the letter!"

She threw herself upon him with the fury of her savage nature. There was a struggle, then Ochterlony freed himself from the grip of the frantic woman and left the house, leaving the Baroness in a half unconscious condition from exhaustion.

About an hour before dawn another actor appeared upon the scene—Beauty Jack. For a moment he stood motionless, listening. Then he walked softly over the heavy Persian rugs and disappeared behind the portieres which separated the drawing-room from the boudoir of the Baroness.

A cry rang out from the bedroom, and Jack Slingsby, his handsome face distorted with horror, rushed into the garden as if beset by furies, and climbed swiftly over the wall. He had hardly touched the pavement when a hand was placed on his shoulder. Jack turned quickly and his hand went to his breast pocket for the pistol, when a familiar voice whispered:

"Jack, I want to talk with you; but, man, how you do look; not a drop of blood in your face! you are like a corpse——"

Slingsby stared into the face of Joe Loewenthal, the landlord of the "Bloody Arm."

"Monster! did you—? Away! no one must see us here!" and he dragged the Jew forcibly with him.

It was about the hour of noon, the following day, when the officials of the court appeared in the house of the late Sir David, in order to open the documents which had been left in the room with Sir David's body in the presence of the two executors, the servants and the notary, Mr. Duncombe.

The bolts on the main entrance to the room were carefully examined and found intact; the court officials removed them and the door was opened. Mr. Duncombe was the first to enter the room, but he had hardly crossed the threshold when he started back and, spreading his arms before the open door, to prevent any one from entering, cried: "Back, gentlemen! Felony! a theft has been committed here,—the will has been stolen!"

One glance at the desk, upon which but yesterday he had placed the portfolio with the documents, had shown him that it had disappeared. A cry of astonishment followed. The court official turned to Capt. Ochterlony.

"As master of the house, sir, I must request you to notify the police at once and demand that an officer be sent hither. The interests which are involved in the stipulations in these documents are so various that, for the benefit of all persons concerned, I insist upon an immediate examination by police officers."

"You cannot be more anxious than I," answered the Captain haughtily. "The police station on New Road is only two blocks distant, and Master Hay is one of the cleverest detectives in the city. Have the goodness, friend,"—he turned to the German physician,—"to repair to the station and bring Master Hay to us."

The door of the bedroom was closed again and the party remained in the corridor to await the arrival of the police officer. It was noticed that Capt. Ochterlony did not present his usual cool appearance and well-balanced bearing. He looked fatigued, and appeared to be nervous and absent-minded.

Half an hour had elapsed when Walding returned with the police detective, Giles Hay. Hay was at that time a well known personage in London and the terror of all "gentlemen of the night" and rogues of every breed. He was a small man but of considerable strength, with a red face and keen gray eyes.

"What do I hear, sir?" he began. "Theft in the house of a member of Parliament? Robbery during the night? Pooh! we will find it out in no time, or my name is not Hay. But let us begin at the bottom." He turned to the servants. "Has any one of you heard anything uncommon, any noise, of whatever nature, during the night?"

"Not I," said James, who acted as porter. "The German gentleman returned at about midnight; his Honor, the Captain, came at 3 o'clock."

"Has any one of you left the house during the night?"

All the servants answered in the negative.

"You were, then, not at home, sir," said Hay to Capt. Ochterlony," and, of course, could not hear anything."

"I spent the night in some business outside," said the Captain curtly.

"Well, then, gentlemen, let us enter the room. You are certain that the portfolio was left upon the table?"

Duncombe, Ochterlony and Walding swore to it.

The door was opened. Hay, Capt. Ochterlony, the court official, Duncombe and the German physician entered, while the rest of the party remained in the corridor. Hay went at once to the windows and raised the curtains. The windows were closed from the inside and could not possibly have been opened from without. The second door, that which led into the adjoining room, was found bolted from inside. There was general astonishment; only Hay retained perfect coolness.

Suddenly a startled cry was heard. The German physician had drawn aside the curtains around the bed of Sir David to look once more at the face of his deceased friend. The bed was empty once more—the corpse had vanished!

"Damn!" murmured Hay, "this is, then, not a case of petty larceny. Cracksmen of the worst kind have operated here—a genuine body-snatcher is in that party. Please, gentlemen, do not move until I have examined everything."

He began a close inspection of every piece of furniture in the room, then turned to the walls, carpets and rugs. Finally he rose and took a deep breath, his gray eyes beaming with pride and satisfaction at his own sagacity.

"I thought so! With all their cunning those fellows are not shrewd enough to deceive old Giles Hay."

"Have you discovered a clew?" inquired the notary.

"I see the whole manipulation as clearly as if I had been the third in the party—for mind, gentlemen, there were two intruders!"

"Whence do you conclude this?"

The detective paid no attention to this question. "There is only one circumstance," he continued, "which puzzles me. I have so far known only one person who understood the art of opening a door bolted from the inside and closing and bolting it again from the outside, and that person is deported and at present not in England. This manipulation has, however, been employed in our case."

"The crook may perchance have escaped from Botany Bay and returned."

"Correct! That's it! Jack Slingsby, the King of all thieves of this blessed island, must be in London again. This fellow, Slingsby, or 'Beauty Jack,' is a wonder of skill and dexterity—"

"Will you kindly tell us," interposed Capt. Ochterlony, "upon what you base your suppositions, and what steps should be taken?"

"Examine this bolted door, Captain; do you notice any hole or notch in it?"

"Not the slightest."

"And yet the rascals have drilled through it."

The police officer drew a long needle from his sleeve, examined several places with his finger and pressed the point of the needle finally into a place about one inch to the right of the lock; the needle pierced the wood without meeting any resistance.

"Do you see this? This little hole was carefully pasted up with wax of the same color as the door."

"But of what use is this small hole?"

"Friend Jack has means to slip through such a hole into any bolted room."

"No jesting, sir," interrupted the Captain.

"I am far from jesting with your Honor," replied Hay. "Allow me to explain. Through this hole, which is drilled with a very fine instrument and in a horizontal line with the bolt, is pushed a thin but strong steel needle, at whose point is fastened a noose made of horse hair. As soon as the point of the needle is in the same line with the bolt, the needle is turned till the loosely hanging noose catches the knob of the bolt. An experienced hand like Jack's manages that without difficulty. The needle is then withdrawn and the noose tightened, and the hand is of unusual strength the bolt follows the pull and the door is opened."

"But we found the door bolted."

The detective laughed. "That is simple enough after the thieves are once in the room; they slip a loop of tough horse-hair around the handle of the bolt, the ends of the loop passing between the edge of the door and the jamb when the door closes. By pulling the loop from outside the bolt is again pushed into its socket and the door thus fastened. One end of the loop is then released and it is readily withdrawn." It was clear that this must indeed have been the manner in which the thieves had entered the room and again locked the door after leaving.

"Jack," continued Mr. Hay, "does not steal corpses, however. The pal, whom he doubtless has with him for emergencies, must have been a body-snatcher."

The detective's experience and shrewdness had divined the manipulations of the rogues. Hay now opened the bolted door, and a horsehair was found caught between the edge of the door and the post. At this juncture three other persons entered the room. They were Dr. Jennys, the Marquis St. Paul, and a stranger whose badge showed him to be a Sheriff. Dr. Jennys' face was pale and agitated, while that of the Marquis bore an expression of malicious joy.

"Who of the gentlemen," asked the Sheriff, "is the Rt. Hon. Capt. Ralph Ochterlony, member of the Lower House?"

"I am he. What do you wish, sir?"

"My name is Richard Powell, sir," said the officer, "I am the Sheriff of Westminster and Pimlico, and Mr. Hay will possibly identify me."

"No necessity sir," replied the Captain politely, "every Englishman will respect your badge. I am glad you came; we are busy investigating the theft."

"The theft?" said the astonished Sheriff. "There must be some mistake here. I know nothing about a theft."

"My house was broken into during the night, and the will of Sir David stolen, with other documents."

"The will stolen!" cried the Marquis joyfully. "This is important news."

"Should it be 'news' to my lord St. Paul?" asked the Captain sarcastically.

"Sir," interrupted the Sheriff, "I repeat that I know nothing about a theft in this house. I have come to ask you to answer some important questions. Allow me, sir, to do so at once. Do you know this portfolio?"

The face of the member of Parliament for Ballycastle flushed as he extended his hand to take the portfolio which the official held toward him.

"It is my property, sir, I must have lost it last night, and had not yet noticed its loss. I am obliged to you!"

But the official drew his hand back. "Before I can return this portfolio to you, sir, I must continue my questions. Where were you last night?"

"This sounds like a trial before the judge of Bow street," said the Captain with a forced laugh. "You shall know, however. I spent the evening until midnight in the company of this gentleman," he pointed to Dr. Walding.

"And afterward?"

"Afterward," said Ochterlony hesitatingly, "I attended to some private business outside the house."

"Will you tell me where?"

"No!"

"Perhaps Mount street?"

"You are becoming impertinent, sir, leave my house!"

"One question more: Of what color was the coat which you wore last night?"

"Sir!"

At that instant two police officers entered the room, one carried on his arm a coat, from which a button with a piece of surrounding cloth had been torn, and a vest. Both garments were soiled with blood.

"I found this coat and vest in Capt. Ochterlony's dressing room," reported the officer to the Sheriff, "also a basin with traces of blood."

The eyes of the Captain flashed. "Fellow, you have dared to enter the room of a gentleman—of a member of Parliament?" He made a motion as if to throw himself upon the police officer. The Sheriff stepped between them; his staff touched the Captain's shoulder. "Sir Ralph Ochterlony, in Her Majesty's name, I arrest you under suspicion of murder!"

The Captain staggered back. "Murder? Are you mad, sir? What murder?"

"Committed during this night on the person of Lady Georgia Savelli, at her residence in Mount street."

"Georgia—murdered?"

"Lady Savelli," continued the official, "was found this morning in her bed, wounded and strangled to death. Upon the carpet of the bedroom was found this portfolio which Capt. Ochterlony recognized as his own, and the button, with the piece of cloth, torn from this coat here—also property of Capt. Ochterlony. I regret that it is my duty, but under such circumstances, I am constrained to make the arrest."

"It is impossible!" exclaimed Dr. Walding. "Whatever the circumstances may be, Sir Ralph has never sullied his hands with such a crime. I will vouch for his honor and his innocence!"

"Vouch for yourself, my good German doctor," laughed Dr. Jennys maliciously. "Just wait till we get evidence against you for trying—"

"Silence!" thundered Capt. Ochterlony, "I am still master in my own house. I thank you, Walding, for your good opinion, but it is below my dignity to protest here my innocence." He turned to the Sheriff. "I shall follow you, sir, but first allow me to settle my affairs here."

"Make any arrangements which you please, sir."

"I ask Mr. Hay, then, to continue his investigation. Tukallah!" called the Captain.

"Sahib?" was the immediate answer.

"Take these two scoundrels," the Captain pointed at the Marquis and Dr. Jennys, "and throw them down stairs."

"I protest!" cried the Marquis. But the Hindu rushed at him and Dr. Jennys and dragged both out of the room.

"You know where to find the letter, Walding," whispered Capt. Ochterlony into the physician's ear.

"Yes."

"Guard it as you would your life! You shall soon hear from me. Now, sir, I am ready to follow you, before the judge or into prison."

Color Effects.

It is quite a new fashion to wear a very narrow colored necktie with one's white lingerie blouse. The necktie just outlines the stock collar where it joins the yoke, and ties in front in a smart little bow. It may be of holly red velvet or satin, or of any color which happens to be particularly becoming. If a girl cares to go to the trouble of sewing new buttons every once in a while on her mitt cuffs, it is a very pretty little fad to have the buttons on the cuffs match the litite necktie in color.—[Woman's Home Companion.

Needless to say, with such a spirit as this prompting them, they found offices opened their doors to the Cuban women brave enough to live up to their own convictions, and lo! this girl who had been considered a doll was found to be an excellent and reliable business woman. She became a necessity, and every business house in Havana wanted a typewriter.

The ice once broken, so to put it, the spirit of activity for women spread rapidly throughout the land. The university and high school opened their doors to the gentler sex, and many availed themselves of the privilege and flocked to the classes.

But the greatest demand for feminine labor was created by the inauguration of the new school system implanted in Cuba by Alexis E. Frye, the supervisor of Cuban schools, who was appointed by the United States government after the war. A call was made for 3500 teachers. But few responded. Those who had the required diplomas were but a small percentage of the applicants. Mr. Frye was in a quandary to find efficient instructors. He consulted with his associates, with the secretary of public education, with the military governor. Was it best to import American teachers or not? This was the palpitating question. The patriotic insurgent put his foot down and declared against such a thing as foreign teachers, and it was finally decided to leave the matter to the discretion of the local boards of education which were to make a selection by eliminating the inadequate candidates.

For lack of trained teachers, bright girls were chosen, who were to hold their positions conditionally, studying the meantime and submitting from time to time to examinations under the guidance of a corps of inspectors constituting a sort of normal school.

The result has been truly marvellous, for in less than a year's time many of these gifted, but uneducated, girls acquired a proficiency which they might have been two or three years in obtaining under different conditions.

The Pedagogical League of Havana was then organized, and its field of usefulness was proved far-reaching. A large number of distinguished educators offered their services free, and lectures for the benefit of the teachers were given at the rate of three an evening.

The spectacle of several hundred girls of delicate form and feature, accustomed to the easy life of a luxurious home, coming courageously, sometimes from very far and often alone, at night after the confining labor of a hard day's teaching, sitting in a stifling atmosphere, with eager, upturned faces, drinking in the lessons which should qualify them to retain their positions and pass successfully the dreaded examinations, was a sight as touching as wonderful and prophetic.

The climax of this new state of affairs was capped when Harvard University generously extended an invitation to 1500 Cuban teachers for a six weeks' course of study at Cambridge free of all expense.

The Cuban press was divided about the advisability of the project, some papers applauding, some loudly decrying it. An indignation meeting was held when it was learned that each invitation was for one teacher only, no mammas, grandmammas or aunts being included. The old ladies of Cuba were shocked. It was bad enough that Lola, Mercedes and Carmen should go about the city alone as they now were, but to permit them to go to the United States without their families! Never!

The girls were in despair. They, themselves, were, in spirit, right up to date, but it was not so easy to conquer prejudices nor make the older generation see through their young eyes.

Mr. Frye's office was besieged. He was begged and implored to make just one exception in favor of Lola's mother, or Mercedes's aunt, but he remained as inflexible as stone. How many weeping eyes have left that building at the corner of Cuba and Chacon streets!

The tears that failed to soften the stern heart of the Superintendent of Schools were used more effectually at home, however, and at last, with many parental misgivings, the girls were allowed to go.

The success of the undertaking and the favorable impressions made on the American public by the Cuban teachers at Harvard were attested by the entire press of the United States.

The Cuban woman has had until now, owing to four centuries of Spanish misrule, few adventures. But it has been demonstrated that there is mettle in her, and the rapidity with which she is embracing new ideas, her earnestness, quickness and tact are a strong argument in favor of the Cubans as a nation.

These daughters of old Castile brought up never to work are now turning to all manner of occupations. Many have learned typewriting in the United States, and are now stenographers in Havana business houses. Others are bookkeepers, secretaries, etc., and one delicately bred woman manages a cigar factory, and another has opened a millinery shop. In their brave effots they have the respect of the world.

CUBAN WOMEN.

Work for the Invalid.

There is no reason why the shut-in who does painting or fancy work should not be just as businesslike. The trouble is that so few who try to do this sort of work keep up to date. They make the same things year after year, despite changing fashions (and there are fashions in fancy work and painting as in everything else.)

Here is a sample. Not long ago a young woman in Ohio wrote to me that she painted lovely little trifles for dressing tables and work baskets, but she could not dispose of them at the exchanges. "You know," she wrote, "exchanges only sell things for favorites of the directors and the manager."

To be quite frank I think the average woman's exchange is conducted in an unbusinesslike fashion; but still there are women who draw steady incomes as consignors of fancy work, so I wrote to this young woman to send me samples of her "lovely little trifles." I wish you might have peeped over my shoulder when I opened the parcel! Half a dozen discs in percaline and cotton-backed satin. All in pale blue, painted with great white daisies and tied with blue ribbon. Around the edge were pins. The painting looked like the work of a kindergarten pupil, and had neither shading nor proper proportions. How I wished that I might have taken that deluded young artist to one of New York's exchanges where some really lovely trifles in up-to-date painting and needlework are on displyay!—[Anna S. Richardson in Woman's Home Companion.

About Habit.

Because we have not hitherto had the best possible habits is no reason why we should not begin to form them in 1906. Prof. James, who has made a profound study of habit, has furnished us with one or two excellent maxims on the subject. First, he tells us that it is indispensable to begin with "as strong and as decided an initiative as possible. Accumulate all the possible circumstances which shall reinforce the right motive. Put yourself assiduously in conditions that encourage the new way and make engagements incompatible with the old; in short, envelope your resolution with every aid you know. Never suffer an exception to occur until the new habit is securely rooted in your life. Each lapse is like the letting fall of a ball of string which one is carefully winding up; a single slip undoes more than a great many turns will wind again. Let the expression of your habit be the least thing in the world, speaking genially to one's grandmother, or giving up one's seat in a horse car if nothing more heroic offers. But let it not fail to take place."—[Margaret E. Sangster in Woman's Home Companion.

THE PROBLEM OF COLOR.

FASHIONABLE CRAZE IS TO BE REGRETTED—COLORS THAT ARE BECOMING TO BLONDES AND BRUNETTES.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

THOUGH it must be admitted that women generally within the last few years, have advanced wonderfully in regard to the selection of tasteful and becoming toilets, even a short walk on the streets or a visit to the large stores convinces one quite forcibly that there yet remains much room for improvement. Chiefly noticeable is this in regard to color. Once a certain color is launched as being "the" color, then the average woman, no matter of what type, unless thoroughly convinced that such shade is not for her and is sufficiently strong minded to resist the temptation, will surely succumb to the fashionable craze.

While it is impossible to lay down hard and fast rules as to what each individual shall wear, there are certain rules for certain types, which, if followed, may assist most materially in choosing becoming colors.

Taking the blonde—into how many classes or types may she not be divided?

There is the pink and white blonde, the red and cream blonde, like a full blown rose, the sallow blonde, the colorless blonde and the ash blonde, all of which types show variation, making the selection of colors all the more difficult in individual cases. One thing to be remembered, however, is that what colors a brunette wears should be governed by her skin, while those selected by a blonde should be chosen in reference to her eyes also.

FOR A PINK AND WHITE.

Thus a pink and white blonde, with gray or gray green eyes should not wear pale or light blue, because there is no shade of blue in her eyes. Her colors are white, pale green, mauve, deep brown, navy blue, turquoise, cerise, blush pink and black. Navy blue, green, purple (especially if the hair be golden) and silver gray are all good for street wear; lily leaf green, white, pinky mauve, and white over green will be ideal for evening. Yellow, too, may often be most successfully worn.

Most authorities are agreed, I know, that pale blue is "the" color for the blue or violet eyed blonde of the pink and white order. To my thinking, however, such a type so attired lacks character, and prefer white spangled with silver or white with touches of pale blue, the pale blue gown to be passed over to the brunette of the brown haired, brown eyed, bright complexioned type.

Such a blonde may wear black, white, crimson, cerise, mauve, heliotrope, purple, pink and green—these two in their very darkest and lightest shades—dark warm brown and blue gray. The blonde with brown or hazel eyes will find all the foregoing becoming, and may add pale blue, a deeper pink and almost every shade of gray.

The red haired blonde should avoid pale blue; that is, genuine pale blue, the soft pastel shades not being unbecoming, but she will certainly look her best in black or white. Next in order come very pale green, lemon, mauve, very dark green, navy blue, deep purple, gray and a very deep wine color. This, however, must be chosen with care, and lastly, a very pale pink, which, when becoming, is exquisitely so. Her sister of the red and cream complexion, needs careful dressing, or she is apt to look coarse and overdressed. Her colors must be chosen with a view to diminishing any overexuberance of tints in cheek and hair, and, therefore, the faded shades known as pastel, in blues, lavenders and greens, will be admirable for her. She can also wear well a dull, soft black, dark blue, dark brown, and dark purple.

EVENING SHADES.

Palest pink and palest green are good evening colors of this type. Gray should not be worn, as it accentuates the tints in lips and cheeks, and so should be avoided by the too florid beauty.

The colorless blonde is another tpye, often quite pretty in its own way, but who needs careful dressing in order to look her best. Supposing the lips are red and the skin quite clear, the difficulty is somewhat lessened, but, as often happens, the complexion is apt to be sallow; then the case requires careful thought. Red is perhaps the best of all colors to select, while in the various shades it will be almost impossible to go wrong, terra cotta, wine and poppy reds all being equally becoming. Then come ciel blues, the dull Chinese blues, and, for evening, deep cream and pale yellow are among the most successful shades. Where the skin is actually sallow, red and terra cotta will be found becoming, also navy blue, if relieved by cream near the face. A shade known as "sunset," yellow, with knots of orange velvet and soft creamy lace about the shoulders, is far and away the best choice for an evening gown.

The brunette, genuine, dark eyed, dark haired and of good color, is not a different type to deal with, given a good complexion, and almost every color is hers, brown hair harmonizing with almost every shade. Black is seldom becoming to this type, but she can wear cream, ivory, yellow, Indian red, claret, cardinal, deep and pale blue, golden brown, fawn, putty color, tans, coral pink, rose pink, old rose, terra cotta and silver gray. Pale green, white, pale blue and yellow may be safely chosen for evening wear.

The fair brunette, she of the dark hair and eyes of blue, blue gray or violet, must use discretion in choosing her colors. No strong, vivid tints for her—nothing, in fact that will destroy the delicate tints of her skin. This does not mean that neutral tones should be selected, but that delicate shades of the chosen colors should be adopted. For instance, delicate yellow will suit her better than bright orange, and ivory better than deep cream. Gray, from dove color to pepper and salt, will become her, and so will golden brown, golden tans, navy blue, pale coral and pale salmon pink, maize, lemon and silver blue.

FOR BRUNETTES.

The creamy brunette belongs closely to this type, and besides wearing those colors belonging to her fairer sister may add poppy red, crimson, the paler shade of Indian red and the paler shades of orange. The sallow brunette is only the slightest bit less difficult to dress than the sallow blonde, and so should exercise the greatest care when choosing her colors. Not that she has such a wide choice for reds, Indian and flame; deep orange, deep tans and very strong golden and reddish browns compose her range largely. Deep navy blue, relieved with red near the face, may be worn, and in the opinion of some authorities steel gray is becoming.

The "nut brown mayde" should dress up to her colorings in order to look her best. Rose pink, rose red, red browns, golden browns, warm gray, deep blue, nasturtium, ecru, sunset, yellow, peach color, apricot, ivory white, amber, are each and all good colors. Indeed, all tawny tones echoing or harmonizing with those of the skin will be found becoming both for day and evening wear.

In regard to those women who are neither dark nor fair, but who are what is generally known as the "between colors" type, much depends upon the eyes and complexion. The hair will be neither light nor dark, but the eyes will vary, and may be blue, blue gray, gray or brown. The skin, too, may possibly be clear pink and white, but is often creamy white or sallow. A woman possessing the clear pink and white skin can wear every shade of mauve and purple, green and greeny blue with success, while the sallow woman should avoid those colors.

Again, while this type invariably looks well in shades of blue, yet if there is the slightest tinge of green in the eyes, blue, except navy, should not be worn. Pinks will be found becoming, and so will certain shades of red—the bright shades for those of clean, fair skins, and rich, warm ones for those who are sallow. Black is extremely becoming to those of the pink and white order, and for evening wear cream, pale pink, pale blue, pale green, old rose and silver gray are alike good. Browns, wine reds, mauves, heliotropes and deep gray are all becoming colors for street wear, but all fawns, tans, putty colors and such neutral tones should be avoided as being too nearly the shade of the hair to produce successful results.

VELVET GOWNS.

THEY ARE WORN NOW IN PROFUSION BY THE DEBUTANTES.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—In contrast to chiffons and gauzes, silks and satins make most serviceable evening gowns. So great an economy have silk, velvet and satin ball gowns been proved that such textures are now worn altogether by the woman whose means are limited. Even debutantes now wear velvet and satin, for with an unlimited number of balls following each other in rapid succession it is impossible to keep tulle or chiffon frocks fresh and trim.

Chiffon velvet is not heavy enough to be unpleasantly warm and the material is always effective at night. This light weight, soft-finished velvet is undoubtedly the favorite material for the season for both afternoon and evening wear, light shades being generally seen at a dinner, dance or opera, while darker tones are popular for the day time. It is not necessary to make up a velvet gown very elaborately, for while it is true that embroidery of all kinds is so much in demand, still there are many exquisitely pretty plain princesse dresses trimmed only with a deep lace collar about the decolletage. Draped princess gowns are effective in chiffon velvet, that is, while the gown is all in one piece, the material is draped across the bust and lightly over the hips. This style is also popular in satin.

Red is not so much worn in the evening as a year or two past, and black gowns, while still seen, are all on a most elaborate order and relieved with considerable white lace in the bodice and sleeves. The unusual shades of red—crimson, scarlet, salmon and flame color—are seen here and there, and the more unusual the shade the greater success will it attain. Turquoise blue is one of the most attractive colors seen in chiffon velvet, and then there are the different old rose, pinks and a few shades of green that are fashionable. Yellow is never a widely popular shade, as it is rarely very becoming. For this reason the yellow gown is sure to be effective when it can be worn.

Light plaid silks made up with a suggestion of the picturesque are among the prettiest of this year's dinner gowns. With a silk of pink and white coloring, or indeed with whatever shades are introduced in the pattern, black velvet ribbon is used to some extent just now. Fichus are coming back also—that is, the real, wide chiffon fichu, edged with soft ruffles of lace, the chiffon then brought over to the center of the bodice and fastened in soft loops or rosettes. If there is a vest effect of the waist the fichu may stop on either side of this and be carried down to the belt. Little black velvet bowknots slipped through tiny rhinestone buckles may finish the lace vest. The belt should not be too wide, and should fasten in back, beneath a large rhinestone buckle. Sash ends of black velvet would be rather too heavy to be pretty.

Soft satins and satin finish silks are used even more this winter than the heavy rich quality. The silks wear as well or very nearly as well as satin, and of course are not so expensive. Pink satin is a favorite, while white always makes a handsome gown. As such handsome and expensive lace is obligatory this year many of the skirts are not trimmed save with ruffles or ruchings of the material. Laces are still combined with utter disregard to kind and quality.

WATERPROOF COATS.

A rain coat can never be a thing of beauty, but it should be as attractive as possible in color, material and design. The old fashioned rubber coat, so long known as "waterproof," did good service for a number of years, but the capes were found cumbersome and the material itself was uncomfortably heavy, so that the cravenette cloth coat, made with sleeves instead of the long cape, was at first welcomed with great relief. Since the introduction of this many new styles of rain coat have worked their way into favor. Gloria and rubber-lined silk and rubber-faced satin are the three materials for wet weather most destined to live.

Cloth cravenette is not entirely out. A cloth ulster is an excellent thing to have on hand—that is to say, a cloak large enough to be slipped on comfortably over a winter suit if necessary. The sleeves must be full, large. The coat should fasten up close at the throat, while in length the wrap should reach just to the end of a short walking skirt. For either snow or rain such a coat is a necessity and the cravenette cloth is particularly good, as it is waterproof. Raglans have changed considerably since their first appearance. They are more elaborate—strapped and to some extent fitted at the back. On some models are seen short shoulder capes, and of course sleeves have altered considerably in accordance with the prevailing fashions.

Gloria is used as much in winter as summer, for although light in weight it is after all the waterproof quality that is desired, and the cloak is naturally made large enough to put on over any coat no matter how heavy. While some of the gloria raincoats are fitted in at the back the majority of the new models hang loose from the shoulders, belted in perhaps with a wide strap buttoned in the center. Bright colored silk collars and cuffs on a tan coat are effective, while pale blues or pinks may also be used in the trimming.

Raincoats of rubber-lined satin are slightly heavier than those of gloria. These are really extremely handsome. They are seen in all shades from red to white. Red is always attractive and anything that can help to dissipate the gloom of a rainy day would be welcomed. Black satin coats are also smart and the majority of these models are brightened by some color at the collar and cuffs. There are turned-back cuffs to the sleeves of these raincoats, for the sleeves must needs be long, but very full, for the width of the dress sleeve is increasing steadily. A three or four inch cuff of contrasting color is therefore necessary to finish the sleeve attractively.

The Gentle Reader.

The young girl, forbidden the saloon and café, muddles her brains with books instead of with drink. From the twenty to fifty novels a year that she reads it is doubtful if she obtains a single new idea, a single thought worth remembering. She reads not to think, but to save herself the trouble of thinking. The book that could give her any real knowledge of life would not perhaps be found on shelves of the circulating library. She reads, one after the other, a monotonous procession of love stories, where impossible young men with nothing else to do in life, make impossible love to impossibly perfect young women. I talked with a successful novelist once. He can be delightfully cynical, even at his own expense.

"The recipe for a successful novel," he explained, "is to draw your heroine so that every woman reader can imagine herself the part. Sketch your hero a vague framework into which she can put the picture of her particular young man. Let them make love on every other page and she feels it almost as good as the real thing."—[Jerome K. Jerome in Woman's Home Companion.

If Germany were to mobilise her army tomorrow, the Dusseldorf Chamber of Commerce states that there would not be a sufficient quantity of meat in the country to feed the army in the field.

Handsome Set of Popular Squirrel

With the extreme high vogue in dress goods of all shades of gray, from the dainty delicate dove to the fashionable London smoke gray, furs such as squirrel and moleskin have this season risen high in the estimation of Dame Fashion, and fur designers are exerting themselves to show new and original designs in coats, scarfs and muffs. The illustration shows a loose coat of the choicest squirrel pelts cut in Vandyke points to about knee depth. The sleeve is a full bishop and the collar is a high storm affair, the fronts double breasted and fastening with gray silk frogs and loops. The little toque with crown of black velvet has a band of the squirrel around the turned-up brim, and a white marabout feather standing up jauntily on the left front side. The muff is of the satchel variety, lined with heavy white satin, as is the coat.

Inventors, scientists and physicians have for years been trying to find some method whereby the height of an individual could be increased, and up to the last few years have met with failure. It remained for a comparatively young man, Mr. K. Leo Minges by name, to discover what so many others had failed to do.

Mr. Minges resides in Rochester, N. Y., and has devoted the best part of his life in studying and experimenting on the Cartilage, and his great efforts have at last been crowned with success. A large company, composed of Rochester's leading citizens, has been formed for the purpose of placing Mr. Minges' discovery and inventions before the public, so that now it is possible for any lady or gentleman who is short to increase her or his height from two to five inches. These results are absolutely guaranteed.

Mr. Minges has successfully used his method on himself, and has grown from a short, stunted boy to a handsome, robust man of six feet one inch in height. Thousands of people living in all parts of the world are using his method with equally startling results. Let us send you the absolute proof of the above statements. We have just issued a beautifully illustrated book entitled "How to Grow Tall" which contains information that will surprise you. "Le Billet Doux," Fragonard's $84,000 Masterpiece, and Other Great Works, Coming to America

SOME of Fragonard's most beauteous work is destined to grace the art collection of the United States. At a recent art sale in Paris his celebrated painting, "Le Billet Doux," was purchased for an American at $84,000.

Appreciation of this artist's efforts is shown not only by this enormous price, but by other figures obtained for his canvases as well.

His "La Liseuse," for instance, brought $36,400. It is said that at least two panels by Fragonard will accompany "Le Billet Doux" to this country.

Several fine old tapestries were also found by purchasers at the sale. Two small panels and two insertions in old Gobelins, illustrating Don Quixote after Coypel, brought no less than $40,000.

Lovers of art on this side the Atlantic are deeply interested in these additions to collections here. American galleries are growing, and contain some of the best examples of the greatest masters of painting. It is probable that a number of other gems from the Cronier—the sale of which reached a total of $1,039,606 in two days—are destined for the enrichment of American collections, as they were purchased by brokers known on occasions to represent connoisseurs on this side of the water.

For a long time M. Ernest Cronier's collection was numbered among the best in Paris, but considerable mystery surrounded it, as he rarely allowed it to be inspected. The sale just ended, therefore, was one of the most notable in recent years.

WITHIN the last few years the popularity and value of the works of early French decorative painters have risen remarkably in America.

For that reason the great sum of $84,000 paid for Fragonard's "Le Billet Doux" did not create as much surprise as it might have done had the vogue of the old masters not reached its present high financial plane.

Large amounts have been paid for old paintings. J. Pierpont Morgan gave $500,000, it is said, for Raphael's famous "Madonna of St. Anthony of Padua."

These, however, were, as a rule, larger canvases, containing a number of figures, all worked out with elaborateness of detail.

"Le Billet Doux," or "The Love Letter," on the contrary, has but one human figure—that of a charming young girl, seated at an open casement, stealthily drawing from a bouquet of flowers the letter that contains a tender but forbidden message of love.

While she furtively watches the door, to guard against interruption, the wideawake little spaniel on the seat beside her also seems to realize the importance of caution.

Daintiness, as well as richness of coloring, characterizes the work.

"The dazzling and dominating color trickery of 'Le Billet Doux,'" says a French critic, "is its most striking feature. The picture fairly rustles with living satins, and is almost irritating in its atmosphere of delicious gallantry.

"There is a marked extravagance of color—of the yellow curtain, the blue gown, the green writing table—all this amidst a harmony of amber and gold."

Containing but a single figure also, the canvas "La Liseuse," or "The Reader," which brought $36,400 at the Cronier sale, is characterized by effectiveness of pose, a certain sentiment in treatment, and by vividness of coloring.

"The Reader" appears to have been caught almost by chance by the artist's brush. Reality is there, yet the brightness of the color scheme and the pose make the effect grasp the spectator with great force.

The corsage of the subject is of saffron, while lilac touches oppose it; the red outlines of the book stand out with startling distinctness. Imagination, critics say, in describing this picture, may be more impressive than the real thing.

The demand for Fragonard's work is shown by the fact that, six years ago, "The Reader" was purchased by its recent owner for only $13,000.

Fragonard's life extended from 1732 to 1806, and his best work was done during the luxurious, highly colored period preceding the French Revolution.

His drawings are free and graceful and his coloring charming, although often a frank indelicacy characterized his more ambitious efforts.

For Mme. Du Barry he executed a series of decorative paintings representing the "Loves of the Shepherds," and painted others for Guimard, the celebrated dancer.

Some years ago the Du Barry panels came into possession of J. Pierpont Morgan, who, it is said, gave $1,000,000 for them.

Of Fragonard and his contemporaries, a careful student has had this to say:

"Nowhere and at no period has art reflected life with such intimate joy as in France during the eighteenth century.

"In essence, the entire movement was a return to paganism; in this art there were no hints of pain and sorrow; a playful, feverish reversion to pleasure was the only note sounded.

"Skies were unfailingly blue, fountains plashed and parks and gardens were dotted with shepherds and shepherdesses, beribboned and operatic."

Not alone were the Fragonards in appreciative value at the Cronier sale. A splendid Wa Amants Endormis," which brought in 1861 for $120.

A Gainsborough, purchased only a $1300, fetched $14,300.

One of the Nattier gems, for which paid $9000, brought $14,500 at the teau, secured by him three years ago for vanced in value to $32,000. At the same his La Tour pastels, which cost their $19,000.

Great competition was aroused reached the splendid lot of old tapestries old Gobelin, dealing with the history Quixote, after Coypel, brought $40,000 hammer.

A most effective artistic scheme is this tapestry. From a yellow background tures stand out with lifelike distinctness. lands surrounding them are in natural the pictures themselves bear the tints scarcely dimmed by the passage of so

Into what American galleries the ures from the Cronier collection side the Atlantic will go is something unknown to the public.

Americans of wealth, however, have tated to pay large prices for such desired.

J. Pierpont Morgan probably of ultra-liberal buyers, with his Du Barry panels, at $1,000,000, and the of St. Anthony of Padua," by Raphael, he paid $500,000.

Many of Mr. Morgan's choicest remain at his London gallery, because of tariff prohibitions. These will all come eventually, it is predicted, to form one of the notable collections in the world.

Some years ago Mrs. "Jack" Gardner, known social leader of Boston, purchased brated Botticelli "Madonna" from Prince Italian nobleman.

It was said that she paid $65,000 ing and that when they discovered ian Government officials imposed a amount upon Prince Chigi, who was by pressing financial demands to sell the United States Senator W. A. Clark, tana, has also been buying art objects freely of late years for his New York For $320,000 he secured the collection of Vienna, consisting of forty works and twenty-six pictures of the 1830.

a page out of human life, fresh-written, here under our eyes, only yesterday. A young man, in the full flush of his early manhood, bright, capable, educated, well connected, stands before the altar, and by his side stands a girl in the bloom of her early maidenhood, his playmate in childhood days, both growing up under the shadow of the grand peaks of the Rocky Mountains, both spending happy days by murmuring rills coming down from eternal snows. And they stand there and pledge their troth, one to the other, for better, for worse, till death should part them. He promised to protect and provide for her in sickness and in health. In the first early years of their married life there was little to try the young man in keeping his vows. Prosperity lay all along the path they traveled. Good health and abundant means were theirs. Life smiled upon them from every side, and cloudless skies, sunlit and beautiful, bent over their pretty home here in the city of Los Angeles.

Today that young man is a fugutive from justice, an outcast from society. He has no home, no friends, no wife, no hearthstone, no friendship, no love, no income, no prospects, no happiness. The home that he should have made happy is desolate. The fireside of which he should have been the center of joy is cheerless, is abandoned. The heart that trusted everything to him is wrung with despair, is breaking from grief, and before the happy bride of a few years ago now stretches but a barren, comfortless, cheerless, woeful length of days, with nothing about them to wish for but their end. For what did he sacrifice so much? Not even for the fleshpots of Egypt. He got as little for all this sacrifice of his life, with all its comforts and joys, its hopes and loves, as the prodigal who left his father's home, and ended longing for the husks he was feeding to the stranger's swine. The wretched debauchery of degraded roadhouses, outcast women, the victims of men as faithless as himself, the wild excitement of the racetrack where fortune dangles before the avaricious eyes of its votaries at one minute, to vanish into thin air the next, for these and for nothing more this man violated the laws of society, transgressed the moral laws that should govern the life of every man, and surely wherever he wanders today, homeless, wifeless, penniless, loveless, he knows in the bitterness of what soul there is left in him that "the way of the transgressor is hard."

There is a man, gifted with an intellect far beyond the common, brilliant, versatile, capable. The world opened before him in his younger days avenues by following which he might have reached not merely competency in worldly wealth, but a fortune rivaling that of the largest in the land, and the cleanest and best society in America would have opened its doors gladly to let him in. Today in his old age he lingers among a community where once he was honored, now almost forgotten. But one fault of character was found in the man's makeup—he looked too often upon the wine when it was red. He spent hours, and days, and years, in carousals, which should have been devoted to looking after his business. We are using the singular number, but there is nothing singular about this history. Like the demons that were banished into the body of the swine, their name is Legion who day by day and year by year go down this path to death. As men like these sit and look back for twenty years, and think of what they were and what they might have been, of the friendships they have sacrificed, of the comforts they have cast away, surely they must know how hard the way of the transgressor is.

Some years ago a man charged with murder stood before a Justice of the Peace in this city. Horror of horrors! the blood upon the murderer's hands was the blood of his wife, the blood of the mother of his children. With tears streaming down his face, with a broken voice and trembling knees, he stood before the judge and begged for mercy. His only excuse was: "I was drunk when I did that horrid deed." And the judge shook his head sadly and said: "You plead for your wife and children. You should have thought of them before you drank." Oh! "the way of the transgressor is hard." The purple stream that flows down the arms of the bloodstained cross on Calvary may wash away this guilt, but it will not be today nor tomorrow. In this world, the soul that sinneth, it must die. The iron must enter into the soul of the wrongdoer, and he must learn that the law of life is inexorable, and that "the way of the transgressor is hard."

And by the breezes as they wander by,

  Green forests drop cool shadows on their sides,
Bright blossoms toss their fragrance everywhere,

PRACTICAL ETHICS.

VITAL QUESTION.

IS it true that public taste has so far degenerated as to deem tedious or unprofitable facts dealing with heroic measures or life practices incited by pure and lofty motives? Is it true that our hearts have become so metallic through the worship of the golden calf, that our senses have been so ravished by the "chink, chink" of coin that we have no ear for the narrators of clean moral matter and more subtle if less piquant spiritual experiences?

Is it true that pathetic tales of actual love, of faith, of untiring self-sacrifice and consecrated devotion to high ideals, that items characterizing instances of loyal patriotism are matters too trite and tame for the consideration of a public whose taste demands something of brute-stirring or melodramatic interest, such as a prize fight, a ringing scandal in "high life" or the startling disclosures of looting and bribery of public officials?

Moreover, is it of greater consequence to us whether the Prince of Wales wears or carries his gloves, and whether the Duchess of Marlborough prefers a feathered to a plumeless hat, than the knowledge of a poor, honest washer woman striving night and day to earn sufficient means for the education of a beloved son or daughter?

Is it not a more worthy task to seek out the heroic natures struggling in obscurity and neglect for adequate equipment to join the front ranks in life's battle than to devote much time and space to the enumeration of the most recent extravagances of those whose sole occupation seems to be devising plans whereby to pass in the most costly and ostentatious manner the precious hours and days of Father Time?

It is well that reckless extravagances should be noticed, and betrayal of public trust exposed. The world is entitled to know that such things are—and to take warning! That evils exist, and many forms of evil, should not be kept secret from public inquiry, for ignorance of the bad is no protection for the good.

Indeed, all events comprising this myriad-sided life of ours should rightly be brought to public view. The mischief, however, arises when importance is attached to vicious ephemeral matters out of all proportion to their value to society. Thus the shameless, brazenly seeking publicity, are rewarded for their shamelessness by receiving the coveted notoriety, while those given to a life of froth and bubbles are likewise encouraged by undue prominence to persist in pursuits of senseless frivolity.

In fact, the most hideous crimes are to some extent fostered whenever the perpetrators are placed in a roseate setting.

The demand of the public, it is said, is for features of "human interest." Hence, all this flood of highly-colored and more highly-flavored journalism. But pray is it true that vicious conduct, lurid crimes, pernicious shams, and all sorts of more or less questionable practices are all that may be included under the significant and well-nigh inexhaustible head of "human interest?"

Is it not matter of "human interest" that the widow sacrifices her mite? Yet she is quietly overlooked while charity that entails nor want nor sacrifice is blazened forth by every avenue of the press.

If there be a perversion of public taste, then two factors have been at work which must be dealt with: first, the habitual contemplation of a low-toned order of events, and second, the mode of their presentation.

Just as the native haunt of flies is refuse and putrid matter, so it is perfectly natural for certain classes of newsmongers to be attracted to what is mentally, morally and physically tainted. Nor is the mere turning in this direction to be condemned. For inquiry into the cause and effect of impurity belongs to the reporter of facts as much as to the physician or metaphysician; but, whereas the latter seek to understand the evil that they may the better cope with it, to suggest or provide a remedy, most of the former seek for the sake of finding facts of bad odor, so toying and juggling with the truth as to attract public attention to their own skill or lack of skill without serious intention to point out the merits and demerits of the case in such a way as to exert the most wholesome influence upon the reader's mind.

In the last analysis, the question is and must ever be: what has this fact, this item, this person or this issue contributed or taken from me?

The ultimate concern, therefore, of all who in any way are instrumental in forming the public taste, must be the consideration of the effect of that they offer upon the moral nature of those who receive their quota of news, of story, description or what not.

Is it true that we are suffering from a surfeit of virtue? Are we so good or morally and spiritually perfect, that we no longer need to set forth the highest and best in human life and character, as example for imitation and emulation? Or, is it not true that while the world as a whole is steadily growing better, individuals are as culpable as ever? Hence, lying is not eliminated; stealing is not expurgated from our statutes; murder is frequent, suicide prevalent, and breaches of the marriage contract a rapidly spreading evil. All these facts must be squarely faced and brought to light by public mention.

Likewise reveal and properly illuminate every heroic performance of civic or national duty; let every act of noble philanthropy of individual and social betterments become publicly known; let no edifying instance escape the public eye, but neither let reflections tending to depreciate honorable citizenship or conducing in any way to vitiate the public taste, or lower the tone of public morals emanate from the press.

From Our Own Correspondent.

EDMONTON (Alberta) January, 1905.—I am writing at Edmonton, 400 miles north of the United States boundary. I am on the frontier of the great wheat belt which the Canadians are opening up, and which promises to revolutionize the bread markets of the world. I have been traveling for three weeks through the grain lands, and am now, in a straight line, about as far northwest or Winnipeg as from New York to Chicago. Along that line there is wheat all the way. Lower Manitoba produced more than 40,000,000 bushels last year, and something like 100,000,000 bushels were harvested in Canada.

The size of Canada's new bread basket is hard to define. The area I have described has been thoroughly prospected. Wheat is actually raised in all parts of it, and I hear stories of great wheat lands beyond. Three at the west, where there are trees and patches of thicket scattered over the plains. The spring-wheat region begins with the Red River Valley in Manitoba and runs northwesterly in a great tongue or triangle, spreading out as it goes.

I find much difference in the quality of the land. Some pieces are excellent, others are of a medium grade, and not a few decidedly poor. The country is covered with a network of streams. The mighty Saskatchewan, which compares in size with the Mississippi, flows through the wheat belt from west to east, emptying into Lake Winnipeg, and from there going on through other streams into Hudson's Bay.

I am now writing on the banks of the Saskatchewan. It is navigable for small boats for about a thousand miles, and during the summer it is used largely by settlers. They come here to Edmonton on the railroad and float their effects down to the homesteads, which they have picked out upon the banks. They use flat boats and rafts just as the pioneers did along the Ohio in our early days. I have before me maps which show what homesteads have been taken. The lands are pretty well absorbed on both sides of this river for a distance of a hundred miles due north of Edmonton, on the Peace River, they are raising big crops and flour mills are now grinding away at Fort Vermillion. They receive good prices on account of the high freight rates which prevail throughout the wilds of the Northwest, and the farmers are getting $1.50 per bushel for their grain. Railroad engineers who have been surveying the extensions of the Canadian Northern and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railroads, which are to be built from here across the Rockies, tell me that there is good land all the way from Edmonton to the foothills, a distance of several hundred miles; and that settlers have already begun to penetrate that region.

According to the best Canadian authorities, the wheat belt so far defined comprises a strip extending from east to west across the boundary of Western Minnesota, North Dakota and Montana, measuring 800 or 900 miles, and extending northward a distance equal to that between Philadelphia and Pittsburgh. The men who have lived here longest advance the most roseate views. They believe that the new area has several hundred million acres, estimating it as equal to about eight States as big as Ohio, or six or seven of the size of Pennsylvania or New York. This does not include the vast regions north of where I am writing.

Along the New Railroads.

This mighty farm is being opened up by the railroads. Between 2000 and 3000 miles of new tracks were constructed last year, and three great systems are now pushing their way through it. The old line of the Canadian Pacific goes across it not far above the international boundary, and that company is constructing new branches to the northward. It will build one line almost direct from Winnipeg to Edmonton. The Canadian Northern, which is but little known in the United States, has just completed a trunk line to Edmonton, and it has in addition a road reaching north to Prince Albert, which lies hundreds of miles east of here, on the Saskatchewan River. The Grand Trunk Pacific is building between Winnipeg and Edmonton, going through a rich wheat country some distance north of the two other lines, so that the whole land is humming with railroad possibilities.

How the Wheat Belt Looks.

My first trip across the wheat belt was on the Canadian Pacific. The country is all prairie and plain. In some places the lands are flat, in others rolling. Some of them are like Illinois and some like North Dakota. In Manitoba and the greater part of Saskatchewan you ride for miles through wheat fields with patches of prairie between. A little further west you strike a region somewhat like Montana. It is, in fact, the extension of the Montana semi-arid country, and a part of what was once known as the Great American Desert. In the far West this is devoted to grazing, but they have begun to raise winter wheat even on the dry lands, and their possibilities are not yet defined. A little further westward, just before you reach the foothills of the Rockies, some big irrigation projects are under way, and winter wheat is being raised at points both north and south.

Leaving the United States boundary and traveling northward, the land grows better. This is especially so thousand miles. Many little towns have sprung up. The same is true everywhere along the new railroads, there being something like forty new towns on the Canadian Northern alone. Indeed, the whole wheat belt is peppered with homesteads, although not five per cent. of the good land has been occupied and the greater part of it is yet unbroken.

Expect to Feed the World.

These Canadians are enthusiasts. They look at things through eyes like those of Col. Sellers, and they are expecting to eventually supply not only Canada and Great Britain, but also the United States and other countries with wheat. They say that the United States is growing so that it will soon consume all the grain it can raise, and that our wheat area is already defined. They think also that our wheat crop will grow less from year to year, while theirs must be multiplied by ten or twenty before it reaches its maximum. The world's wheat crop now averages something like 3,000,000,000 bushels. Indeed, it is often much less. Last year Canada raised 100,000,000 bushels on four or five million acres. Among the lowest estimates of the wheat lands are those which put them at 100,000,000 acres. The land here produces almost one-third more than in the United States. It will average at least twenty bushels per acre and this would mean a crop of 2,000,000,000 bushels if the wheat belt should all be cultivated. This is more than two-thirds of all the wheat now raised by man. Our crop of last year was only 684,000,000 bushels, and it was the second largest we have ever raised. I believe the acreage was something like 50,000,000. The average Canadian, however, will tell you that their possible wheat area is far more than 100,000,000 acres, and that Canada can let one-third of its wheat lands lie idle and still control the markets of the world.

How rich the soil is! It is as fat as the Valley of the Nile. In Manitoba, where the land has been used over and over for wheat, the crops are almost twice those of the United States. Our average falls lower and lower. It is now only about thirteen bushels to the acre, while the average in Canada is twenty bushels or more. Much of this new land produces thirty and forty bushels; and about Edmonton the farmers discuss fifty bushels as a possible winter-wheat yield. A good average on the lands well farmed would probably be twenty-five bushels per acre, or almost twice what we are getting in the United States.

While at Winnipeg I had a chat with Mr. Charles N. Bell, who is considered one of the best authorities on wheat raising in the Canadian Northwest. He is the secretary of the Winnipeg Board of Trade and has held this position for years. He came to Manitoba when it was a wilderness and has traveled all over this region again and again. Said he:

"Is there much difference in the wheat land?" I asked.

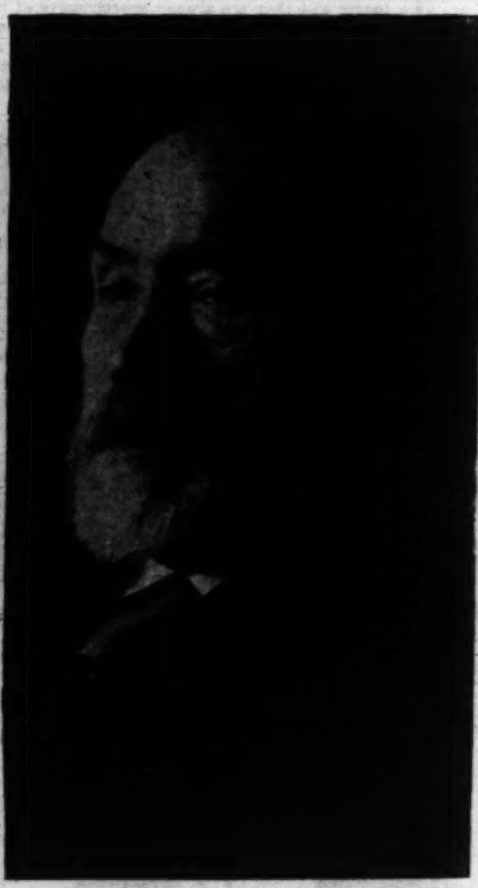
Henry Labouchere.

INTERESTING CAREER OF GREATEST WIT IN PARLIAMENT.

From a Special Correspondent.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—Henry Labouchere's announcement that he will retire from Parliamentary life when Parliament is dissolved for the general election has caused widespread regret similar to that which is felt when a popular stage favorite declares that he will appear no more before the footlights. A fellow of infinite jest, a cynic but a staunch Radical, a hater of hereditary privileges, pomposity and plutocracy; a foe to nepotism and jobbery; a fearless exposer of humbug and rascality, "Labby," as he is familiarly called, has long been one of the most fascinating personalities in British politics. The House of Commons will be duller and drabber without his irreverent wit and irrepressible mockery. He is unique—original—and there is none like him to take his place. Few were aware that he is 74 years old. He doesn't look like it, and he doesn't act like it. That he should seriously plead old age as a ground for his retirement from scenes that have been enlivened by his sprightly presence for more than a quarter of a century sounds like one of his little jokes. He has, however, determined not to outlive his reputation. He hangs up his rapier while yet his eye is keen and his fingers are nimble.



HENRY LABOUCHERE.

In politics, in journalism, in his outlook on life generally, "Labby" is far more American than English. Much of this is doubtless due to the fact he first commenced life on his own hook in the New World. After leaving Cambridge University, where he acquired a little Latin and less Greek, and was distinguished chiefly by his capacity for getting into rows with the dons, he went to Mexico. He rode away from the capital on his own horse and with $50 in his pockets. After a ramble of eighteen months he returned to the city and joined a circus with which he traveled, taking money at the doors, or rather oranges and maze and other equivalents of coin. Tiring of this occupation, he crossed over to the United States and joined a tribe of Chippewa Indians, with whom he lived for six months, hunting buffalo, joining in their work and sport, and playing cards for wampum necklaces.

Then in search of experience of other phases of life in America he went to New York, and, making his headquarters visited most of the cities round about, studying life high and low, getting in and out of scrapes, and acquiring knowledge of things as they are which no university could have taught him. All the while his father, a wealthy man, was urging him to go in for something seriously, and with the aid of parental influence he obtained an appointment as attaché to the British legation at Washington, where he remained for two years. After leaving Washington he continued in the diplomatic service—of which, to do him justice, he has ever since spoken with the sincerest disrespect—for nearly ten years, doing duty—or pretending to do it—at Munich, Frankfort, Dresden, St. Petersburg and Constantinople, seeing everybody, meeting everybody and filling himself with a store of priceless experiences of which he has since made admirable use both as a writer and raconteur. It strengthened the contempt he had acquired in America for the furs and feathers of fossilized old-world officialdom. "How different," he once wrote, "American diplomatists are to the prim old women who represent us abroad, with a staff of half-a-dozen dandies, helping each other to do nothing, and taught to regard all who are not of the craft as their natural enemies." With ceremonial make-believes he has no patience. Humbug, pretentiousness, fussy self-importance, airs, he loathes with quite an American loathing, and finds a truly American glee in exposing them.

It was generally expected that "Labby" would figure in the Gladstone ministry of 1892. Indeed, it is said that Gladstone had slated him for a position in it, but the Queen objected because he criticised royalties just as freely as he did other folks; also, it was reported, because she objected to his wife, who had been an actress. Other matters Gladstone had carried through despite the opposition of his sovereign, but in this particular case the Grand Old Man gave way to the Grand Old Lady, and "Labby" never forgave him for it. Thereafter the barbed shafts of the Parliamentary freebooter's wit were not infrequently aimed against him. Everybody knows that Gladstone played the game of politics in a toplofty fashion, crediting himself with motives far removed from those which animated other participants in the game. "I do not object," said "Labby" once, "to Mr. Gladstone's occasionally having an ace up his sleeve. But I do wish he would not always say that Providence put it there." That is a fair sample of the jests which have made him the most quoted man in English public life.

"Labby" strenuously cultivates the bias of anti-nationalism. He is anti-everything. He would demolish the House of Lords today and disestablish the church tomorrow, and then joyfully tackle the job of substituting a republican form of government for a monarchy. He was and is a rampant pro-Boer, a Home Ruler and a Little Englander. Imperialism and the whole Cecil Rhodes school of thought have always left the stone cold. Everything that ninety Englishmen out of a hundred oppose he favors; everything most of them have set their hearts on he kicks from him in joyous contempt. And yet what he says is always worth listening to. Chiefly because he proves how little common sense and logic have to do with statesmanship.

The methods which have made Truth, the weekly journal which he established in 1874, famous, are essentially American. It has become what it is by virtue of its utter fearlessness in attack. It attacks everything, or it would if they deserved attack. You cannot pick up a number without finding some swindler unmasked, some usurer exposed, some ridiculous War Office regulations turned inside out, some grievance of Tommy Atkins ventilated, some fresh managerial absurdity laid bare, some pseudo-charitable society ridiculed with criticism, some Stock Exchange scandal unraveled and pushed home, some official job held up naked to the public view. And it is all done so well, so freshly and neatly, with so many flashes of humor and above all without any tiresome moralizing that no one wearies of it. Incidentally it has made "Labby" the defendant in more libel suits than any other man living. But he has won all of them—or nearly all of them—and for years his income from Truth has been well over $50,000 a year.

If he hadn't gone in for politics and journalism he might have been a great detective. He has sent scores of scoundrels to jail. No man in Scotland Yard has such a keen scent for rascality or such skill in obtaining proof of it. It may not be generally known in America that it was he who unmasked Pigott, the forged-letter writer who fooled the London Times, and for the publication of which the Times had to pay Parnell heavy damages.

"Labby is an inveterate cigarette smoker. He once brought down upon his head the wrath of the Anti-Cigarette League by declaring in the House of Commons that the seductive habit of cigarette smoking had the same effect as reading the Bible, and that if a man had criminal inclinations he had only to smoke, and the temptation left him.

In only one thing has "Labby" been entirely unsuccessful. He has tried to convince people that he is a heartless cynic and that it is from no desire to do good that so much of his life has been devoted to the exposure of frauds. And people have refused to believe it. Too many kind acts that he has done by stealth have come to light and borne testimony against him. C. B.

The Home of the Elephant. By Frederic J. Haskin.

THE BIG BEAST AT WORK.

HOW HE IS CAPTURED AND TRAINED IN FAR CEYLON.

From Our Own Correspondent.

COLOMBO, December, 1905.—Ceylon is the home of the elephant. These huge beasts, which are such a source of wonder to Young America on circus day, roam wild on both the open plains and in the deep forests of this sea-island paradise. From time immemorial the Singhalese have been taught to capture and train them. Formerly these massive lords of the forests were used only for the processions of kings and religious parades, but they are now trained to work.

They are used for drawing heavy machinery, for clearing new ground, and are even put in harness to do farm work. They are specially useful in building dams across streams and in lifting heavy timbers. The sagacity of a well-trained elephant is truly wonderful. One of them will place big stones in position and gently turn them until their location becomes about as exact as a stone mason would require. In contrast to heavy work like this, another one will be trained to gather fruit, going over the tree carefully with its sensitive trunk, selecting only that fruit which is ripe, and plucking it as neatly as a girl could lift a cherry with her lips.

The Elephant at Home.

However, before entering at too great length into the success of their domestic life, it will be well to observe some of their habits and characteristics while in the jungle. Although its home is generally in a warm and sunny climate, it is not true that the elephant is partial to heat or to light. In Ceylon it shuns the sultry valleys and frequents the elevated plains on the mountainside where the air is often touched with frost. After vainly searching the hot jungle, hunters have discovered herds of them at a height of 8000 feet. No altitude seems too lofty for the elephant if it affords an abundance of water. Contrary to general opinion, this animal always shuns the glare of the sun and spends the day in the densest foliage it can find, dozing and resting in solitude. At night it seeks water to indulge its passion for the bath. It is believed the animal's partiality for shade is caused partly by weak eyes. All hunters agree that it relies more on the ear and the sense of smell than on its sight.

Its inability to see perfectly has been demonstrated on numerous occasions when attacked by hunters. One would suppose that a man in contact with such a huge body was doomed, but experience has shown that the hunter under foot has a better chance of escape than one directly in front of the enraged animal. The attention of an elephant in the act of trampling anything under foot is easily diverted. A noise at one side, or the touch of an overhanging branch, is likely to send the infuriated monster crashing away in a panic.

The absolute terror and cowardice of an elephant when confronted by something it cannot see and does not understand is both pitiful and ludicrous. One instance is cited where a Scotch terrier seized the trunk of a tame elephant in its teeth and instantly brought the huge creature to its knees. When the dog repeated the attack the elephant retreated in a panic and would probably have broken down the building in its frantic efforts to get away if the keeper had not interfered. Their feet are very tender and they are always apprehensive of injury to them, which may be an explanation of their dread of dogs. An illustration of the sensitiveness of an elephant's feet has been observed by a tame animal's indifference when a spear was pointed at his head, followed by shrinking timidity when the same weapon was pointed at its feet.

Habits of the Monsters.

A herd of elephants traveling together is a family, not a company collected by chance or associated together by accident. Each group of animals is governed by a leader who plans their wanderings, reconnoiters in case of alarm, and advances to lead the defense in case of attack. An elephant is capable of concealing its huge bulk in an incredibly small space, and can swiftly traverse the narrowest path provided it renders sure footing. When surprised in the jungle it will make a momentary rush with great noise, followed by sudden and absolute stillness. The inexperienced invariably suppose that the prey has halted to ascertain the cause of alarm, but investigation reveals that the quarry has escaped without making a sound or leaving a trail—an astonishing performance for such a gigantic animal.

Although the elephant is so ponderous it has a gentle disposition. It lives on terms of amity with all animals of the forest, neither regarding them as its foe nor provoking their hostility by attack. It shows no impatience in the company of the elk, the bear or the wild hog, and none of these animals evince any resentment toward the elephant, but let some animal appear in the [illegible] form is not familiar, and a wild rush [illegible]

Caution and curiosity are strong traits in the [illegible] Surveying parties engaged in opening roads [illegible] forest frequently find their wooden tracing [illegible] up over night, the tracks indicating that the [illegible] been gone by elephants. One traveler [illegible] chased by a "rogue" threw down his [illegible] his escape while his massive pursuer [illegible] open the bag and examine its contents. [illegible] observed that a wounded elephant will not [illegible] an intervening hedge, but will run up and [illegible] of an opening. A mere string suspended [illegible] posts will protect a field of grain from elephants, [illegible] imals' fear of pitfalls seeming to make them [illegible] such obstructions, even though the slightest [illegible] remove them. Elephants will never stay in [illegible] ing a thunderstorm, their fear of remaining [illegible] which might be struck by lightning causing [illegible] pair to the open ground.

How the Giants are Caught.

Although elephant shooting was the [illegible] Ceylon in the earlier days, the herds are [illegible] by law, and their wanton destruction for the [illegible] fication of sport has ceased. On account of [illegible] usefulness the capture and training of them [illegible] an adroit science. The old way was to [illegible] pits, but this procedure was so likely to [illegible] tives that a safer method has been devised [illegible] sists of driving them into an inclosure [illegible] The round-up is accomplished by beating [illegible] with drums, guns and torches, the line of [illegible] ally narrowing toward the mouth of the [illegible] which the frightened animals rush with the [illegible] offers an avenue of escape.

Once inside, they are left until their [illegible] ment begins to subside, when a [illegible] mounted on the backs of tame elephants [illegible] sure and proceed to tie the captives [illegible]

Sir Edward Grey.

ENGLAND'S NEW FOREIGN MINISTER A REMARKABLE MAN.

From a Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—Gladstone once said of Sir Edward Grey, the new Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, "I have never remembered so signal a capacity for Parliamentary life and so small a disposition for it." Sir Edward was but a boy of two and twenty when he made his maiden speech in the House of Commons, but Speaker Addington said of his effort: "He went through his performance with an eclat which has not been equaled within my recollection." Yet the debutant himself declared at the time: "I feel convinced of my unfitness for a pursuit which I detest, which interferes with all my private comfort, and which I only sigh for an opportunity of abandoning decidedly and forever." That was twenty-one years ago. He has never gotten over his distaste for politics. He would much rather fish or play tennis than take part in the rough and tumble of a general election.

SIR EDWARD GREY.

He has succeeded in spite of himself. He made an excellent Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs in the last Liberal government of which Lord Rosebery was the head, and his fitness for the higher office, the most important and responsible in the administration, is everywhere conceded. He is particularly well qualified for diplomatic work. He possesses the art of refuting or controverting an opponent's arguments without hurting his feelings. Nor is this due to the employment of ambiguous phrases. He always makes his meaning clear, and says what he thinks in plain, direct Saxon. He never strains after oratorical effect. He does not seek out a political foe's particular raw spot and dash vinegar over it, as Chamberlain, for instance, is so fond of doing. He never wins a cheer from his friends by snatching a loose phrase of an opponent and flipping him in the face with it. Consequently he makes no enemies. It used to be said of him that he hadn't enough of the fighting spirit—enough "devil," as some phrase it—to carry him far in politics, but he has disproved that notion, and many have picked him out as a probable future Prime Minister.

Only forty-three, there is still the spring of youth in his stride. His face is clean-shaven, clear-skinned, with dark eyes and high forehead crowned by a mass of jet-black hair, and a chin and jaw that bespeak inflexibility of will. His character is marked by almost impenetrable repose, which nothing disturbs. It suggests a splendid storage of reserve force. He is an athlete mentally and physically. A disciple of Izaak Walton, he has written a delightful book on fly-fishing. He is a fine performer alike in the cricket field, in the tennis court and behind the rifle or fowling piece.

His inclusion in the Liberal Cabinet as head of the Foreign Office means continuity in England's foreign policy, for he is an Imperialist of the Rosebery school. When Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman was hesitating in his appreciation of the treaty with Japan, and many Radicals were inclined to depreciate the alliance, Sir Edward Grey was the first Liberal statesman to give it his cordial approval. As Foreign Minister he gets $25,000 a year, which is $17,000 more than is paid to an American Cabinet minister, but according to the English standard he is well worth it. He is under no necessity of working for a living, for he has a fine estate of some 2000 acres and a snug fortune besides. As chairman of the Northeastern Railway Company he has shown that he has a good head for business as well as statesmanship. That position brought him in $20,000 a year, and was practically a life appointment. His resignation of it, for the uncertain tenure of a seat in the cabinet may be regarded as a considerable financial sacrifice on his part.

MIGRATIONS OF THE CROW.

AN INTERESTING STUDY OF THE WINTER HABITS OF THE SABLE BIRD.

[Forest and Stream:] While other birds migrate from necessity, the crow, I think, does so from choice. He either goes or stays as he thinks fit. Among the intelligences of the feathered tribe, there are but few that can compare with that of Corvus Americanus. Chapman says he can talk. But if he cannot talk, he can certainly think, and to some purpose. Were it not so, he would have been exterminated long ago, for every man's hand has been against him. To a somber, bodeful appearance he adds the character of a thief, and then his voice!

I think I never saw so many crows around New York as I did last spring in Flatlands during the preparations for sowing. The fields were literally half-black with them. As long as the plowing merely was being done the attitude of the farmers toward them was one of friendly indifference; but the moment the seed was in the ground war was declared. But I would bet a dollar that not half a dozen crows were shot during the season. It must be terribly exasperating to a farmer to find that when he goes out unarmed he can approach the marauders within a few yards before they will stir; but no sooner does he appear with a gun than they are up and away. Or, if he should try to steal on them along a fence, an alarmed "ker-aw, caw!" from a well-posted sentinel will sound long before he gets within shot, and effectually frustrate his design.

From the spring until the fall our sable friend has an easy life of it, food being abundant. And I do not think that he considers the question of migration till the very last moment. Then he may decide to go or stay, as the signs which he knows so well appear to indicate a mild or a hard winter.

I have seen it stated that all our crows, that is, the crows of this latitude, migrate in the fall, and that those we see in the depth of winter come from farther north. This may be generally true, but it is not absolutely so, for a friend of mine who lives in Pennsylvania tells me that a crow with a white feather in his tail, which was familiar to him during the summer, made his appearance several times during the winter.

Whether, however, the crows we see in the depth of winter are our old familiars of the spring and summer or strangers from the north, their work is cut out for them to keep the wolf from the door. For even in mild winters there are certain to be more or less prolonged periods of frost and snow. This is not so bad for little birds like the chickadees, who are satisfied with a few grubs or larvae, but for the big voracious birds like the crows it is a very serious matter indeed. Fortunately for them, however, they have an omnivorous appetite. A chance potato or apple, a dead bird or rodent, a fish cast up by the sea, or anything edible whatever—all is welcome. Then as foragers they are unsurpassed. With the first light of dawn they leave their roost, with a clamorous cawing, and scatter over the country. All day they ply their industrious search. You will see them in ones or twos or threes, never in a hurry, but always vigilant, with one eye open, as it were, for chance provender, and the other for some lurking enemy. In very severe weather they will venture into farmyards to forage. But warily do they move about, avoiding especially anything that looks like a trap.

Only rarely do we come across a dead crow, and then he is pretty sure to be the victim of old age or disease. (His normal age, by the way, is supposed to be near a hundred.) Tough, tough he is, in sooth, and the popular saying, "To eat crow," has a most pointed significance.

When day begins to decline the various members of the roost or rookery start for home. The wayfarer does not fly directly to his accustomed place of rest, but alights on some point of vantage, to reconnoiter presumably. Others do likewise, and when all are assembled (if, perchance, all have escaped the hazards of the day,) at a given signal from some recognized leader, they will arise, circle noisily over the roost, and gradually drop down upon it. For a while the cawing is kept up, and then funereal silence succeeds. Every bird has found his perch, and ruffling his feathers, settles down to pass the winter night.

WITCHCRAFT AMONG THE ZULUS.

H. C. McDonald, in his report, shows how suspicious men of Zulu descent still are.

"About 5000 people were here last Friday, and the 'indaba' (discussion) lasting until after sundown, most of them were compelled to sleep here," he says. "Having no food for their entertainment, I hurriedly purchased two bulls, which I gave the chiefs. Knowing their superstitions, I did not kill the animals, but allowed them to do so. With the exception of Mzukuzuku, however, none of them would touch the meat. They thought I might have bewitched the animals, and that by partaking of the meat they would lose all influence with their people and themselves come under the influence of the Boma."

It is often discovered that witchcraft has been practiced as a cloak to cover and means to commit some abominable crime. A case in point, tried in the Lilongwe court, proved that a native woman killed by a lion had been partly eaten by another native who was accused of impersonating the lion! The native in question confessed freely that he had eaten of the woman's dead body, the excuse being that he had purchased from a "witch doctor," a native local medico, a medicine which enabled him to turn into a lion at will—in other words, to indulge in cannibalism in its lowest form as the mood took him.—[London Telegraph.

Irish Industries.

UPS-AND DOWNS IN IRELAND DURING PAST CENTURY.

By a Special Contributor.

ONE hears from many quarters a great deal of half-humorous, half-severe comments upon the shiftlessness of the Irish. Probably no greater injustice was ever done to any people. There is no shiftlessness about the virile, energetic, Celtic character where there is hope of accomplishment to follow earnest, intelligently-directed effort. There is undoubtedly impatience which breaks out and runs over all limits in many directions, when earnestly-applied effort, tried over and over again, only results in bitter disappointment.

Any one who remembers Ireland fifty or sixty years ago will treasure in his memory pictures of the little mill by the stream. It was nearly always buried in a pretty dell, into which a generous stream came down from some higher elevation. The mill was old-fashioned in the extreme. It nestled where the alders and sycamores grew rank, and where the undergrowth was tangled into a thick mat, among whose flowers the bee hummed in the early days of summer and which the nightingale made vocal by night, while the moonbeams fell soft and silvery on the pond above the mill. Tennyson is not the only poet of England and other portions of the United Kingdom who turned his lays to sing of the mill, the mill pond, the mill stream, the miller, or his daughter. These old mills were of the most primitive character. The grinding was done between two millstones, which were made by cutting out carefully many sections of a circle, cementing them together and binding them with a thick iron band. Grooves were cut from the center to the circumference. The lower stone was stationary, the upper one made to revolve by power from the water wheel, turned by the stream. The hopper stood over the center of the stone, and the grinding was done by the grain working out toward the periphery. All day long the water ran from the dam, the wheel turned lazily around, and "tick-tack went the mill."

The farmers from the country around brought their grain of various kinds to the mill, and the miller usually took his pay in toll, a certain percentage of the weight of cereal brought. In due time the farmer returned and took back with him the ground grain and by-products that were coming to him. This is all a thing of the past. No more such mills are found in Ireland. It was an individual industry. The mill site, the mill, and its equipment belonged to the miller, and he usually performed all the work around his mill, with such help as he might obtain from his family.

There were thousands of these mills in the island fifty years ago, and it no doubt will be a surprise to many to learn that half a century ago Ireland not only ground wheat enough for her own use, but was an exporter of considerable quantities of wheat flour to England. It probably would be a disappointing inquiry to try to learn how many of these little mills there were in those days. At the present time there are nearly 1400 grist mills of one capacity or another in the island, but although the mills of the present day are very much larger in their capacity than those of the elder time, they fail to grind enough wheat and flour for home consumption, large quantities of foreign flour and meals being imported annually at the various ports of the country. The putting out of commission of these thousands of little grist mills entailed an enormous loss in the capital devoted to Irish industries. The mill site, with its stream and dam, the mill and its equipment, with its trade built up during generations past, was a very valuable asset. With the introduction of modern milling methods, this property is, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, a total loss. The aggregate sum thus lost to the Irish people would make an exceedingly large figure.

The picture attempted above of the old mill by the stream is no doubt a thing unknown to the eyes of nearly all the present generation. Milling in Ireland, as well as in America, is now done almost entirely by the steel-roller process. Doubtless many will be surprised to learn that this invention, generally assumed to be American, has come to America, as well as Western Europe, from Buda Pest. The Hungarian millers first substituted this progressive process of milling by a series of steel rollers, the first pair merely cracking the grain, which goes on through one pair after another, to the number of four, five, or six pairs of rollers, at each grinding, the flour becoming finer and the refuse matter being gradually eliminated.

The introduction of these steel-roller mills involved the investment of much capital to erect large establishments, which, while doing the work of a score of the little mills of the individual millers by the stream in the dell, rendered it impossible for the old-fashioned miller to remain in business. He had to secure some means of earning a livelihood. With this came the competition of the great mills of America, established in the heart of immense regions producing the best wheat in the world. The freight from the Atlantic seaboard in America to Cork or Dublin has generally been so extremely low as to scarcely increase the cost of the flour and meal laid down in the British Isles. It has been at times carried almost as ballast. The wheat grown in Ireland is soft and spongy, owing to the dampness of the climate, and cannot be made to compete with the dry, flinty wheat of the great Northwestern plains of the United States and Canada. Later came the Argentine wheat and that of Australia, and now even India and South Africa have added their great streams of breadstuffs to those of the United States and Russia, on which Western Europe formerly depended for this kind of food.

North of Ireland Shirtmaking.

If the milling industry in Ireland has been a great loss in its decadence to the people of the island, flax and all its products present a better side of the picture. In a former article the linen industry was gone into extensively, but the Irish, particularly those of the northern counties, are too industrious, too shrewd, and too energetic, to let all the products of their linen looms go out of the island in the condition of raw cloth. Importing large quantities of cotton cloths from England and Scotland, and uniting to this their own linen cloths, shirtmaking and kindred branches of industry flourish most encouragingly in places like Londonderry, Donegal, and Tyrone. Derry City is the capital of the shirtmaking industry, and supplies the trade of the United Kingdom, of the continent of Europe, of the English colonies, and indeed of the world, with millions of shirts, collars, cuffs, and kindred articles of apparel. There are as many as 18,000 persons employed every day of the year in the Derry shirt factories. The manufacturers complain that it is difficult to get a sufficient number of workers. One of the difficulties is that four-fifths of those engaged in this industry are women and girls. The men are for the most part engaged in shipbuilding and allied trades, while the women and girls work in the linen factories and shirt factories. To be sure, the wages are not very high. The different levels of the brewery are united by a little railroad of 22-inch gauge, and fifteen tiny steam engines are used to haul trucks loaded with casks, barley, other raw material, and finished products to different parts of the establishment. There is a spiral tunnel like the St. Gotthard railway on a small scale, which enables them to run material from one level to another. There are engineers, machinists, farriers, carpenters, joiners, braziers, plumbers, painters, and artisans of many other kinds, each in their departments for repairing the machinery and doing all the other branches of work in the brewery. In the cooperage plant 50,000 casks are made in a single year. There is one great building where there is an immense printing plant with the costliest machinery employed and the finest workmen, to turn out labels and other printing for the establishment. In this printing office are said to be printed 1,000,000 labels a day. There is a branch postoffice adjoining the business office of the establishment, and there the brewery alone mails 300,000 letters in a year. The cost of postage to the establishment is $20,000 a year. There is a laboratory where every process of brewing is tested, tried, and experimented on by the most carefully-educated chemists, in order to find improved methods of brewing. There is an immense electrical installation, whose total power is 800 units, and more was to be added during the past summer.

There are similar breweries in Ireland, and many others also smaller than this in various parts of the island, one of the largest being in Cork.

The Distilling Industry.

In 1861 the number of gallons of spirits distilled in England was 7,211,822; in Scotland, 11,211,648; in Ireland, 4,801,115. In 1901 there were distilled in England 12,602,311 gallons; in Scotland, 30,196,016; and in Ireland, 14,221,520. In the various warehouses in the United Kingdom, on the 31st of March, 1900, there were stored 157,169,968 gallons of spirits. During that year the production, as shown above, was 57,020,847 gallons, giving a total to be accounted for of 214,190,815 gallons. The disposition of this was as follows: Delivered for home consumption, 36,703,728 gallons; exported, 5,773,718; used for fortifying wines for ships, etc., 309,166; methylated, 5,070,713; deficiency allowed, 4,830,661; leaving a balance in the warehouses on the 31st of March, 1901, of 161,802,829 gallons of distilled spirits.

Of course, no account is taken here of the illicit distillation, a considerable amount of which is carried on, especially in Ireland. The methods of these moonshiners are very cunning. The mountaineer loads a sack of barley on a donkey, and jogs along very innocently up into some "bog." When nobody is looking, he innocently dumps his sack of barley into some very damp hole, and jogs away with his donkey. In due time, when the grain has germinated properly, he fishes it out and carries it away to some mountain pass, where, turning away from the path, he spreads it out upon a flat rock to kiln-dry in the sun. When this process is accomplished and he is ready with his malt to still, he sets up his twisted gun barrel in some lonely nook of the mountain and proceeds to manufacture "poteen." His danger lurks in the smoke which his fire must send up, as a warning index to the alert excise man. Every kind of trick is practiced in order to deceive the wary eye of the officer. The cunningest trick perhaps the wittiest Irishman ever played was to rent a room in a building immediately adjoining the police station. A common chimney served the officer of the police and the room of the illicit distiller. He ran his smoke pipe into the flue used by the police on the other side of the wall, and proceeded in his illicit enterprise, and who could tell where the smoke came from?

The distilling process, as carried on in Ireland today, takes a wide range as to antiquated methods and modern improvements. Some of the distilleries are of the most advanced types, and some of them vary from those of a hundred years ago or longer only in their size. The old "pots-still" method is still in vogue in some of the biggest distilleries in the island, and, strange to say, the product is in every respect fully up in all excellence to that coming from the most modern establishments. Like everything else in Ireland, distilling has been followed by the same family, father to son, from anywhere from three to ten generations. Those who have been engaged all their lifetime in this business and who derived their knowledge from their fathers before them, insist that there is, after all, just one paramount element in the making of whisky, and that element is time.

James Talbot Power, at the present time the head of the great distilling company, the Sir John Power Co., said to the writer: "You cannot make good whisky in three years. You may, by manipulation and chemical process, develop a fairly palatable and good beverage; but you cannot have the smoothness, the bouquet, nor the wholesomeness of our whisky, in which seven years is the least time taken to bring it to maturity. It is the essential oils in the liquor that require time to bring out, to mellow, and to eliminate the objectionable qualities, that make fine whisky. We never let a barrel go out of our establishment under seven years from the time it comes from the still." Like the Guinness Brewery this distillery of the Powers is an establishment worthy of several days' study. It is of immense magnitude, the plant is of the finest construction of its kind, the semi-basements in which the whisky is stored during the seven years in which it comes to maturity, if in a continuous line would reach several miles, and if the barrels were laid side by side in one long line they would reach many miles. The floors along the alleys between the great piles of hogsheads are all covered a foot thick with moss from the peat bogs. The temperature in these cellars is kept to within two or three degrees of the same point night and day, summer and winter, all through the year. In warm, dry weather this moss is kept carefully sprinkled with water, in order to absorb the high temperature and to give off a continual vapor, keeping the atmosphere not only at the same temperature, but at the same degree of saturation.

But while Ireland produces 14,000,000 gallons of ardent spirits a year, it is far from consuming any such quantity. Father Matthew's crusade of fifty or sixty years ago actually lowered the consumption of spirits in Ireland 50 per cent., and it has never risen as high as before this earnest priest did his good work among the rural population of Ireland. The amount of spirits consumed per annum at the present time is set down at a little over 4,000,000 gallons, or one-third of the total distilled in the island. It amounts at the present time to about nine-tenths of a gallon per capita for the whole island. No doubt one reason for the lower consumption of spirits is the increase in taxation. There has been within the last fifty years an increase of 300 per cent. in the taxation of spirits, with an increase of only 50 per cent. in the taxation of beer, and a decrease of 75 per cent. in the taxation on tea. The consumption of spirits per capita in Ireland varies very little from that of the whole United Kingdom, but the consumption of beer in Ireland is only about 50 per cent. of that for the entire kingdom.

An Unmerited Reputation.

From figures given above, all drawn from government reports and from personal observation, it seems to me that the reputation of the Irish for drunkenness is an unmerited one. Many of them undoubtedly drink to excess. This is so in almost every country of the earth. There is too little restraint exercised in Ireland over the liquor traffic, and this is another observation of very wide application. I stood in the door of my little hotel, in the old village of Killarney, and in the little stretch of crooked street reaching perhaps two city blocks I counted the unlucky number of thirteen places where liquor is sold; and yet, in just thirty-one days in Ireland, reaching from Belfast in the north through Dublin, nearly the whole county of Dublin, County Wicklow, through Kildare and down by Limerick to the Lakes of Killarney in Kerry, to Cork, Queenstown, going about in all parts of the cities, among all classes of people, the lowest in each town that we visited, in the entire month of May, we did not encounter ten persons on the streets under the slightest influence of liquor, and among the whole number there were but two women. How does the Irishman get his reputation if he does not deserve it? I think from the effervescent quality of his nature. If the Frenchman gets a drop too much, he relieves his feelings in a song. The Italian does the same thing. The average German is made more stolid, and the same is true of the Hollander and Belgian. The Scotchman with a drop of warmth under his belt is said to become unduly amorous. The English temperament is increased in its phlegmatic quality. "In vino veritas" is an old saw, so old and so much used that its teeth are almost all worn off. There is no doubt the Irishman is a fighter. When one of them was asked what he considered happiness, he said: "A row in Dublin;" and so, while other nationalities are inclined to become jovial or stupid under the influence of too much liquor, Paddy's bellicose disposition rises to its best, and one Irishman seems to be, when "under the influence" a good deal like a coyote in a cañon on a dark night. He can make noise for ten ordinary people. But really, it is my sincere opinion that he is not more given to undue indulgence in the use of ardent spirits than perhaps any of his brethren of other nationalities of Western Europe, and perhaps I might include America. GOOD-BY, SWEET DAY.

Good-by, sweet day, good-by!
I have so loved thee, but I cannot hold thee,
Departing like a dream the shadows fold thee;
Slowly thy perfect beauty fades away:
Good-by, sweet day!

Good-by, sweet day, good-by!
Dear were thy golden hours of tranquil splendor,
Sadly thou yieldest to the evening tender
Who wert so fair from thy first morning ray;
Good-by, sweet day!

Good-by, sweet day, good-by!
Thy glow and charm, thy smiles and tones and glances,
Vanish at last, and solemn night advances;
Ah, couldst thou yet a little longer stay!
Good-by, sweet day!

Good-by, sweet day, good-by!
All thy rich gifts my grateful heart remembers,
The while I watch thy sunset's smouldering embers
Die in the west beneath the twilight gray.
Good-by, sweet day!

A SONG.

All the laughter and the play
Vanish when you go away,
All the sorrow and the pain
Linger till you come again.

All the fever and the strife,
All the fretful things of life
Fly before the songs you sing;
I live upon the joys you bring.

Go not, Love, for life drifts fast;
May-time days are soonest past;
Winter hath but hoarded cheer;
Stay! I need you always, dear.

ISLAND OF FERNANDO DE NORONHA AND STATE OF PERNAMBUCO.

From a Special Correspondent.

BUENOS AYRES, Dec. 4.—To the voyageur from Europe the first glimpse of South America in the island of Fernando de Noronha, sighted after an unbroken four days from Las Palmas or St. Vincent, is neither inspiring in itself nor prophetic as regards the appearance of the continent proper. This dreary rock, or group of rocks, though only a degree or two from the equator and in the midst of the diurnal afternoon rain belt, is so completely destitute of soil that the whipped-out tops of some half a dozen cocoanut palms are the only points of verdure to be observed from the deck of the steamer. The cable-station people, however, are said to have a small vegetable garden made out of earth that was brought over from Pernambuco when the station was established. This precious possession is walled in with buttresses of Portland cement to prevent its valuable contents from being sluiced into the sea. The servant entering after vegetables is made to wipe his feet with scrupulous particularity on coming out, while other precautions of safety taken suggest the government mint rather than the truck patch.

Besides the cable station, this desolate rock is utilized by the state of Pernambuco as a convict settlement. It is peculiarly well fitted for the latter purpose, an unusual combination of cross currents in the vicinity throwing a heavy surf on both the windward and leeward shores that makes it most hazardous to leave the island in a small boat from any other point than the easily-guarded quay.

My guide book says that the "life of a convict here, from all accounts, seems a most happy one, as he is allowed to have his own plot of land to cultivate, and enjoys comparative freedom." I can't quite make out whether the guide book is attempting a joke or is simply ill-informed. Cultivating a piece of ground on Fernando de Noronha would be nothing more nor less than the identical task set our chain gangs in the States, i.e., breaking rocks; and "comparative freedom" enjoyed in the pursuit of this pastime must certainly lose much of its flavor. For myself, I utterly fail to understand how 500 men can be kept in the place for a year at a stretch without making it necessary to subdivide the island into padded cells to prevent the occupants beating themselves to pieces upon the rocks when their surroundings—or lack of surroundings—begin to get upon their nerves. If the purser of my steamer can be trusted—I have noted that the purser is the usual purveyor of the "fact-is-stranger-than-fiction" kind of stories aboard ship—some of them do lose their reason.

That worthy relates a story of a half-caste Brazilian and negro who was sent to Fernando from one of the rubber-growing provinces to serve a life sentence for murder. One morning, after he had been in prison a month or two, he eluded his guard and ran away to the west end of the island, where there is a huge grotto, plainly visible from the steamer, which runs through to the windward shore. This passage he traversed by wading and swimming, sustaining a severe lot of contusions from the rocks, to emerge upon the other side imagining himself a free man. Thereafter he never missed an opportunity to repeat the performance, and whereas he was most sullen and vicious on the prison side of the island, on the other he was always in the highest of spirits, never failing to invite the guards sent to bring him back—whom he imagined to be his guests—to sit down with him at a banquet of clams and seaweed. He was drowned less than a year ago while endeavoring to swim the subterranean passage in a storm.

The low-lying coast of South America proper lies abeam to the west on the morning after sighting Fernando de Noronha, and before noon the steamer, without altering her course substantially, comes to anchor in the rough and open roadstead of Pernambuco. The beautifully picturesque suburb of Olinda, fairly muffled in tropical verdure, strikes pleasantly upon the eye to the north, but the city itself, built on ground almost perfectly level, presents to the observer on shipboard only a skyline of its monotonously white water front buildings, broken here and there by the dome or spire of a cathedral. Your steamer friends who are getting off here tell you hopefully that the city is "low but healthy." You agree with them in regard to its being low and reserve your decision about the healthfulness until you can see some figures on the subject, when you learn that its sanitary showing is merely good in comparison with the other Brazilian cities, in any of which a death rate that would be considered appalling in a city of England or the States is referred to as a "trifling mortality."

Pernambuco, which has a population something in excess of 200,000, is the first and most northerly port of call in South America for the steamers from Europe. Of the four other important Brazilian ports, only Para, the great rubber town, at the mouth of the Amazon, lies nearer the equator. Bahia, which leads all South American cities in tobacco export, Rio, famous for its harbor and general trade, and Santos, the greatest coffee shipping port in the world, follow each other to the south in the order named. From these five ports during the four centuries that have elapsed since the discovery of Brazil by the Portuguese navigator, Pedro Alvarez Cabral, has come the greatest part of the world's supply of coffee, spices, cocoa and rubber, the East and West Indies, Central America and, more recently, tropical Africa, furnishing most of the remainder. The trade of today is largely confined to these same products, chiefly through the apparent impossibility of maintaining in the country a laboring class numerous and vigorous enough to undertake the growing of crops that require more assiduous attention.

The beach. at Pernambuco.

The periphery of harbor craft that surround the mail steamer in Pernambuco, while not so large as in many other places, more than makes up in variety what it lacks in size. It is composed of every thing from "jangadas," or native catamarans, to gasoline launches and steam tenders. The more valuable consignments are sent ashore in the tenders, while the heavy stuff is lowered into lighters, scows and barges. These latter are [illegible] If you're a man, it's Johnny; if a woman, Sally. The derivation of Johnny is easy enough, but Sally I can't quite account for unless it's from the chorus of some old sailors' song. One of the best things I saw in [illegible] was the stare with which the wife of the [illegible] British Minister to one of the republics, a woman with a superabundance of a starchy kind of dignity in her manner, transfixed a droll-eyed lump of black impertinence [illegible] who hailed her with "H'lo Sally, 'buya 'nana" [illegible])

Beyond the native types and turnouts there is nothing of particular interest in the city proper of Pernambuco. The streets are very narrow and the huge four and six-[illegible] bullock drays laden with raw sugar furnish occasional diversions when they come along by forcing all the lighter traffic onto the sidewalks. I asked what happened when two drays met, half anticipating that it would turn out an unsolved problem of the nature of the [illegible] body encountering the immovable body. I was quite promptly told, however, that the drivers first swear violently at one another and then get down on the pavement between the drays and play a game of cards to decide which shall be the one to unyoke and haul out his equipage backward.

Most amusing, too, are the "carryall" arrangements rigged up on the backs of their ponies by which certain of the street vendors give mobility to their stock in trade. These merchants are of a different class than the [illegible] of the Linguetta to whom I have referred, most of them having begun life as peddlers of truck garden produce of their own raising. At the beginning of their careers they will appear upon the streets with nothing in the panniers that are swung upon either side of their diminutive ponies but a variety of fruit and vegetables and a few parrots, chickens and ducks. Coconuts [illegible] may be added next, and perhaps a small patent [illegible] and a box of sweetmeats. Pipes and tobacco appear early, also, while continued prosperity allows the addition of light dry goods and stationery, with hardware represented by a bag of pots, [illegible], files, awls, graters and the like. If the merchant is ambitious, at this stage he may launch into the [illegible] y venta trade, the Spanish terms for second-hand [illegible]. There is no classifying the branches of the business after that, for the faithful pony may be carrying anything from a glass box of pet snakes to rocking chairs, cradles and grindstones. The skill displayed by the proprietor in fishing out without disturbing the [illegible] single article you may call upon him for is most [illegible], as is also his successful solution of the problem of carrying so much dead weight without crushing [illegible] out of his live weight, not excepting the pony. [illegible] mishap I observed to one of these traveling department stores was the result of a collision with a tram. [illegible] I came upon the scene the proprietor was taking advantage of the crowd that had gathered to hold a special liquidation sale of the remnants, while his wife and [illegible] woman were busy licking the contents of a jug [illegible] off the body of the family baby, who had evidently been a passenger in the grocery department at [illegible] of the accident.

[illegible] language of Brazil is somewhat mixed, but inclines to Portuguese rather than Spanish. The money, [illegible] in the appalling denominations of the former [illegible], and your first experience with it is sure to make [illegible] on you, notwithstanding the fact that this money has been the subject of jest for every traveler [illegible] Portugal since the time that Mark Twain discovered the funny side of a man's being charged a few thousand [illegible], more or less, for his breakfast. But even foregoing the temptation to ask if your picture postcard is dispatched by special messenger when you are [illegible] a hundred reis for its stamp is no less than that [illegible] of the conductor if he is chartering you a private [illegible] when he asks you the same sum for a ride of [illegible]. One hundred reis is worth something less than [illegible] gold.

[illegible] Anglo-Saxon population of Pernambuco is not [illegible] what there is of it mostly English. In the divine ordering of things it could not have been [illegible] that the Britisher should be a colonizer of the [illegible] for the simple fact that the most of his fixed [illegible] customs, however well they may be suited [illegible] chill island, are so ill-calculated to meet the [illegible] of life in those calid latitudes where the sun [illegible] greater part of the year in tracing its course [illegible] spirals along the zenith. The German in the [illegible] down his beer-drinking to a modest bottle [illegible] day, and the Frenchman takes weak wine and [illegible] with his meals, tranquillizing his stomach afterward with a slowly-sipped glass of absinthe and [illegible]. Meat he gives up almost entirely, partaking [illegible] of fish, fruit and various native dishes in[illegible], never having been much "addicted"—I use [illegible] a German once employed in speaking to me on [illegible] in question—to outdoor sports, he does not [illegible] of exhausting himself physically under a [illegible] sun. Result—at the end of ten years a man [illegible] but a tan and a fortune to show that he has [illegible] the tropics, able to go home, take up his old [illegible] he left off and live to a happy and contented old age.

[illegible] to the Britisher under the same conditions. [illegible] tropical to the extent of wearing duck or [illegible], canvas shoes and a pith helmet, and remains English to the extent of three or four hearty [illegible] a beef and mutton base per day, supplemented [illegible] bottles of heady ale or stout. Then there are [illegible] of cake of fruit and spices, heavy as ballast, [illegible] eaten with the cup—many times refilled—[illegible] tea, and finally, before, after and during [illegible], countless, continuous, consecutive, runs [illegible] symbol of British occupancy that flows wherever the [illegible] Jack flutters—the brandy and soda. Moreover, the Britisher in the tropics still professes to be [illegible] for his sport, and his tennis, polo and, [illegible] rowing he goes in for as vigorously as at home. When he tires, as happens very quickly in the humid heat, he has recourse again to the brandy and soda, or, worse still, to his panacea for all ills of the flesh—and spirit, I believe, as well—Scotch whisky—"neat." And at the end of ten years—if he avoids so long the neatly-smoothed mound under the palm tree—he is invalided home to London, a thin, sickly, sallow-faced old-young man, with a chest all too narrow for the orders that decorate it, whose derelictions for the rest of his short life his friends charitably refer to as due to "that beastly liver that he brought home from the tropics."

That the Britisher wins out as a coloniser where the thorough, hardworking German and tactful but easy-going Frenchman fail, that he is, in fact, the only successful colonizer in the world, is due to his bulldog determination and the exercise of the innate sense of fairness of the true sportsman, a success that is all the more creditable, accomplished, as it is, in the face of his glaring inadaptability.

As regards sport and drinking, the British inhabitants of Pernambuco are no exceptions to the general rule one formulates from contact with their brethren in Hongkong, Singapore, Fiji and other tropical "Outposts of Empire." I gave up an afternoon I had planned to spend among the shipping to accompany an Anglo-Brazilian acquaintance out for "a bit of a knock to get up a thirst, old chap," at the local tennis club. Play opened up at 3 o'clock. The sun had lacked only the fraction of a degree of standing directly overhead at noon, and the "bit of a knock" was certainly all that was claimed for it as a thirst-producer. I withdrew after a few games, but the others pegged sullenly away at it till 4, stopping at the end of each set for liquid encouragement. Then there was an interval of half an hour for afternoon tea, after which the periods of play became shorter, the big tumblers of Scotch and soda coming out almost every game. At 5 the players' faces looked pinched and drawn, but soberly carrying enough whisky to make an ordinary man blind drunk, they still battled, and at 5:30, when I took my leave, they were drinking tea again, while two of them were planning to get away a half-hour earlier the next day in order to have a single before the rest arrived. This may be the spirit that wins empires, but it somehow seems to me that a "Society for the Prevention of Man's Cruelty to Himself" would not come entirely amiss in connection with it.

A Riot Recalled.

CHINESE MASSACRE IN LOS ANGELES THIRTY-FOUR YEARS AGO.

By a Special Contributor.

IN view of the controversy going on over the Chinese Exclusion Act and the consequent boycott of American products in the Chinese empire, and all other perplexing questions growing out of our dealings and relations with China and the Chinese, anything relating to that Oriental nation or the people thereof becomes of interest to every student of history and to every thinking mind, especially on this Coast, where we have had a long and intimate acquaintance with this quaint and interesting people.

Very few are living today who witnessed the bloody scenes of November, 1871, when the little pueblo of Los Angeles was stirred from center to circumference over what was known as the Chinese riots. Those who did actively participate in the exciting incidents of that November night will not readily forget the events that happened between the hours of 7 and 11 o'clock.

For several weeks prior to the massacre, a bitter feud had existed between two rival Chinese companies over the possession of a Chinese woman. By strategy, and through the process of the courts, her possession rapidly changed from one to the other, with ever-increasing hostility from heavily-armed Chinamen. Under process of court she was taken by the Sheriff from one faction, placed in a hack and driven from the old Coronel building at the head of Los Angeles street, up Main street to the jail, then situated where the People's Store now is. The excited warring factions were running on either side of the rapidly driven hack, with hands in the bosoms of their blouses, clutching revolvers ready for shooting.

At this time the affair had reached such a state that the streets were deemed not safe. About 6 o'clock in the evening, Deputy Sheriff Jesus Bilderam, attempting to enter the Coronel building (where some Chinese had assembled) for the purpose of serving some legal papers, was resisted; so, aided by Robert Thompson, they two forced open the door and were immediately surrounded by a superior force who opened fire with revolvers, wounding Jesus Bilderam and killing Robert Thompson. Then, as a Chinese afterwards expressed it, "Hellee bloke loze." The news rapidly spread through the streets and saloons and by 7 o'clock an excited, angry mob, armed with revolvers, to the number of some hundreds, had collected around the Coronel building, rapidly firing into its doors and windows. The Coronel building was situated on the Plaza, bounded by Los Angeles street, Nigger alley, and the alley near where the Pico House stands.

Most of the facts were elicited from the witnesses who testified at a subsequent trial, for murder of some of the rioters, before Judge R. M. Widney, Judge of the District Court of this State. Judge Widney relates some very exciting personal experiences of that evening and the part taken by Dr. W. W. Widney and other pioneers well known to the people of Los Angeles. In relating this experience Judge Widney said:

"About 7 p.m, I was returning from my residence to my office in the Coronel block to finish some work, and while passing on Main street where the Bullard block now stands, someone called across the street, 'Widney, they are killing all of the Chinese.' 'It is a fact that the Chinese have shot Bilderam and killed Bob Thompson. Don't you hear the boys shooting the Chinese?' The sound of the fusillade reached my ears, but being incredulous, at first I believed it only fire crackers. I hurried to my office to get my revolver, but on opening my drawer I found the pistol gone. Hurrying down to the Arcadia block, I was informed by Mr. Fray that the Law and Order Men were not with the rioters. Greatly relieved by this piece of news, I ordered Mr. Fray to give the alarm emergency call. In a moment a score of the committee reported, but with no arms. I requested them to scatter through the crowd and gather as many members as possible, and report back to me. This effort added but a few to our number, and all were without arms. During this time the building was surrounded on all sides by rioters firing into the building, and others on the roof cutting through, and firing down into the Chinese. A chilling cry of success rose from the mob. 'They have broken into the building.' 'They are dragging out the Chinamen!' 'They are taking them to hang at Soller's Shop!' was heard from every side."

"Forty or fifty rioters, having two Chinamen and a Chinese boy about fourteen years old, were passing up Arcadia street, toward Main. Demanding of these what they were going to do with these Chinamen, 'Taking them to jail,' was the reply. Along Main street they went to Temple street, followed by several thousand people, but turned up Temple street. I knew what that meant, as they were going toward a corral with a large double gate, with heavy cross beams from the top of high posts. 'This is not the way to the jail,' I said to the leader. 'Go to h—l with the jail; we're going to hang them.' I tried to get a revolver, but could get none. By this time they had gotten to the gate, and, throwing a rope over the beam, began to make the noose. I again tried to save the boy, but the drunken brutes threatened death to any one interfering, and I was forced to give it up. They hung these three Chinamen. I should have taken my chance of rescuing these poor men if I could have gotten a revolver. Without it, I could do nothing.

"In front of the Downey block, the rioters had another Chinaman, leading him to a place of execution. Seeing the contemplated massacre of scores of human beings, many of whom were, of course, innocent, I felt the time had come when, as a citizen, I must cast life aside, and act. 'Let us stop this hanging,' I cried, and John Lazarovitch answered, 'Lead out, and we will follow you.' We started into the center of the group of rioters and tried to pull the Chinaman from them. A large, desperate-looking fellow had his revolver at Lazarovitch's head, threatening to shoot if he did not let go the Chinaman. At this moment a voice said, in my ear, 'Do you want a revolver, Robert?' I instantly recognized my brother's voice, and seized the revolver he handed me, at the same time asking him if he had another. 'Stand back of me, and if any one attempts to shoot me in the back, drop him.' Seizing the ruffian by the coat with my left hand, I turned him around and facing him with my revolver pointed at his heart, I cried, 'Let go and get out, or I'll kill you!' He was white as a ghost, but let go the Chinaman, and crossed the street, and we took the Chinaman to jail for safe keeping.

"Again and again we took Chinamen from the mob and landed them in jail on that fearful night. Again and again we faced the dangerous mob with cocked revolvers and prevented them from killing more Chinamen. In this manner we rescued about twenty-two Chinamen and placed them safely in jail. About eighteen Chinamen in all were killed that night and the balance of the Chinese population were saved only by the greatest effort on the part of the committee."

In other parts of the city there were some incidents which would baffle the intelligence of any person who tried to find reasons for some of the actions of the mob. They had seized a young Chinaman and were roughly hustling him along to a place of execution when they were interrupted by a young and pretty Mexican girl who claimed him as her lover, and who, with her arms around his neck, clung desperately to him all of the time, begging for his life. The whole demeanor of the excited, drunken mob seemed to change instantly, and with cheers for the lovers they escorted the couple with jollification to the home of the girl, and seemed to be as ready to fight for this Chinaman as they had been to hang him.

Down near the Los Angeles River a drunken mob seized a Chinaman who was half dead with terror, and, after threatening to shoot or hang him, conceived the idea of having some "fun" with him. Placing him upon the back of a half-wild bronco, tying his feet securely together under the struggling beast, and pulling off the bridle, they turned him loose with the Chinaman on his back. The terrified horse darted off into the blackness of night with the screaming Chinaman in a race which seemed almost sure death to the Mongolian. Fortunately for him, the mob overlooked a pocket knife which the Chinaman carried and which enabled him to cut the cords that bound his feet under the horse and to slip off his back to the ground. This was an unexpected piece of good luck to the Chinaman, and contrary to the intention of the mob.

Some of the principal actors in that night tragedy are still alive, but most of them have long since gone over the divide. The names of such men as Judge Widney, Dist.-Atty. B. E. Tom, Dr. Widney and J. F. Burns, then Sheriff, are well known to most of the older residents of La Ciudad de la Reina de Los Angeles, and all of the survivors have lived to see that little pueblo of adobe huts transformed into a city first in beauty and second only in size, in the State of California.

Social Queens.

WOMEN WHO RULE IN OFFICIALDOM AT WASHINGTON.

By a Special Contributor.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—The social empire over which Mrs. Roosevelt reigns supreme, among her sex, is divided into six principalities, each with a queen of its own, now ruling and holding court in the brilliant capital of the nation.

Socially speaking, there is but one person in the world to whom Mrs. Roosevelt need ever yield first place, and he is her distinguished husband. The President must, according to the unwritten law, take precedence of all others in the land, even of his wife. Many Presidents have emphatically protested against the ironclad rule which forbids their giving first place to their ladies, after the manner of all other well-bred men of the realm. Garfield, after thus protesting in vain, yielded with the remark: "All right, gentlemen, I will do as you say; but I nevertheless fail to see why I can't be President without being pig."

Real Imperial Prerogatives.

Precedents handed down by all of her predecessors give Mrs. Roosevelt many of the social powers of a real empress. An invitation from her—like one from royalty—obliterates any other which the bidden guest may have for the same date, and only illness or mourning can properly be offered as an excuse for declining her proffered hospitality. A new comer in official society who should decline Mrs. Roosevelt's invitation on the ground of a "previous engagement" would commit a social blunder irreparable in the eyes of any first lady of the land less tolerant than the present one. By virtue of a precedent established by the well-beloved "Dolly" Madison, popularly known as "Queen Dolly," all Presidents' wives since her brilliant reign have, like old-world monarchs, been exempted from the necessity of returning calls. Mrs. Madison profited by the uncomfortable experience of Mrs. John Adams, who found her time entirely taken up with visiting and who even then had to slight certain households and thus make political enemies for her husband. The only exception to this rule would require Mrs. Roosevelt to pay the first call upon visiting empresses, queens, princesses, the wife of her husband's immediate predecessor or successor—at the time of a change of administration—or the wife of any foreign President visiting the United States.

Regardless of her exemption from calling, Mrs. Roosevelt's social duties are more exacting than those of any of her subordinates. Each morning, from New Year's Day until Easter, she must sit at her desk and pore over invitation lists with Miss Hagner, her private secretary. She and her distinguished husband have surpassed all of their predecessors in the frequence and brilliance of their hospitality. Indeed it is estimated that Mr. Roosevelt while President has spent far more than his salary. When he entered the White House it was estimated that his private fortune amounted to a quarter of a million, and of course he has realized handsome royalties from his books. A poorer President could not vest his wife with nearly so much social splendor.

Second Lady of the Land.

Mrs. Fairbanks, who reigns over the first principality of Mrs. Roosevelt's social empire, is the second lady of the land. All women of officialdom, save only the President's wife, owe her the first call and, like Mrs. Roosevelt, she is exempted from the necessity of returning calls. There is one exception to this rule, in her case. She must return the visits of all Senators' wives, her husband, the Vice-President, being ex-officio president of the upper house of Congress. The fact that he presides over the Senate establishes Mrs. Fairbanks as the social queen of the entire Congressional set. Mrs. Fairbanks owes her rank as second lady of the land to President McKinley, whose predecessors permitted the wife of the dean of the diplomatic corps to usurp that station. Mr. McKinley ruled that the wife of the Vice-President had the same relative social rank as the crown princess of a European court. Lord Pauncefote, dean of the diplomatic corps, protested in vain to his foreign office, and Lady Pauncefote had to yield her station to Mrs. Hobart. Mrs. Fairbanks's social reign has been noted for its diplomacy. Girlhood friends whom she knew back in Marysville, O., when [illegible] nelia Cole, are just as welcome to her [illegible] pard's Row as are the wives of the high [illegible] officialdom. She is proud of the fact [illegible] was born in a humble log cabin and [illegible] as a plowboy. She has been his chum [illegible] since the days when they attended the [illegible] together and were fellow editors of their [illegible] at Ohio Wesleyan. She has one son a [illegible] army, another the private secretary of his [illegible] who has just been graduated at Yale, and [illegible] is a sophomore at that university; also a [illegible] is married to Ensign Timmons, U.S.N.

Queen and Baroness.

The third lady in, but not of, the land is [illegible] Hengelmuller von Hengelvar, wife of the [illegible] garian Ambassador, who upon the retirement [illegible] Cassini last summer became dean of the diplo[illegible] —a title conferred at each national capital [illegible] Ambassador of longest service there. The [illegible] Washington principality is the most brillia[illegible] this city's official coteries. It includes many [illegible] ages of title who at state functions eschew [illegible] tional evening clothes and don court costume [illegible] down with gold lace and brass buttons, [illegible] jeweled orders, and in many cases knicker[illegible] course I am speaking of the men. The Baroness [illegible] ranking woman of the entire diplomatic [illegible] band enjoying such precedence over all of [illegible] members and being the channel of comm[illegible] tween that coterie and the government of [illegible] States in settling all questions of etiquette [illegible] members; also the spokesman for the corps [illegible] gotiations between the "powers" and our [illegible] court.

The Baroness is a Greek Catholic, having [illegible] Russia—at Counters Dunin Borkowski [illegible] daughter of Count Dunin-Brozowski, at [illegible] ter at Dresden, and from whom she inherit[illegible] When very young she was placed in the C[illegible] Sacred Heart, Paris, and at the age of 16 [illegible] ritorial magnate of Austrian Poland, but [illegible] widow when still a girl. She married M. [illegible] von Hengelvar in 1893, shortly before he [illegible] to Washington. To the dances and other e ents of army and navy matrons few civilia ited. At the army posts the ladies of each "o " form a little community of their own, with circles, card clubs and regular round of dance Washington is the great Mecca of all officers services, who are always silently praying that the detailed there or to one of the near-by posts alo [illegible] through the chill breezes of winter. When the [illegible] to the Blue Parlor were thrown open to the [illegible] President's New Year's reception it was [illegible] and her husband who led the line of official [illegible] the Vice-President and Mrs. Fairbanks being [illegible] the receiving party. At the state dinner to the [illegible] corps the President will escort the Baroness [illegible] state dining-room and give her the honor seat at [illegible] right hand, while M. Hengelmuller will escort Mrs. Roosevelt.

[illegible] Disputed and Anomalous.

[illegible] which is fourth in rank among these social principalities is still a matter of dispute. While the Supreme Court circle is conceded that rank by many high officials, others reckon its standing as below that of the Cabinet. Presidents have always diplomatically refrained from a final ruling upon the disputed point. But in the little Supreme Court circle the wife of the Chief Justice takes social precedence and is immediately followed by the better halves of the respective Associate Justices in order of their seniority of service. Unhappily the Chief Justice is now a widower; but the reigning woman of the circle is Mrs. Harlan, wife of Mr. Justice Harlan, who before her marriage in 1856 was Miss [illegible] Shanklin of Evansville, Ind. Justice and Mrs. Harlan will celebrate their golden wedding next December.

Mrs. Elihu Root, who reigns over the Cabinet circle, is [illegible] of a precedent established by Mrs. James G. [illegible]—when her husband was Secretary of State—given [illegible] from returning calls except those of Senators' [illegible]. The same immunity is enjoyed by all other matrons of the cabinet, save that they must pay first calls [illegible] the wives of Ambassadors. Mrs. Root is the leader [illegible] cabinet circle only because of the fact that the [illegible] Department was the first executive department of [illegible] created. The Secretary of State thereby [illegible] premier of the Cabinet. While Mrs. Root yields [illegible] Roosevelt, Mrs. Fairbanks, Baroness Hengelmuller [illegible] the wives of all foreign Ambassadors, she outranks the wives of all foreign ministers, chargés [illegible] secretaries and attachés of the diplomatic [illegible]. There is one occasion when Ambassadors' wives [illegible] to her—when they are entertained with her in [illegible] diplomatic residence at the capital. This abdication of rank is by courtesy, however, rather than by rule. [illegible] below them, generally, Mrs. Root also receives first calls, at the beginning of each season, from [illegible] wives. Thus, it will be seen, her station [illegible] anomalous.

[illegible] England sent over here the first Ambassador [illegible] to our capital the wife of the Secretary of [illegible] preceded the entire diplomatic corps, whose dean [illegible]. Mrs. Root will stand at Mrs. Roosevelt's [illegible] in the receiving line at all state receptions [illegible] the White House. At the New Year receptions [illegible] have to depart, however, as soon as the diplomatic corps has been received and then hurry to her [illegible] and receive the corps after it, too, has hur[illegible] court dress from the White House to attend the [illegible] luncheon which, at New Year noon, the [illegible] always gives to the foreign diplomats. At the [illegible] present season the President and Mrs. Roosevelt [illegible] have dined at each Cabinet home, in turn; and [illegible] Mrs. Root who, as prescribed by precedent, gave [illegible] of these dinners this year. All other Cabinet [illegible] except Mrs. Root, yield to the wives of Ambassadors [illegible] pay them first calls.

[illegible] social queen of fifth rank is Mrs. Dewey, [illegible] the admiral of the navy. She reigns over the [illegible] "navy set," and is well accustomed to mili[illegible] and splendor, having been the wife of Gen. [illegible] the army before wedding the hero of Manila [illegible] entering the "army set" she was accustomed [illegible] the splendors of the civilian circle, her father, [illegible] Washington McLean, having been a millionaire, [illegible] considerable real estate at the capital, one of [illegible] being Secretary Hitchcock.

[illegible], but Greater Kingdom.

[illegible] Chaffee, who is ruler of the "army set" by virtue [illegible] the wife of the chief of staff, must always yield [illegible] Dewey when they meet individually. This is be[illegible] army officer must be a full general—as no one [illegible] since Grant—to have the relative rank of admi[illegible] the commanding officer of our navy is an [illegible] that of the army is at present only a lieutenant-[illegible] Gen. Chaffee. But by reason of the fact that [illegible] was established before the navy, the "army set" [illegible] the "navy set" as a body, as is seen at the [illegible] House each New Year's Day, when the army offi[illegible] admitted to the Blue Parlor ahead of the naval [illegible]

[illegible] Chaffee, before her marriage, was Miss Annie [illegible] Rockwell, and her wedding with the present [illegible] of the army occurred in 1875, at Junction City, [illegible] when Gen. Chaffee—who had not been a West [illegible] but had worked up through the ranks—was a [illegible] of cavalry. In the thirty years of her married [illegible] has moved twenty-one times. Indeed, the wife [illegible] officer leads a career far more nomadic than [illegible] of a Methodist minister.

[illegible] of All.

[illegible] and navy "sets" are the most clannish prin[illegible] in our social empire. It is the ambition of ev[illegible] in either circle to marry all of her daughters [illegible] and of the fathers to send their sons to the [illegible] naval academy. To the dances and other en[illegible] of army and navy matrons few civilians [illegible]. At the army posts the ladies of each "offi[illegible] a little community of their own, with its [illegible], card clubs and regular round of dances. [illegible] Washington is the great Mecca of all officers of [illegible], who are always silently praying that they [illegible] there or to one of the near-by posts along the Potomac. Army women at the capital make it a point to visit one another at least once a year, and every winter the President holds at the White House a special reception for the army and navy. While the naval women are more widely scattered during their sea service—when they follow close behind our warships, from port to port—they dwell in the same social atmosphere as do army women whenever collected in one community. In spite of its frequent movings, its perils and its scandals, army or navy life imparts to its women a happiness shared by few of their sisters. No matter how small her dowery, how meager her pedigree, the officer's wife is assured a social prestige, a livelihood as long as her husband lives and behaves himself; a pension for herself and children should he die at his post of duty; free medical attendance, free house rent, free fodder for the horse and a free funeral, with coffin and headstones thrown in, when each member of the family "passes in his checks."

Mr. Devery.

SHOWS THAT TOO MANY STATUTES SPOIL THE BROTH.

By a Special Contributor.

THERE used to be an old-time sayin' that too many cooks spoiled the broth, said Mr. Devery, but things has changed. You can't get hold of enough cooks these days to fry a pound of steak, let alone make broth. You can start up a flat, and you can furnish it as you like, but if you start in to eat there, there's goin' to be trouble. You're in for it good. But while there ain't too many cooks around to spoil the broth, I want to tip you off that there's too many laws enacted for the good of the community, an' that ain't no nineteen hundred an' six jest at that. This question of laws is a serious game. There's over forty Legislatures in the country, an' each of 'em is turnin' out about 300 noo laws every session. By an' by, if they keep on, we'll have to get out a writ of habeas corpus every time we want to look at ourselves in the glass. Of course in some cases this'll be in the line of a blessin', but it'll be a restriction of liberty just the same. If some guy like Sir Thomas Lipton comes over here again, an' wants to run his chances by lookin' at himself of a mornin', it wouldn't be right to check him by law, even if he is a foreign alien.

It's all very well for Americans to wave the flag an' chew the rag about life an' liberty an' the persuit of happiness, but when you get down to cases, the liberty end of the contract ain't nothin' more than a joke. Of course there's lots of liberty took with you, but when you sail in to take a piece for yourself there's trouble brewin'. An' it's all because we've got too many laws. What's more, the laws we've got is the wrong sort. You see man in his natural state don't need no law at all. Take one man livin' by himself in a wilderness. Say he's in Columbus, Ohio. He don't need no law, does he? Of course not. But as soon as the second man bobs on the scene things is changed. He's goin' to graft on the first guy if he gets a chance. If Number One has a bearskin overcoat an' Number Two ain't got nothin' but a blade of grass to keep away the winter blasts, there's bound to be a row. If Number Two is a good husky guy he sails up to Number One, bats him on the head with a tree bough when the snow begins to fall, and the bearskin thing belongs to him. An' so on it goes. Mr. Diggus in Caveous has to blow out an' freeze on to another bear. There ain't no argument for him. He's up against it. Of course at this stage of the proceedin's there ain't no law. There's nothin' to it but what Bill Shakespeare called a clout o'er the mazzard. The guy that got his mazzard beat in most lost out. It's the same thing today, only we've got different methods.

But to get back to the law. When the third an' the fourth man bobs up, matters begins to take a serious turn. Of course they ain't livin' in Columbus now. You can't find four sensible men that would live in Columbus. Very well, then, Number One ain't satisfied with the bearskin overcoat. Number Three has a stone knife that he's made. He wants that. Number Four has a manicure set, an' so on. Number One, bein' the main squeeze on the muscle thing, sails in an' announces himself as the real goods. In a month everybody works but father. An' that's what started law. Two, three an' four got together an' saw where it was necessary to have some regulations. So they fixed things so that if Number One swiped Number Two's peg-top trousers the three of 'em would sail in an' beat the stuffin' out of him. If he wanted peg-top pants he could go out an' make 'em, or he could pay somebody else for makin' 'em, but he mustn't swipe nobody else's leg coverin's. An' there's the whole point of law. Men has certain natural rights—that is, they used to have—an' law should be rules to prevent any one infringin' on 'em. Every law outside of them that insures liberty takes so much liberty away. Here in Indiana you can't smoke a cigarette. It's again the law. But they'll let you live in Terre Haute, which is by far the worst. Mind you, I ain't upholdin' cigarettes. Any man that can smoke a cigarette could kiss J. P. Morgan if he was properly trained. The point is that a man ought to have the right to if he wants. If you look over all the laws we have you'll find that nearly every one is a restriction on liberty. An' things has reached that pass where you can't breathe with safety in a big city. Of course it's been like this for a long time in Pittsburgh, but I'm speaking of other places, too. You start down the street an' the mounted cop waltzes up an' says you can't do it. The Chief of Police says you'll have to go down the other way. What do you do? You go. You thought you had a right to walk the streets, but you was mistook. The only right you had was to pay your taxes to fix up the pavements. You might think you have a right to mow your own lawn of a Sunday, but over in Massachusetts they'll give you thirty days if you try it on. In Noo York they fix it so you can't break the law by takin' away the lawns.

There is hundreds of other laws that could be mentioned that don't do nothin' but restrict liberty. An' where the people is fooled is that they're conned into believin' it's the will of the people. In ain't nothin' of the sort. As I've said, the Legislatures is turnin' out about 300 laws a year each. But them ain't really the laws. Them's only some of 'em. The real laws is made by the judges. Of course it ain't their business, but they make 'em just the same. If you're a Democrat it ain't your business to chip in to the Republican campaign fund, is it? An' visa versa. But you're doin' it just the same. You're insured, ain't you? Very well, then.

You see in the old days when they had judges they had to have lawyers to tell 'em what the law was. It really ought to be that way today, but it ain't. The judges tell these lawyers what the law is, an' as a rule neither of 'em knows anything about it. But when they started out the game was fixed up that way. The judges for the most part couldn't read. But they was wise guys just the same. The lawyers was part of the court. They was supposed to help the judges get next to the facts. Now all the time's taken up in tryin' to help the judge get on to the graft. The references comes in later. By an' by the people that was took into court see where it was a good game to pass up a few cough drops to the lawyer so that their case could be dressed up to look a little different. The consequence was that the guy that handed up the most cough drops won out. The judges didn't have no more brains than they've got today. But they woke up in time. An' as soon as they see where the graft was goin' they jumped on the band wagon an' joined the procession.

When it got so that verdicts was knocked down to the highest bidder, it was time to make a few more laws, an' the people started in to have juries. Now we've got things fixed so that the lawyers lies like horse dealers, the juries sleeps like spinxes, an' the judges poses as the real simon pure salvation of the country. "You are to be the judges of the law an' the facts," says His Honor to the bunch. Then he tells 'em what the law is an' what the facts is an' what to do an' to hurry up as quick as they can an' do it. What's more, they do.

Now things has reached that pass where nine lawyers out of ten is engaged in tryin' to see where they can bunco the law. Public prosecutors is public persecutors. They ain't aimin' to get at the facts, but to get their man. That's the game; get your man. An' conditions is continually changin'. What's law today ain't law tomorrow. Every time a judge makes a decision there's a noo law on the statoot books. The next guy that comes up points out that the law reads so and so. "That cuts no figure," says His Honor, "the decision is rendered an opinion handed down by Justice Knowitall, an' that settles it." What's more it does. Yesterday it was an opinion. Today it ain't nothin' of the sort. It's a law. It's a fact. If you take it up to the Court of Appeals, three guys that know everythin' says it's all right an' two guys that know everythin' says it's all wrong. The guy that says it's wrong today says it's right tomorrow. Now they're on one side an' then they're on another. The client gets in as the dice drops. It's a great game. An' I want to tell you there won't be no improvement till the people gets together an' wipes out about 7000 laws a minute for a hour or two. All we need on the statoot books is laws that preserves to a man his right to liberty. We don't need none that takes away any of his liberty. An' that's about all we've got. Laws again murder is all right. People should be punished for stealin' an' so on, but if a man wants to sleep in a tree he ought to be allowed to do it. There is some men that likes to put a ten spot on the first race. That shouldn't be considered a crime. It ain't no more than a symptom of insanity.

SHE KNEW HER GRAMMAR.

The judge's little daughter, although she had talked several times through the telephone to her father, had never gone through the formalities necessary in calling him up. The first time she tried it she took the receiver off the hook, as she had seen others do, placed her lips to the transmitter and said:

"Hello! I want to talk to papa."

"Number, please?" said central.

"Singular," she answered, surprised at the question, but proud that she knew something of the rudiments of grammar.—[Youth's Companion.

WHAT THE BLIND SEE.

"I can always tell when people are looking at me," said a blind man. "Indeed, nearly all blind persons can tell when people are looking at them.

"I have always about me a soft golden glow of light. When people whom I like come into my presence this glow becomes paler, lovelier. When those I dislike are about, the glow is darkened and besmirched.

"I can see what kind of characters people have by the touch of their hands. There is individuality in the touch. A man's touch shows me whether he is alert or sluggish, cold or passionate, kind or cruel."

PRESENT-DAY PHILOSOPHY.

Overeducated men are like overfed men, only the indigestion is intellectual.

The Old-Time Teacher.

A REMINISCENCE OF A NEW YORK DISTRICT SCHOOL.

By a Special Contributor.

"I'VE seen a good deal in the papers about the selection of school teachers in New York City," said the man with the grizzly mustache, "and I've noticed that those on one side of the current controversy declare that personality is as necessary in a teacher as ability to pass an examination. I desire to say, right here, that in my day—I was born and brought up in York State—personality was as important in the teachers of the district schools as education. More so, in fact; a good deal more.

"It was his personality that made old Bill Skeeles just the man to run the school in the Simpkins district, where I went to school in my middle 'teens, and, from what I hear, a personality somewhat like his is still necessary to run the Simpkins district school.

"There have been great changes in the way of running the schools in the United States since I was a boy, in the country districts as well as in the cities and towns, but I'm told the old Simpkins district school runs along about as it used to. Whether there are any Old Bill Skeeleses to teach it nowadays, I don't know. I'd like to go back to the Simpkins district and spend a week there this winter, just to find out.

Farmer in Summer, Teacher in Winter.

"Skeeles lived in Riker's Hollow, five or six miles away from the Simpkins district. He had a big farm, which he worked in the summer, teaching in the winter only. He was a good representative of what was then a large class of farmer-teachers, men of mature years, who would have been ashamed to teach school in the summer, when the pupils were small children only. In fact they were unfitted for the task, just as the young women who taught the summer schools would have been altogether out of place at the teacher's desk in the winter, when many of the pupils were big boys, unruly and manageable only by grown men.

"Old Bill Skeeles was one of the best of his class and always in demand in districts where the winter teachers had been unable to carry their terms through.

"His grade may be understood from the circumstance that while $8 a week and 'board yourself' was fair pay for winter teachers in those days, $10 more than average, [illegible] extra, and $15 almost unheard of, our district paid him $18 a week the first winter he taught its school. Skeeles himself admitted that such big pay seemed like robbery, but justified the price by referring to the fact that right at home, in Riker's settlement, he could get [illegible] that the trustee on Brink's Hill had offered him [illegible]

"I never heard that anybody ever complained of the discipline Skeeles maintained after the first three weeks, either among the little children, the 'young ladies,' or the big boys. But he had his own way of opening a term, and this resulted in a few mighty lively encounters with the big boys.

"His plan, apparently, was to let the school almost run itself at first, and his course surprised, almost to speechlessness, half a dozen of the ringleaders who had ousted four or five of his predecessors in as many winters. Instead of bringing in with him a great heavy ironwood ruler and a big 'black snake' horse whip as they expected, he came empty-handed.

"Instead of making a rigid set of rules and telling what would happen if any of them were broken, he said nothing at all about rules. He made no tiresome addresses on the beauty of education and the duty we owed our parents and ourselves to study. He didn't even hint that any one of us boys might become the President if we would try hard enough.

Skeeles Studied the Situation.

"Just about all Bill Skeeles did on the first day was to make up the school register, assign the seats, and hear the reading classes. He let us choose our seats to suit ourselves; he said not a word about whispering; he let as many of us as wanted to 'stand by the stove,' and he didn't appear to be paying very close attention to anybody or anything.

"As Jonas Smith, the twenty-one-year-old son of [illegible] Smith, the miller, said: 'Skeeles acted like he was the easiest teacher to get along with that ever came into the district,' though, as Jonas also said, 'he didn't look it.' The latter remark was certainly justified. Skeeles was about 50, more than six feet tall, weighed more than 200 pounds, and was all muscle. His eyes were shades darker than dead black; his iron gray mustache was big and bristling, and his closely-shaven chin and cheeks were blue-black from the heaviness of his beard; his jaws were square and lean, and his voice, though mild as milk, was so deep and heavy that it reminded one of the note of a sub-bass pipe in a big church organ.

"You can see why it took us till afternoon to make up our minds that it would be safe to presume on the new teacher's apparent lack of interest in what was going on, but by 4 o'clock the schoolroom, which had been fairly quiet all the morning, was all a-buzz with whispering, notes were being passed freely from the boys' side of the house across the center aisle to the girls' side and back again.

"Skeeles drove the five miles from Riker's Settlement every day, stabling his horse at a farmer's barn near by. When he drove away that night, we were all puzzled, especially Jonas Smith, always the ringleader when there was trouble, to the great distress of his father. It had been currently reported that Jonas, knowing of Skeeles's reputation as a disciplinarian, and having some fear of his own reputation as the equal to 'any school teacher in shoe leather,' had been doubtful about attending school at all that winter.

"If anything, Skeeles was easier on the second day than on the first, and by Tuesday night Jonas Smith had made up his mind to stay in school long enough to 'find out just what the teacher was made of.' They had no collision till the Monday opening the second week, however.

The Betrayal of Jonas Smith.

"By the middle of the forenoon of that day things had come to a pretty pass. Whispering was general, the passing of notes was going on almost openly, and every once in a while Marietta Stevens, who sat on the 'back seat,' just across the aisle from Jonas Smith, was giggling at the funny things he was saying to her.

"Now, although there were seats for only forty-four pupils in the Simpkins district schoolhouse, the registration that winter numbered more than ninety, and the average attendance was almost seventy. You can imagine without any further explanation that the little schoolroom was fairly bursting with noise; it was so great, in fact, that the A B C pupils were actually conning their letters out loud most of the time, without attracting special attention.

"Through all the hubbub, Skeeles sat impassively at his desk, listening to the recitations, his black eyes seeing nothing apparently, his deep voice occasionally making itself heard, like the bass in a counterpoint performance, whereof the higher melodies were furnished by the recitations and whispering of the pupils and Marietta's giggling.

"'Greenleaf's arithmetic,' rumbled Skeeles, at about 11:30, calling the most advanced mathematical class in the room to the front. This class was made up of Jonas and Marietta, by themselves, and they responded promptly. Marietta tripping mincingly down the aisle, Jonas tramping slowly and with heavy stamping, as befitted the dignity of the biggest boy in the school. On the way down—so sure had he become that the gigantic Skeeles, with his big bass voice was only a bluff—Jonas stopped long enough to pull ten-year-old Willie Parker's ear, whereat Willie let out a howl of surprise and pain.

"For the first time that term the teacher seemed to notice that something irregular was going on. His face flushed a little, and, calling Willie to the front, he told the boy to stand with his face to the blackboard. He paid no attention whatever to Jonas's part in the disorder, though, till after the recitation in 'Greenleaf's' was over with and school was 'let out for noon.'

"Jonas—now doubly assured that, after all, old Bill Skeeles wasn't worth being afraid of—started swaggeringly toward the door, but the teacher stopped him.

"'I wouldn't go just yet, Jonas,' he said. Jonas stopped short, his swagger all gone, for although the heavy voice was still mild, there was a new note in it, and immediately the trouble began.

"Like a flash the teacher had opened his desk and drawn from it the biggest eight-foot black-snake horsewhip I ever saw. For a moment Jonas stood looking at it as if dazed. None of us had the slightest idea any such thing was in the schoolhouse at all.

How Jonas Took His Licking.

"'A big coward like you that will pick on a little boy,' remarked Skeeles rather listlessly, 'ought to be knocked down and sat upon. But I shan't do that unless I have to. Hold your hands up high and take the licking I'm going to give you as near like a man as you can.'

"Jonas was still pretty well dazed and somewhat frightened besides, but the teacher's words were so coolly insulting, as they were meant to be, that the younger man completely lost control of himself and sprang madly at the teacher's throat. To those of us who were in the schoolroom the two men were not very unevenly matched. Jonas was quite as tall as Skeeles, and almost as heavy, and we thought that because he was younger he would make up in quickness for whatever he lacked in weight. We didn't think that all out just then, of course; we were too busy watching to think at all, but we had thought and talked it out along that line every day since the first day of the term, and we certainly looked for a lively battle, with the odds not far from even, and if anything in favor of Jonas.

"What happened was fully as lively as we expected, but not a bit like what we looked for. Jonas's rush for Skeeles's throat was of no consequence whatever; he never got within grappling distance at all. For, with the same quickness he had shown in getting the 'black-snake' out of his desk, Skeeles shot his right arm out, and into Jonas's face. Jonas stiffened as if he'd received an electric shock, and, knocked clear off the floor, his body described a beautiful parabolic curve through the atmosphere and landed in a heap by the stove, at least half-way across that part of the schoolroom floor in front of the desks.

"Skeeles looked a little anxious at first, for he had hit Jonas harder than he intended, but Jonas scrambled quickly to his feet and, though rather logy, started to make another rush toward the teacher. But the look on the older man's face was too serious for even Jonas, crazy with rage as he was, to disregard, and he stopped.

"'Jonas,' said Skeeles, 'I don't want to knock you down again, but I shall if you make it necessary. You'd better stand up and take your licking.'

"To the unbounded amazement of all us boys, that's exactly what Jonas did. At least, he stood up ready to take it, but when Skeeles saw the boy was already conquered he put the whip away, drove all the rest of us out of the room and sat down to talk things over with Jonas.

"Years afterward Jonas told me that Skeeles told him he would give him a licking yet, unless he would promise to attend school faithfully to the end of the term.

"'I want to put you through Greenleaf, Jonas,' said Skeeles, 'and you want to go through. This will be your last winter in school, and you've never gone through cube root or the rule of three. Promise to come steadily and finish the arithmetic, and the licking will be indefinitely postponed. Otherwise,' he added with grim humor, 'we will resume our exercises right now.'

Old Bill Skeeles's Blacksnake Whip.

"Jonas promised, as he had to, and kept his word. It made a man of him, as he told me himself last year, when I met him in London with his wife—she that was Marietta Stevens—and their oldest daughter.

"But you're mistaken if you suppose Skeeles had no further trouble with that school. He had plenty of it. It took him about two weeks to get the rest of us in order. You see, we didn't know the reason Jonas didn't get his licking, for neither Jonas nor the teacher told anybody then, and several of us were foolish enough to think it was because old Bill Skeeles had weakened.

"I made a bluff at being funny myself the very next day, having taken the precaution to stuff my clothing where I thought it would do the most good. It was then that I found out a little about Skeeles's ingenuity. For, instead of whipping me in the conventional place, he larruped me with his black snake about the calves of my legs, where I hadn't and couldn't protect myself at all. Now I want to say to you that the big blacksnake whip that old Bill Skeeles kept in his desk was a better remedy for a schoolboy's foolishness than anything of which I ever had personal knowledge.

"At least, half a dozen besides myself had to learn from personal experience how expert Skeeles was in handling that whip. Every day for about a week one good, solid blacksnake licking was administered to some one 'big boy,' who had to learn his lesson all by himself, but by the time the round of the biggest among us had his medicine, the work was complete.

"There was no more disorder in that school that winter, and once we were 'pacified,' old Bill Skeeles proved to be a very successful teacher. He wasn't deeply read, his English was eccentric—for instance, he pronounced column as if it were spelled 'collyum'—but he took us all 'through' all our books and he taught us all to apply our minds to our studies and to think straight.

"And as the man who has learned to think straight and apply himself is already pretty well educated, I believe I'm right in saying Old Bill Skeeles was a good teacher."

BIRDS' NEW WAYS.

HOW THEY CHANGE THEIR HABITS TO MEET THE CONDITIONS.

[Forest and Stream.] Among the familiar examples of the changes in the habits of birds which have resulted from association with mankind are those of the chimney swift, or, popularly named chimney "swallow," which formerly nested in hollows of trees and now in all settled regions using the chimneys of the houses; and the barn and eave swallows, the former originally nesting in caves and now building on the beams and rafters of barns, and the latter, once a cliff dweller, now attaching its curious mud tenement under the shelter of the eaves of barns and dwellings. In a series of interesting notes in the October Auk on the changes in the habits of birds George F. Breninger records having observed in Mexico the old and the new way of swallow nesting. In the ancient town of Tuxpan he found numerous instances of barn swallows nesting in the living-rooms; and in the unsettled portion of the State of Chihuahua, a hundred miles back from the railroad, on one of the large haciendas—a region devoid of the time-honored adobes—barn swallows still nestled on the rocks.

Mr. Breninger notes other changes in the nesting habits due to the removal of large timber. There is, for example, the Lucy's warbler, which normally nests in natural cavities in the trunks of trees, most commonly in the mesquite; but in the vicinity of Tucson, where the larger trees have been cut away, the warblers have in some instances had recourse to rebuilding their nests in the abandoned nests of other species, in one case in the hole in a bank of earth, and, most curious of all, among the small limbs of a mesquite tree.

In timbered countries the flickers cut holes in the trunks of trees for their nests. In some sections, where the large trees have been removed and the flickers have no longer such nesting sites, they have taken to the telegraph poles. "Along the railroad between Benson and Bisbee, Ariz.," writes Mr. Breninger, "the telegraph poles and fence posts show evidence of the work of the woodpeckers, all by the Texan woodpecker. Throughout this region trees are few, and the woodpeckers are forced to use anything that is dead and large enough to permit of a nesting cavity being excavated in it. Dead stalks of the century plant are often used. About Phoenix, Ariz., this woodpecker is common, timber to their needs is still in abundance, and the poles along the railroads and elsewhere are untouched. In some parts of Mexico the work of woodpeckers on telegraph poles has reached the stage of a nuisance and a source of much outlay of money to keep the line in repair. Over a piece of road running between San Luis Potosi and Tampico the nuisance has become so great that the management threatened to dip the poles in a solution of creosote."

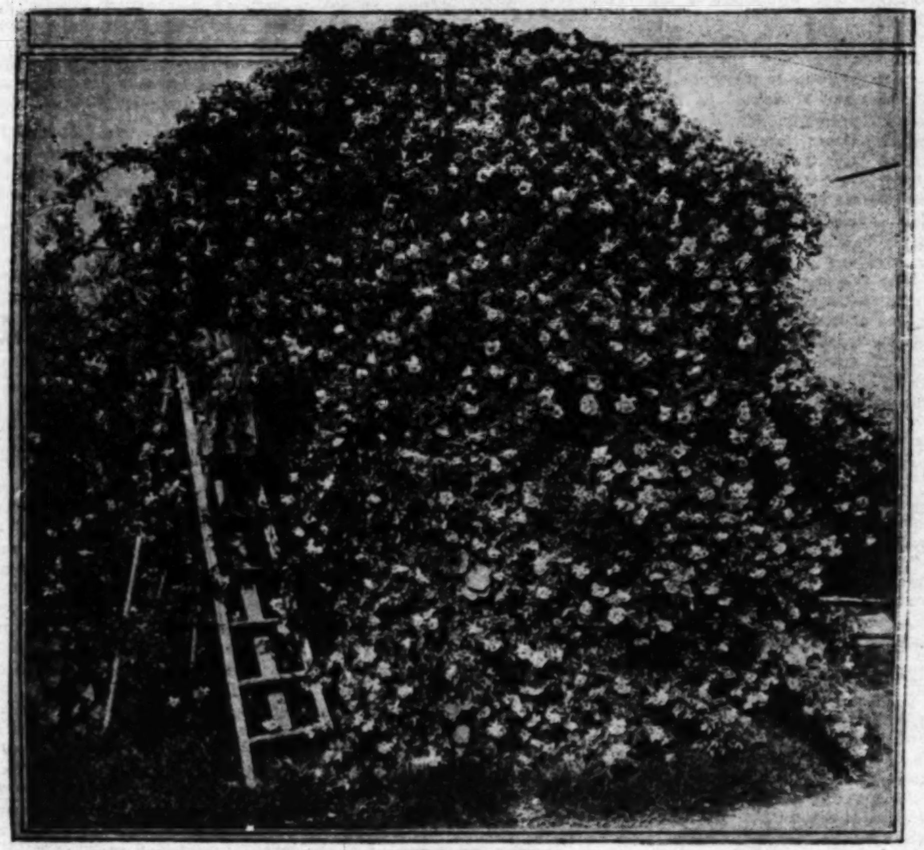
NATIVE PLANTS.

A KNOWLEDGE OF THEM NECESSARY TO ENJOYING THEM.

By Ernest Braunton.

CAN you go into our cañons or on our hills and name one-tenth of the plants you find? Do you know even the common names for that number? If not, is it any wonder you have no love for them? We do not love people except we know them; it is but slightly different in the case of plants. The more intimately we know them, the deeper is our appreciation. If you do not know our native plants, then you miss all, or nearly all pleasure in association with them. To him who knows them not, their only value lies in having a huge bunch of them, enough for a glaring mass of color.

Should any of our native plants become extinct, their loss may be largely attributed to those who haunt our flower fields in midwinter, lacking in proper appreciation of our floral beauties. Every winter's day, but more especially on Sundays, our cityward suburban cars are loaded with people carrying huge bunches of native flowers which are badly wilted and too often thrown away upon reaching home. Some of these unthinking vandals do not even carry them home, for both wagon and trolley roads are often lined with cast-off flowers. Warnings against the unnecessary and unwarranted extinction of our wild flowers may pass, at present, unheeded, but the day will come, as it has come to every older State in the Union, when our Legislature will be called upon to pass stringent laws for the protection of this, our most sacred heritage. Already measures have been taken against the vandal of the forests, because of their greater economic and commercial importance, but legislation for our humbler plant life will not be long delayed. The wild-flower season is close at hand; let all nature lovers resolve to spare the rarer sorts when out culling flowers, or at least part of each bunch found, that that particular locality may have seeds for next year's crop. If all would so govern themselves none would ever become extinct.



GOLD OF OPHIR.

Do Not Overwater.

At this time of the year lawns need little or no watering; they should be resting, not growing. Even during the hottest weather, the average lawn is sadly overwatered. Few home owners begin the care of lawns in the proper way. From the time of planting the inch or two of soil nearest the surface is given daily doses, with the result that the roots keep near the surface. If such a lawn goes unwatered even for a day, it shows neglect at once. Water your lawn only when it needs it, and the roots will go down in search of water when the surface supply is exhausted. In this way, it will reach such a condition that the grass will tide over several days or a week, if need be, without watering.

Last spring, during the water congress in Los Angeles, William Mulholland, the superintendent of the city's water system, read a paper on the local water supply for domestic purposes, and created a great deal of amusement by his description of some of our "semi-aquatic gardens" in allusion to overwatered lawns. Upon tours of investigation he found many gardens where both lawns and decorative plants were almost perishing from an excess of water. In all such cases the soil was so sodden that no plants other than "semi-aquatics" could possibly thrive. We have few city lawns that do not receive an overabundance of water at all seasons.

Laying Out Roads and Walks.

The guiding principle in designing the position of roads and walks is utility. Nature forms no roads. They are the works of men and animals, and would undoubtedly always proceed in straight lines from point to point, if obstructions of various kinds did not interfere and cause deviations. Necessity will therefore suggest where and how they should be introduced. So far as regards approaches and walks to and from buildings, the object of their introduction is sufficiently apparent; but, in laying out pleasure grounds and lawn fronts, it is a common practice to introduce walks for the mere purpose of variety. This is a very questionable reason at the best, and not always successfully accomplished; but even in cases of this kind, they should appear to aim for some definite object, or lead to points of sufficient importance to suggest their utility.

Unnecessary roads and walks should be carefully avoided. They are expensive in their construction, if properly made, and require constant attention to keep them clean and in repair. Nothing looks so woebegone and poverty-stricken as a weedy, neglected road or walks through pleasure grounds or garden. They detract much from the beauty of the surroundings, no matter how elaborate or intrinsically worthy they may be. An oversupply of roads and walks is always a serious infliction.

The beauty of curved lines sometimes prompts to a deviation from the more available direct course; and, where it can be done without too great sacrifice of utility, it is not objectionable. But no walk should be turned from its obvious direct course without an apparently sufficient reason. A change of level in the ground, a tree, or a group of plants, or other similar obstruction, will induce, and seemingly demand, a change of line.

When it is necessary to branch a secondary road from the main line, it should leave the latter at as nearly a right angle as convenient, and at the same time be somewhat narrower, so that its appearance may convey the proper idea of its being subordinate, and so avoid confusion and mistake; otherwise the roads leading to lesser buildings or the garden, may be mistaken for the road to the residence. Under no circumstances should walks be made conspicuous in views of natural scenery. If it is necessary that a walk should cross a lawn where it would interrupt a continuity of view, and destroy breadth of effect, it should be sunk beneath the line of vision, by placing it in a slight excavation, which may be further assisted by throwing up a small mound on the side nearest the point of view. These expedients, as also that of planting thick groups of low-growing shrubs, will be effective and satisfactory if properly executed.

In laying out curving roads, it is not advisable to follow geometrical rules, or to set the curves out to any regular radius. This plan may occasionally prove perfectly satisfactory on a strictly level surface, but it will have quite an opposite effect where the undulating. The curves, to be pleasing, ing to the eye—not too sudden or abrupt—

CARE OF STREET TREES.

INDIFFERENCE AND NEGLECT THAT RESULT IN DISASTER.

In considering our comfort and enjoyment, we cannot help noticing that nature has imparted great strength and endurance to the trees most generally used for street planting. Were it not so, our residential streets would be simply burning, glaring surfaces. The softening influence of trees, too, adds a beauty that architecture alone cannot give. Trees are the noblest products of nature, and by many are so valued, but there are others, either careless or ignorant, who may properly be classed among the enemies of trees; for the enemies of trees, sad to relate, are not confined to insects or lower organisms. The greatest mutilation of street trees is done by man or through his negligence.

Examinations of the trees in our streets show that one-half are injured by the gnawing of horses; one-third are injured, in addition, by the employés of corporations in stringing wires for lighting and other purposes. Others, again, are injured by contractors employed on various works in the streets or adjoining property—a contractor or a lineman seldom hesitates to use a convenient tree as a guy post, yet a tree cannot be so used without injury to it. Municipal employés, themselves, are generally without instruction to care for street trees, and, therefore, careless of their well-being; in fact, will cut half the roots or branches from a tree unnecessarily and without thought or compunction. This destruction is mostly caused by lack of knowledge or appreciation on the part of employers of labor, and of public officers, of the value of trees to a city. Protection would be a simple matter were the police instructed to arrest wanton or careless destroyers of trees. This in itself would be an education. Trees would have an additional value in the eyes of the masses were an interest in them displayed by public officials.

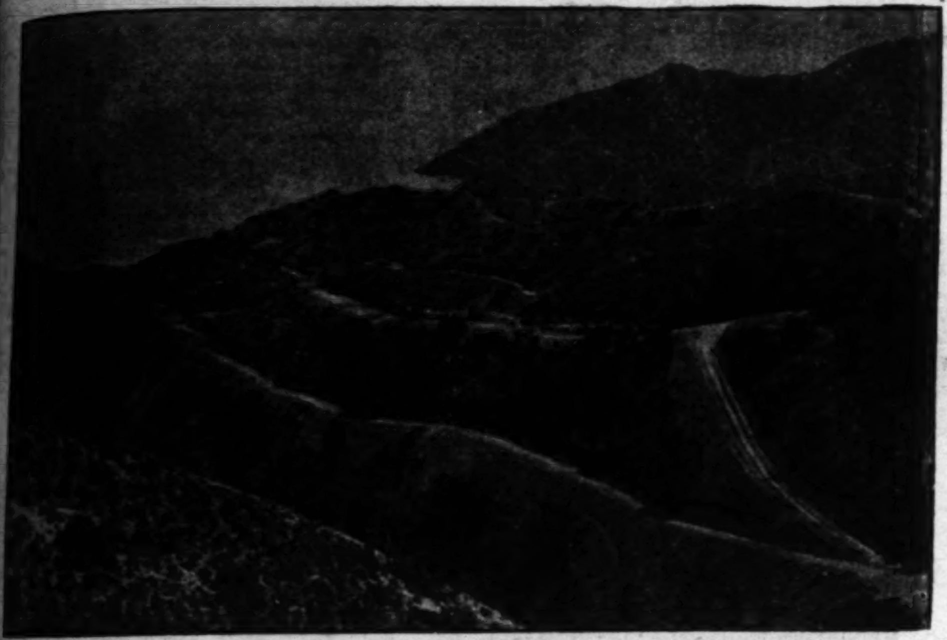
But what shall we say of those, who, while not enemies of trees, do not plant trees, even when opportunity offers? It has often been a source of wonder how so many cultured people could seemingly be of one mind in the exclusion almost of trees from streets, resulting, as it does, in such inhospitable barrenness. To pass through these streets in summer, one ceases to wonder that many houses are deserted. In the fitness of things it seems proper that from such conditions of heated atmosphere, etc., people should flee, seeking at the seaside the comfort denied them at home because of their own careless neglect of the advantages they might largely secure by planting trees in their streets. It may be, however, that the summer hegira from the aristocratic districts has something to do with the lack of tree planting; not being present during the heat of summer, the great need of shade is not observed, yet at all seasons trees lend a softness to hard architectural lines. Under competent management there is no reason why such streets should not be lined with trees.

Good Effect of School Gardens.

Prof. Wilsdorf, who has been in charge of a model school garden in the suburbs of Dresden for many years, declares that "not only is it true that an intimate knowledge of and intercourse with nature has a refining influence upon children," but that "the school garden idea promotes the cultivation of fruits and vegetables, educates boys out of a tendency to pilfer fruits and flowers or maliciously injure plants, instils into children a fondness for rural life, and educates children to work."

Embellishment of School Grounds.

We have frequently called attention to the abundance of beautiful and interesting vegetation, native to all parts of the world, that is easily available for schoolyard adornment; and to the advantages, from a landscape-gardening view of arranging whatever material is employed largely in masses or clusters. Collections of trees, shrubs and plants may be made with a view merely to securing shade, protection from wind, or effects pleasing to the eye; or they may be made to keep these ends in view, at the same time that profitable results may be secured through selecting and arranging the materials for geographical or botanical interest. Especially is it desirable to use perennial material for adornment, be it in trees, shrubs or plants, on the grounds, because when once planted it grows and continues to improve for an indefinite length of time, and also because of its cheapness, ease of culture, and attractiveness, all important points under the conditions which affect gardening in the schoolyard. It is a great advantage for the grouping system of arranging gardening material that a much larger assortment of growths can be accommodated in a given space than when the isolated plan of placing material is observed. Another gain from this system is that early effects are more easily attainable than by the scattering plan of arrangement. A mass of shrubs, for instance, may, by having the individual plants three or four feet apart, present an appearance almost as complete, as regards the presence of handsome foliage and bloom, in the first year after planting as at any subsequent period. The effect for character and strength of the planting at an early date is directly augmented, also, in proportion as the same kind or class of growths are repeated over a certain area.



A NATURAL PARK.

Nature Study.

Nature study is not science in the sense that it is knowledge classified, but it should lead to it. It is the study of plant and animal life, of the earth and its elements and of the physical forces that affect these and the relations one to the other. It culminates in the theory and practice of agriculture, horticulture and floriculture. It may be made to point to and culminate in any of the mechanic or domestic arts.

Nature study is chiefly a study of relations. The commonest phenomenon in nature is related to many other phenomena. The smallest berry is related to the entire plant upon which it grows and to each of the essential parts of the plants. To understand the plant one must understand the function of each part; to know its life history one must know the process of both production and reproduction. It is related to, and dependent on, soil, rain, sun and wind.

Landscape Study in Schools.

Perhaps the greatest value of the school garden will be found in the great amount of illustrative material for home building that may be brought together here. The grounds should be a landscape garden laid out in the natural style of planting. They should be large enough to contain one of each species of all the native forest trees and flowering and ornamental shrubs, as well as bulbs and perennial flowers. The object lesson of such a garden artistically arranged would react upon the whole community and the results would be more beautiful homes and a happier and more contented people.

Practical School Gardens.

It has been found that the school children take up plant study with great interest and with such success that many turn over every little bit of ground at home to provide the family with vegetables. Taught the latest and best methods of agriculture, they develop into really intelligent agriculturists, and are ready, which we are not, to discard old and wasteful methods for the newest and best. At the same time they are made acquainted with the best knowledge concerning drainage and irrigation, as well as meteorological phenomena—rain, mist, dew, ice, wind—from an agricultural point of view. Obviously, a boy who goes through a complete scientific training of this kind must make a better agriculturist than if he got his knowledge in the haphazard way so common throughout our country at present.

Building up the Town.

Several years ago a village improvement society in a New England town got its start in a rather novel way. At an entertainment the members announced that they were about to organize an improvement society and would do their utmost to make the town one of the cleanest and prettiest in the State.

The Gaulois of Paris has been investigating that grave question, "Why do men wear mustaches?" About 100 men answered the question. Six replied that it was too much trouble to shave, one declared that it was to hide his teeth, another that his long nose without it gave him a bad appearance, and three that it avoided colds. Three others maintained that it improved the air they breathed, and seven were of the opinion that a mustache was necessary to health. Seventeen men were content to state that they did it to please themselves, while only two said it was to please their wives. About sixty gave the reason that women did not like clean-shaven men.

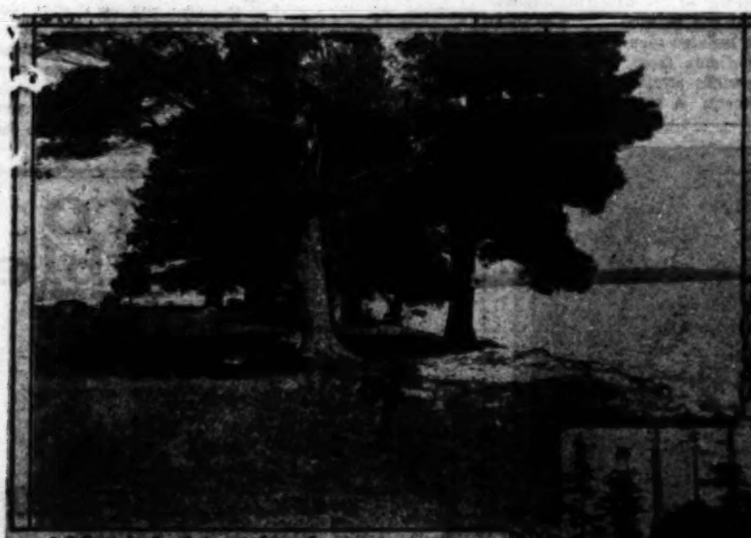
After Many Years.

AN ANGELENO'S VISIT TO THE OLD NEW ENGLAND HOME.

By a Special Contributor.

I WENT "back East." Doubtless that means very little to many who read this, but perhaps it would mean as much to many others, considered as a personal experience, as it did to the writer. Some are so fortunately situated that a trip to the East is no novelty. If so, their good fortune is not wholly without alloy, for they cannot know the rare pleasure of a visit to the old home after an absence of more than twenty years.

For more than that time I had been following a devious trail leading me away from New England through the Middle States, the West and Northwest, and finally to the Pacific Slope, but always with a growing longing to retrace my steps ere I had grown completely out of touch with the places I had once called "home." And at last the opportunity came. Though I had long ago renounced all but a sentimental allegiance to Yankeeland that loyalty yet bound me.



A bit of Lake Winnipisaukee

Camp on White-face Mountains.

After the Tramp

"The hills are dearest that our childish feet
Have climbed the earliest; and the springs most sweet
Are ever those at which our young lips drank,
Stooped to their waters o'er the grassy bank."

And as I began to realize that I was once more to see those hills and to drink of those waters, I will confess that my pleasure began to resemble an ecstacy. Doubtless it was foolish for a man so old that his eldest son had, for many moons, availed himself, surreptitiously, of his father's razor, to feel that way, but I couldn't help it; it seemed "too good to be true."

But it was true, and I found myself reeling off the miles that intervened between myself and my distant destination at a most satisfactory rate. Anxious as I was to reach that destination, the trip itself was most enjoyable. As we sped across the desert and into the characteristic scenery of Arizona and New Mexico, the weather was simply delightful, a copious rain having laid the dust to the eastward, and there was no discomforting heat.

Indeed, just about everything went well on the journey, as if the fates were agreed that this longed-for trip should be full of pleasure. True, we did get into Chicago a few hours late, just enough to miss connections for the East. But even this delay was not without its compensations, for it gave me a little time with Chicago friends, and also the enjoyment of a fine shower, the like of which I had not seen in California for months.

Another night and I was in New York State. Green fields, houses with green blinds (I had almost forgotten that there were such houses,) red clover, hills wooded to their low summits, brooks taking their vagrant ways through green meadows, the characteristic flora of the East, these and many other marks assured me that I was really in the dreamed-of land, the East.

And when we crossed the Massachusetts line and I found myself in the State that for twenty-five years I had claimed as home. Rolling into the Boston and Albany depot, I looked into the face of a friend whose hand I had last taken in California, and after a half hour's ride through the Subway and over the Elevated, I found myself in his hospitable home, trying hard, and it was a real effort, to convince myself that my desire had been realized. But yet it was only in part. I was in the "East," but had yet to go "down East."

A rail and steamboat trip took me "down" into Maine, where one of the few remaining of my own blood was living, and the few days there will never be forgotten. While there I realized one of the delights that I had longed for. For years I had wanted some red raspberries. I don't mean the kind that grow in California, on bushes planted in rows in gardens, but the kind that grow on the bushes that spring up at once whenever a wood lot is cleared; that grow alongside the road by the stone walls that line every New England road. I feared that I might be too late for them, but summer comes more slowly in Maine, and there were a few to be had. I went out into a pasture where the late, scattering berries were hanging in all their luscious ripeness, waiting only a touch to drop from the bushes. They had not been irrigated by a ditch, but by God's showers, and they had gathered color and sweetness from the sun that has ripened thousands of bushels every year on the New England hills, and a flavor that belongs to the best berry that grows. At the house I had some of these covered with rich cream, such as rises on milk nowhere except in Maine. I had come more than 3000 miles to get those berries, and they were worth coming for.

Back to Boston for a fresh start; this time for Lake Winnipisaukee—the most beautiful lake in the world. It has over 300 islands and a different way of spelling its own name for every island. If you are a poor speller, don't hesitate to try to spell Winnipisaukee. Start in with a "w" and end it with an "e," and no one can prove that you are wrong.

On the shores and islands of that lake I camped, year after year, nearly thirty years ago. We hunted, fished, bathed, picked berries, made fish chowders, baked beans in ovens dug in the ground, shot at loons, and in short, did everything that camp ethics approved. And now after all the years I came back to the old place. Stepping off the train at Albany Bay, my college chum, whom I had not seen for more than twenty years, and who had been my companion during some of the camping trips, met me. He is getting a little bald, and I am getting more than a little gray, but we made the welkin ring; we surely did, and I would like to do it again.

A day or two spent in our old haunts, and we turned our faces toward the mountains, the scene of long ago tramps when forty miles a day did not seem difficult. My time was limited, and we could not do a tithe of what we would have chosen to do, but we started one bright morning, after a rain had cleared the air, to climb old Whiteface, a peak in one of the southerly ranges of the White Mountains. It was not so very high, and the trail was a fair one, so we found ourselves on the summit a little before noon. The view from the top could be duplicated, practically, from a score of neighboring peaks, but it seems as if it could not be surpassed even though the world were gone over to do it. I doubt if such a varied panorama of lake and mountain, valley and stream, of wooded hills and clear intervales, could be found anywhere in the country outside New England and New York State. Nearly a score of bodies of water that could fairly be dignified by the term "lakes," Winnipisaukee, Squam and Ossipee, slowly meandering streams with emerald banks, prominent among the Bearcamp, and around all this glorious picture as a majestic, but only fitting, framing, were the mountains, filling all the horizon, except for a gap now and then.

To the north, and not far away, we could see Mt. Washington; dim in the south either Monadnock just north, or Wachusett just south, of the Massachusetts line; to the east some minor eminences in Maine and to the westward the green peaks of Vermont. The beauty and glory of it all well nigh prevented speech, and we could do but little more than sit silent and drink it in.

About two hours on the summit and we began the descent, not the way by which we had come up, by the south side, but down the northwest slope into the Mad River Valley.

We were almost tempted to remain overnight on the summit, for there is a snug log cabin there, erected, furnished and maintained by one of the mountain clubs, for the benefit of those desiring, or compelled, to remain there. It is water-tight, has a fair stove, cooking utensils, pepper and salt, an ax, matches, and in fact, about all that is necessary to make one comfortable in an emergency. It was good to note that the vandalism which so often manifests itself in the wanton destruction of unprotected property, had spared this

THE INDIGO INDUSTRY.

HOW GERMAN SCIENCE HAS CHANGED COMMERCIAL CONDITIONS.

[Harper's Magazine:] The commercial synthesis of indigo is a process which has reversed the economic relations of States. Only yesterday, so to speak, $25,000,000 worth of indigo was exported every year from India and the surrounding islands and countries. This was obtained from the indigo plant by a crude and ignorant fermentation-catalysis that originated long before authentic history. The indigo planters were a powerful self-sufficient race of men who passed the time [illegible], "as they did in the golden world," in the employment of serf labor and an easy production. Consumers of indigo were continually in trouble over the variable purity and quantity of the product. It was natural, then, that scientific manufacturers such as the "Badische" should wish to supplant this ignorant production by the same substance made pure and out of coal tar. In order to accomplish this three steps were necessary—(1) the determination of the constitution of indigo, (2) the synthesis of indigo, (3) the commercial production of synthetic indigo. The first and second problems took fifteen years of Baeyer's life and the third problem, its commercial production, took nearly twenty years longer. The first promising synthesis of indigo was perfected by the "Badische" up to the competing point, and was then calmly discarded because it started with toluene as a raw material, and there was too little toluene in the world to extinguish the annual 11,000,000 pounds of natural indigo. Nothing less than the complete extinguishment of natural indigo would satisfy these men. It was then that its catalytic synthesis from naphthalene was discovered. Napththalene is obtained from coal tar, and is both abundant and cheap. We need not inflict upon the reader the names of fear possessed by the substances through which naphthalene passes on its way to indigo. Our subject is catalysis, and the validity of the whole process depends on a catalytic operation—the mere presence of mercury (or mercury and copper)—in bringing about the easy action of sulphuric acid, in oxidizing naphthalene to phthalic acid, the first step in the process. This interesting essential (the advantageous presence of mercury) was discovered through some mercury found at the bottom of an experimental flask—the result of a broken thermometer!

Through this little accident in 1897 synthetic indigo became a commercial reality, after the "Badische" had spent over $4,500,000 on the plant and preliminary experiments. In 1903 the German export of artificial indigo amounted to $6,250,000. Contraband.

HOW CAPT. JIM TARR CAME TO THE RESCUE.

By a Special Contributor.

CAPT. JIM TARR stood leaning against one of the piles of his wharf, which projected into the smooth water behind the ragged breakwater that protected the fishing habor of Souris. His boats were lying quietly at their moorings and their crews were resting in the bunkhouse. Tarr was taking his evening smoke in the gathering gloom and gazing curiously at a small schooner becalmed about four miles off, just visible against the darkening horizon.

"Bet a quintal of cod," mused Tarr, "that's the Alert. Mack must be off his nut to show that patched mainsail off here in daylight. Smuggling ain't so easy now, since Joe Black was made tide waiter. Suppose they are all about half full on St. Pierre brandy. Wouldn't mind having a swig myself," remarked the brawny skipper, as he sauntered up to his bunkhouse and loaded an ugly-looking cap and ball Colt's 45, which he kept on hand to bluff off bait thieves, shoved it under his pillow, and turned in.

Quietly the night settled on the half-moon bay, and all was silent except the regular breathing of the weary men and the sleepy gurgling of the water around the rocks of the breakwater, while a light air from the south wafted the Alert nearer and nearer the shore.

Capt. Tarr awoke with a start about midnight. Someone was in his room, and his quick challenge, "Who's there?" was ominously accented by the double click of the old Colt, as he brought it to full cock.

"Hold on, Jim, don't shoot!" cried a burly figure, as the scratch of a lucifer showed up his form.

"You, Campton? What the devil do you want here this time of night?" growled Tarr, as he raised himself on his elbow.

"Take it easy, Jim, and first sample this," replied Campton, as he touched his match to a candle on the table and deftly knocked the head off of a bottle of Martell brandy, which he conjured to the light.

"Guess I know where that came from," remarked Tarr, as he got into his overalls. "Pass her over here. Not so bad," he grunted, wiping his mouth with the back of his hand. "Now, what's up?"

"Well, Cap, it's this way: Mack got in tonight——"

"Yes, I thought I saw the consarned fool in the offing before dark," interrupted Tarr.

"Never mind, Jim, we all make mistakes sometimes," conceded Campton, "but it's just this way: He had a lot of contraband from St. Pierre, and just got his boats loaded, when Joe Black caught on and made for him with two revenue boats. Mack dodged him in the darkness, and the boats have gone around the cape, pulling east like mad. Of course they expect to catch him at the old Chepstow caves."

"And, of course they will," said Tarr. "Mack can't get away from those two slick boats, with his two old tubs loaded deep. Well, that settles him. Wish I could help, for he did me a good turn when my packet was ashore last fall."

"Shut up, and help him now, if you want to help at all," said Campton slowly. "Mack dodged them at the breakwater, and his boats are under your wharf this minute."

Tarr was on his feet in a flash, and the "man" asserted himself. "That stuff must be landed and out of sight before daylight. No nonsense now. I have only two men besides Gus that I can trust. How many have you? Four? Well, we'll make it do. Get down lively and get the stuff on the wharf. I'll be there in a hurry," and Tarr gave his brother a shake and quietly roused up two of his "trusties" and shivered out into the starlight.

"Bring that bucket and dipper with you, Gus," and as the quartette stumbled down the wharf, Tarr kicked the cover off a case of brandy, broke a couple of bottles in the bucket, and with a curt "take a drink and get to work" started to boss the job.

"Campton, send one of our boys around the cape and tell him to run back as soon as he sees them returning. He can't miss them, as they will almost touch the shore at the point, and he can get back here half an hour before they can make it around. You, Pat, take the dory and get the seine boat to the wharf, and see that the oars and thole pins are all right. Now for it; rouse that case of brandy over to the old warehouse, lively."

Tarr ran ahead and opened the door, and started shoveling back a five-ton stack of Liverpool salt. Work! You could hear their muscles crack. Fifty cases of brandy were packed and covered up with salt, twenty five-gallon kegs of wine packed nicely in herring barrels, with the fish on top and pickled off to the queen's taste, and all in less than an hour.

But the trouble started when they tried to hide the two big eighty-gallon casks of gin. They got one in a corner, and piled a lot of old barrels over it, and the other one—Tarr had two eighty-gallon gin casks full of cod oil outside of the warehouse door, and just as the last cask of gin was on the wharf, the little Scotchman who kept watch at the cape came running in, breathless.

"They are coming back, skipper," he gasped, "and the tide is with them."

"Six of you in the seine boat, quick," yelled Tarr. "Gus, you clap that cask of gin between the two oil casks, knock out the bung, smear it up a little, and stick the oil funnel in it, I'll stop them off the cape, or they will be here before we get the boats out of the way. Quiet things up all you can."

Tarr sprang into the seine boat and grasped the steering oar. "Give way, boys," he growled. "Pull!" and the white seine boat glided ghostlike around the breakwater, along under the dark timbers, close in by the overhanging cape, and then, clank, clank, clank, clank, sounded the oars of the first revenue boat, nearer and nearer.

"Pull, boys; lay yourselves out, give it to her, break your hearts!" growled Tarr, as the black outline of the revenue boat loomed up through the darkness.

The smooth waters hissed as they parted before the sharp bows of the seine boat. Tarr crouched low in the stern, his grip strong on the steering oar, and with a crash they struck the revenue cutter fair amidship, cutting her half in two. Recoiling from the shock, amid a volley of yells and curses, they left her helpless and full of water, with the crew clinging to her.

"Back her lively now!" hissed Tarr. "Bend your backs!" and, followed by cries for help from the half-drowned revenue men, the seine boat disappeared in the shadows of the cape.

"Good Lord, Cap! You ain't going to leave them drown?" cried one of the oarsmen.

"Drown nothing!" said Tarr. "You couldn't drown those fellows. The other boat will pick them up. Listen, she is coming now," and the answering calls from Joe Black's second boat were clearly heard in reply to the cries for help from the wreck.

"Now, boys, get her around the cape and up the inlet to the bridge, only two miles, and we will leave her by the road and they will swear that Mack stole my boat and had the stuff in her when we struck them, and landed it at Norris Pond," grinned Tarr, but he anxiously watched for the first signs of daylight.

Just as the first lines of silver streaked the east, seven worn-out men crawled into the bunkhouse. Capt. Jim Tarr lit his pipe and waited for his alarm clock to ring for half-past four.

Tarr called his crew as usual and walked down the wharf; the next minute he came back in a fury, yelling that the seine boat was stolen and as the whole excited crew hurried down, the one revenue boat with all of the wrecked crew pulled to the end and made fast.

Tarr was the first to speak. "What in blazes are you fellows doing here this time of day, and where in thunder is my seine boat?" was the opening shot.

"D—— you and your seine boat!" growled Joe Black, as he climbed upon the wharf, followed by his crew and five half-drowned men.

"See here, Tarr, that's the Alert over there, and she has landed a whole raft of stuff from St. Pierre. Last night we missed them, and some fellows in that white boat of yours smashed Alex's boat off the point, and I believe you had a hand in it."

"By gum," mused Tarr, "I bet a barrel of mackerel that Mack stole my boat last night; wonder where he took her to."

"That won't go, Tarr!" cried Black. "Open that fishhouse of yours, I want to look into it."

"Say, Joe," drawled Tarr, "do you take me for a measley smuggler?"

"No matter what I take you for, open that door or I'll break it in."

"You smash that door in and you will get your throat cut!" growled Tarr, as he reached for his sheath knife.

"Open that door, in the name of the Queen!" yelled Joe.

"Oh," said Tarr, "that is another matter. Why, sure, no one can refuse an officer in the name of the Queen. But when a man comes around here like a bloody robber, threatening to smash in my doors, you can't blame me for treating him as such. Get in, my son," said he, taking off the padlock.

The two casks of oil, with the cask of gin between them, lay on their bilges outside the door. Tarr said afterward that he could smell the gin through the oil funnel in the center cask, and that for a few minutes he almost felt the handcuffs on his wrists.

Joe Black walked in, looked around, came back to the door and sat down on the cask of gin, remarking: "Well, Cap, guess I've made a mistake."

"Joe," said Tarr, sadly, "you have always been a friend of mine, and I take this hard, from you—d—— hard."

"Now, don't let us be enemies, Jim," replied Joe. "You know as a revenue officer a fellow has to do some disagreeable things. Give us your hand and call it off."

"All right, Joe," said Tarr, extending his paw. "I suppose it is disagreeable sometimes, but the next time you are after smuggled stuff, just look around some other fellow's place, will you?"

"Sure, Cap," answered Joe, as he started up the cliff.

Capt. Jim Tarr walked up to the bunkhouse with his head thoughtfully low. "Gus," he said, as he entered the room, "any of that Martell left? My nerves are rather worked up."

Extract from the Souris Clarion, June 27, 1871:

"Our esteemed friend Capt. Jim Tarr has recovered his seine boat reported stolen on the night of the 25th., How said boat got into Norris Pond seems somewhat of a mystery. There was an unsually high tide on the 25th, which would fill the inlet enough to float a light boat, but Officer Black claims that she carried a full load of contraband. No loaded boat could pass the narrow inlet above which she was found. Certainly, had she got in with a load it would been dead easy to have moved the goods up the wagon road with teams from where the boat lay high and dry at low tide, but it seems to us that there is a large-sized Ethiopian concealed in some ones winter fuel. Capt. Tarr maintains a dignified silence. Officer Black is scouring the country for a lot of St. Pierre, 'kill me quick,' which some say only exists in his imagination. The schooner, Alert, Capt. Mack, entered at customhouse yesterday with fifteen barrels herring and ballast from Fortune Bay, Newfoundland. Several hilarious jags have been reported lying loose around the breakwater. But the chief topic of interest is who smashed Aleck's boat." R. G. FULLER.

Faith and Unfaith.

A LITTLE COMEDY OF LOVE AND COURTSHIP.

By a Special Contributor.

THEY were alone in the summer woods—this man and this woman, and their hearts were rich with melodies as birds' throats are rich with song. Love was maestoso, the future the keyboard.

Among the rocks of a nearby crag, a pair of mourning doves were cooing an evening hymn. Crested with gold by the departing sun were the mountains. In cañons, shadows huddled like affrighted things. Pine trees shook their tasseled heads in half-disapproval, as merry winds rushed by. On a granite wall that rose staunchly to greet the turbulent river, and clinging as fervently as hope clings to life, wild ferns laughed at the torrent's wet breath.

"No woman on earth could make me as happy as you." He held her close, while the bay tree that canopied their trysting place, rustled its foliage sympathetically and crowded its fragrance about them. "Years ago, I had many fancies," he continued. "Those were days when loves grew on me as leaves grow on trees, and dropped as readily. But our love," he spoke eagerly, earnestly, "will grow stronger, richer—it will scorn the ages as they gallop by. Once I was engaged to be married. I believe I really loved that woman. What strange specimens of event the gray past holds."

He became sadly, thoughtfully quiet.

Into the woman's happiness, uninvited, unsought and unwelcomed, crept grief and suspicion. As the gold faded from the mountain's crest with the going of the sun, so joy disappeared from her face, leaving it strangely bleak.

"How could he—how dared he—think of another woman now?" she thought drearily.

She felt both anger and sorrow. Her youth made her impatient and impulsive. She wanted to run away from him—she wanted to stay—for she longed as only a nature intense with the intensity of life can long, for happiness, peace and her soul's equivalent—love. There was a curious combination of pathos, spitefulness and dread in her voice, as she asked:

"You still care for her? You have not forgotten?"

The words, scarce audible, sighed with their burden of heart's woe. In the dim twilight she eagerly scanned his face, as a seaman peers through a turmoil of storm for a light that will guide him home. Her voice scattered his reveries as winds scattered the dry, gray leaves at their feet.

"My dear girl!" He caught her in close embrace. "All that is history. The pages are rusty and faded from neglect and age. Some time I will tell you all about the affair, but not now. It happened long ago. It was impossible for me to marry her, though she was sorry and plead for forgiveness. When I lost faith, she lost my love. She went away. Two months ago she returned, just twelve years since we parted. She immediately wrote a note asking me to call, quite as if nothing had happened—as if we had loved but yesterday."

"You did not go?" The woman's voice was weighted with pained perplexity.

"Yes, dear; I couldn't be hard-hearted and indifferent. The girl has suffered, God knows. I talked with her but an hour."

"Did you kiss her? Surely you couldn't help it if you once loved her so."

She disentangled herself from her lover's embrace, and thoroughly oppressed by the heinousness of her thoughts, leaned against the trunk of the old tree.

"Positively, little girl, I believe you're jealous! Nonsense!" and he half-laughed, half-sighed as he looked into the sweet face "Kiss her—no! There was no word of love. She did attempt to recall old times, but I stopped her quickly. I told her bluntly and frankly that she and I could be nothing but friends. She is a queer girl. I don't know whether she was hurt or not. She made no sign. After that the conversation was strictly conventional." Then as if forgetting the existence of anything in the world but her, he held out his arms entreatingly. "Come dear."

She seemed not to hear. She was looking toward the foaming stream that leaped from boulder to boulder. He watched her lovingly, caressingly, puzzled at her mood. After a moment she spoke.

"You are not going again?"

"I think I must. Her father and mother are dead and she has a struggle to get on."

"Who does she live with?"

"She lives with an old friend. Next time I call I will tell her I have you. Perhaps she thinks I am still free, and that there is a possibility of the old quarrel being forgotten. But I don't see how she could have such a foolish notion, after what I told her." He spoke the last words slowly and thoughtfully.

"But what possible good can result from these visits?" asked the girl pleadingly, half-impatiently. "The old sweetheart evidently loves you as well as ever, and your going will only make her love you more, will encourage a belief that you care for her—will make her sorrow at eventually and finally losing you greater."

"But I have told her the firm, plain, unalterable truth—that my love is dead, absolutely, for all time. If she has any sense at all she must understand. But, my dear, you must believe in me and trust me." Tenderly he leaned toward her and scanned her face for promise. "Tears, my child? Look into my face, into my eyes, into my soul. Can you see anything there but yourself and love? As for this other woman, I see her but seldom. She has few social pleasures, and my visits seem to cheer her up. Why, I would as soon take you with me next time I call! Will you go?"

"No!" sadly and just a trifle spitefully. "If you must go, you would beter go alone."

To the girl his proposition was repulsive. There could be no pleasure in a meeting between this sweetheart of years ago and the sweetheart of today. Some wretched thing seemed to be stifling her, but through it all, reason demanded a hearing. She felt her thoughts were an injustice—a miserable, selfish accusation.

"I must—I will trust him!" she declared to herself, with a mighty effort.

Moonlight dripped through the branches and fell in golden pools about them. An owl in passing, flapped the air and weirdly cried. She reached out her arms, drew his cheek against her own, and let her fingers wander caressingly over his face and hair.

"Dearest, I do trust you, and always will, but there is something that hurts, something that—oh, I can't express it!" she said despairingly. "Do what you think best. You can do no wrong. But if you do visit this girl, don't tell me of it. It is best for me, best for you—best for our happiness, that I do not know."

"But I ought to tell you. I should tell you everything," he said, with emphasis.

"No—no, not that, anything else." She spoke vehemently.

She then began to muse over an incident that had taken place several weeks before, when together they had started for a dinner party at the home of a mutual friend. She remembered he had spoken laughingly of an old sweetheart—now a thin old maid—whom he had left taking tea with his sister. "A thin old maid," she soliloquized, half-happily. "If she is really that, I needn't be afraid." Then as if to prove to her own heart that this girl was unattractive, though it did seem entirely unlikely that a "thin old maid" would be extensively wooed, she asked:

"Has this girl other men friends?"

"Yes, indeed, she has many admirers," he replied, with enthusiasm.

The woman thrust her hands deep among the twigs and leaves that carpeted their resting place. Thorns pierced the tender flesh, but she gave no heed except to the dull pain in her heart. A warm woody wind hurried past. Was it that which made her shiver? In the dim light she scrutinized her lover's face. Her thoughts were ugly, mutinous things. Her reason shamed them. Her conscience rebelled. Yet they persisted in fighting her happiness.

"There is every reason why your old sweetheart should try to win you back," she insisted, doggedly and morosely. "Years ago, when you were engaged to her, you were poor, without money or prospects; now you have influence and wealth. You are everything splendid and good—a man in a million." With the last words her remembrance of the other woman seemed to disappear. Her face lightened. She spoke with the pride and joy of possession.

"You are proud of me, little girl? I hope I shall always prove worthy," he said earnestly, "but I am a strange fellow. You may learn to hate me as you know me better. I have lived a bachelor so long that I have formed some queer notions. You must try and be patient with me. I want your love. I need it. You are everything to me." He gathered both her hands in his. He bent close—so close that his breath rippled the pale masses of her hair. In his enthusiasm he was almost vehement. "Dearest, you will trust me. You must trust me—must remember always, whatever happens, that I love you. You must never forget."

The girl sighed, and happily. She kissed his lips lightly, half-coquettishly. This was her answer.

Springing up, she shook the dead leaves from her skirt, and in a dreamy, semi-tender fashion, brushed from her sleeve a little green caterpillar that had tumbled from the foliage above. Then turning to him, she said:

"Come, dear, we must go."

The man rose unwillingly, saying with regret: "And so we must go. How the hours do fly when we are together! They speed through happiness as a train speeds through some beautiful country."

He stepped out of shadow into the moonlit trail, and stood beside the little woman he loved so dearly. He took her face into his two hands, tipping it so he could look deep into her eyes.

"If there were no others in the world but you and me." He spoke softly, tenderly. "If we could only stay here a thousand years—here in the forest, as free and untrammeled as the torrent that rides through gorges and leaps through space—as happy as the water ousel!"

Just then a delicious bit of bird song mingled with the voice of the stream. "Hark!" They leaned forward to listen. "Look, dear." He indicated the direction with his hand. "In that shaft of moonlight that glints the granite wall, is his nest. See, the mist hangs about it like the veil of a bridal. Why, oh why, must we go? Here all is happiness and music. At home in the valley we must eternally struggle with ambitions—struggle to keep pace with our neighbors, or the world will think us lazy and inconsequent. But of what use are dreams? Come, sweetheart."

She took the hand he extended, and the old moon beamed approvingly, as side by side they followed the forest path, which led through fern glens and wildflower patches. Sometimes oaks canopied the lovers, sometimes willows and alders and sycamores, while the mischievous stream, as it pranced beside them, tossed its irised spray into their faces. Near the mouth of the cañon the path merged into a well-defined road—the highway of woodchoppers, miners, picnickers and searchers for water rights, which led from the gate of the mountain to the vortex of commercial life in the valley below.

"Well, dear, here we are," he sighed [illegible]
they reached the woman's home. Now they were [illegible] over his arm, the horses waiting impatiently.

"Good-by," she said softly, as if afraid the [illegible] houses might hear and understand.

"Not good-by, dear—but good-night." He waited until she disappeared into the house, and for some [illegible] after stood looking, a silent dreamer. Was it [illegible] was it love, was it happiness that held him captive?

Several days later, they were speeding over the [illegible] dusty roads toward the mountains, where cool [illegible] and woodsy fragrance enticed. They descended [illegible] wide arroyo that emerged from a cañon and [illegible]

Under a widespreading oak they stopped to rest. [illegible] woman tossed her hat on the ground, and with a [illegible] sigh dropped beside it. With hands clasped behind [illegible] head, she leaned against the tree and looked through [illegible] interlacing foliage to the blue sky above. Some [illegible] indefinable emotion mastered her.

"God is indeed good," she mused. "He has given [illegible] love—given me rest—given me happiness."

The man bent close. He would have kissed her.

"No, dear, not now;" and impulsively she drew [illegible] from the proffered caress.

About this nature spot with its scenic splendor, [illegible] her happiness, seemed to be wreathed a sacred [illegible]

His sight followed hers through the clustering [illegible] sky. Again she was silent. What joy could compare [illegible] this? The bond of their love seemed unbreakable, [illegible]

nal. But the woman's thoughts were capricious. [illegible] suddenly swerved from the ideal to the common [illegible] the practical, the human. Taking her lover's hand [illegible] a quaint, caressing way, that made him feel he was [illegible]
most fortunate man on earth, she said:

"I am just a little troubled, dear." Her face [illegible]

The woman drew a quick breath. "You don't [illegible]
You want him to come?" Her voice was strained [illegible] affair?" she questioned herself wretchedly.

"Of course I don't care, dear. Why should I? [illegible] am going to ask that you say nothing of our [illegible] ment. I have always been very secretive, perhaps [illegible] queer, but I don't want any one to know about [illegible]

"Very well," replied the woman coldly. "I will [illegible] you wish. I will write and tell him to come."

"But, dear, I didn't say I wanted him to come—"

"Have you told your sister we are to be married?" [illegible] interrupted.

"Why, no, dear, but I will."

"And your old sweetheart—does she know? [illegible] promised you would let her know." The [illegible] voice was full of suppressed tears and griefs [illegible] aches. What did he mean by this rigorous [illegible]

"Well, I thought it all over," he replied, "and I [illegible] up my mind it was none of her business, so I [illegible] speak of it."

Intuitively he realized her unhappiness. [illegible] grieved to have hurt her so. He tried to gather [illegible] him, to make her understand how much he cared, [illegible] repulsed him.

"Then you have seen her, have spent an evening [illegible] her this week?"

"Yes," he answered, quite unabashed. "I went [illegible]

The Tompkins Family.

THERE IS NO BLOT UPON THEIR ESCUTCHEON.

By a Special Contributor.

THE Tompkins or Tomkins are of both English and Welsh descent.

The name originally Thomas, has the variations Tomkin, Tomkyns, Tompkyns, Tomkinson, Tompkinson, Tomkis, Tomkys and Tompkisson.

The Welsh branch of the family call Sir Hugh Treherne their founder, or more properly speaking, he was the founder of the Thomas family, and a valiant knight who was with the Black Prince at Poitiers.

In Yorkshire, England, the name appears as Tampkins.

One lost his life in his sovereign's cause—"Mr. Tompkins, gentleman of Holborn," the name appears on the records. His Christian name is supposed to have been Nathaniel.

He was tried at Guildhall, June 30, 1643, upon the charge that, with five others, he had entered, in the interests of Charles I, into a plot against the Parliament of England. He lost his head, but his name comes down to us as one loyal to his King. Particulars of his trial and his speech from the scaffold are preserved.

The Tompkinses have always been noted for musical ability. Indeed, it has been said that the family has produced more musicians than any other family in England. The organist of the chapel royal was Thomas Tompkins, who in 1625, "was paid 40 shillings for the composing of many songs against the coronation of King Charles." Much of his manuscript is preserved in the British Museum.

John Tomkins, who died in 1796, writer, made the first attempt at Quaker biography in his "Piety Promoted." William Tomkins was an artist, and also his son Peltro, who was portrait painter to George III, and drawing master to the princesses.

Jan. 06 14

One of the first of the name in this country was Micah Tompkins, who with his wife Mary came from England about 1639, settling in Wethersfield, Conn., going from there to Milford, of which he was one of the founders, and where his name appears upon the records as a freeman, with a house lot of two acres, one rood and twenty rods. It is said that for two years he secreted in the basement of his shop the regicides Whalley and Goffe.

In May, 1666, he was one of a company of eleven to purchase from the Indians the site upon which Newark, N. J., now stands; he was also one of the committee to build Newark's first church. Much data of these sturdy pioneers, which included the Cranes and Treats, is preserved by the New Jersey Historical Society.

Other pioneer fathers were John Tompkins, who also came from England—some of the Pilgrim ancestors were from Wales.

John found a home in Concord, Mass., 1640, and he was one of the colony that founded Fairfield, Conn., in 1644.

Another Connecticut pioneer was Edmund of Waterbury. Another New Jersey father was Charles, born in London, 1747. The founder of the New York branch of the family was Nathaniel, who settled at Eastchester about 1680. Nathaniel, it may be noted, is a favorite family name.

A branch of the family also settled in Virginia—John and his wife Annie Tompkins, who was his cousin. They removed to Kentucky, in 1794, being among pioneers of the date. He left a large estate.

The Rhode Island family descended from Nathaniel, who married, 1671, Elizabeth Allen. Nine years later his taxes were 7 shillings. The value of his estate was £87 10s. 6d. To each of his daughters, Elizabeth, Priscilla, Sarah, Rebecca and Hannah, he left a cow. To his sister, a "piece of gold and rights in a black cow."

Of course, it is not forgotten that the family has its Governor—the "great war Governor," he is called, who was also Vice-President of the United States with Monroe. This was Daniel D. Tompkins, who was offered by President Madison the portfolio of Secretary of State, an honor which was declined.

Gov. Tompkins was the patriot of the second war with Great Britain—1812. Like Morris of Revolutionary days, he raised by personal effort, large sums of money for the government, when the nation was unable to negotiate a loan on its own credit, thus rendering a notable service to his country.

His father, Jonathan, is remembered as one of three loyal Americans, who lived in Westchester county, New York, during the Revolution.

Although Judge Tompkins may not have believed in the ballot for women, it is on record that "he was able by his affability to gain the good will of the female sex, who possess no vote, but often exercise a powerful indirect influence." He was an incorporator of New York City's schools, and one of the founders of the New York Historical Society.

The Governor's nephew, Daniel, was in the Seminole War. William Ward Tompkins also served with distinction through this war. He was a veteran of the War of 1812, and won further renown in the Mexican War. His wife was a Floyd of the family of Floyd, signer of the Declaration.

Mayflower ancestry may be claimed by the descendants of Jay Tompkins, through his wife.

The descendants of Jonathan Griffin Tompkins may claim membership with the Society of Revolutionary Sires, and also with the Sons of the American Revolution, for he was adjutant of the Westchester County militia, member of Legislature during the Revolution, and present at the adoption of the Declaration of Independence.

Characteristics of the family are integrity, with love of justice and love of liberty. Many have shone through brilliant wit and conversational powers. The women have possessed beauty, grace and polished manners, if we may credit old records. Nor is all this placed in the past. There are still brave men and beautiful women of the name. Nearly all have been well educated, and many have possessed great wealth.

A story is told of one Judge Tompkins of Kentucky. He thought his servants were neglecting their work, and that the crops were suffering. So he determined to administer a rebuke in person, and show of what stuff he, the master of the place, was made. In a high state of indignation he prepared for the onset one morning, dressing himself as usual in a fine ruffled shirt, flowered waistcoat, knee breeches and so on. Then he sallied forth. His eye fell upon the flax patch, so he went to pulling flax, every motion betraying his utter ignorance of the work, and doing more damage in a half-hour than could be repaired in a day. The scorching sun finally routed him, and he returned to the house vowing a great vow that it was his last experiment in active farming. He never had his own pigs killed, for he said it was easier to buy, and what would his poor neighbors do if they could not fall back upon his pigs.

The arms reproduced is azure, on a chevron between three moorcocks close or, as many cross—crosslets sable. Crest, a ship under full sail.

This belongs to the Sussex, England, Tompkins, and was used by Jonathan Griffin Tompkins, that is, the arms, his crest was a unicorn's head per fesse argent and or, armed and manned of the last, with a chaplet of laurel oert.

The ship would point to some notable expedition by sea, by which the first bearer of the arms had become famous.

A FAMILY IN THE FOREST.

PROF. EDWARD ALLEN'S HOME ON SLOPES OF MOUNT RAINIER.

[Seattle Correspondence New York Tribune:] Nestled among the big trees far up on the slopes of Mount Rainier lives the so-called "Hermit of the Cascades, Prof. Edward Allen, formerly an instructor at Yale, and known to many scientific institutions as one of the most active botanists of the Pacific Coast.

Prof. Allen does not live alone, in spite of his title of "hermit," for when he suffered a sunstroke about seventeen years ago, and his physician decided that he must live in the open, but not in the sun, his wife readily agreed to the plan of isolating themselves in the Far West, and she accompanied him to Ashford, Wash., near which they picked out a charming break in the forest, and where they have since made their home. There were three sons in the family, then youngsters. They are now in the forestry commission service, and obtained their training under their father on the slopes of Mount Rainier.

Although their home is many miles from the nearest habitation and the trails leading to it are difficult to find, they have visitors every summer, for botanists from all over the world make the trip to Ashford to see Prof. Allen.

The long one-story cabin in which they live is surrounded by about five acres of cleared land. On it they raise what they can toward obtaining a living. But it is by his discoveries now and then of rare and unique specimens of plant life that Prof. Allen lives. He sends his specimens to the leading institutions of the East and Europe, and in the remuneration received enjoys a sufficient income to keep their little home in comforts, and even luxuries, for ordinary things are luxuries there. The cabin is almost covered by vines and flowers. Roses grow in this country to a marvelous beauty, and are found everywhere about the cabin. The flower gardens, which occupy about half an acre, would be a credit to the most efficient gardener.

It is in such surroundings that Prof. Allen and his wife, both now well along in years, with white hair, declare they enjoy life to the fullest extent, and nothing can persuade them to give up their home among the giant trees. There they wish to end their days.

A Poor Provider.

"NO man," said Jerome K. Jerome, "should marry unless he is by nature a 'good provider'—unless without a twinge he can hand forth money right and left.

"Some men can in a sunny, cheerful way spend $10 or $15 on a dinner in a fashionable restaurant, while they become morose, sour and fearful for the future when they are obliged to give their wives a dollar or two for the day's meat.

"These men should remain single. Otherwise they will make such husbands and fathers as my old friend, Crust.

"Crust's daughter said one afternoon, in a tone of unutterable surprise:

"'Papa went away quite gay and cheerful this morning.'

"Mrs. Crust made an exclamation of annoyance.

"'That reminds me,' she said. 'I forgot to ask him for any money.'" Appropriate.

SENATOR PLATT had finished testifying before the Insurance Investigating Committee.

"You did well," said a spectator.

"I fear not," said the Senator. "It is hard to shine as a witness. Whenever I am called on to give testimony, I think with envy of an old man of Owego.

"This old man in the witness box was never at a loss. In one case, some thirty years ago, he succeeded in greatly exasperating a lawyer who was cross-examining him.

"Finally, beside himself with rage, the lawyer shouted at the old man:

"'Why do you make such foolish answers?'

"The old man murmured apologetically:

"'You ask such foolish questions, sir.'"

Very Funny Indeed.

S. V. HENKELS, Philadelphia's expert on autographs and books, said at a sale, apropos of embarrassment:

"That reminds me of a little girl out in Germantown.

"There was company to dinner at her house one night, and the little girl, pointing to her plate, said in a loud voice:

"'Oh, mamma, what is this?'

"The thing was a hair, but the mother, red with confusion, still had enough ready wit left to say:

"'Hush, dear; that is a crack in the plate.'

"The child cried in a still louder voice:

"'Oh, mamma, look! I can move this crack about! Isn't that funny?'"

Noise Only.

SENATOR DRYDEN of New York said of a certain article on life insurance in a review:

"It is like the wild waves."

"Like the wild waves?"

"Yes. Precisely. Two philosophers, a male and a female, were walking on a deserted beach. The female philosopher murmured dreamily:

"'What are the wild waves saying?'

"The male philosopher answered in a hoarse, gruff voice:

"'Nothing, Matilda. They are like some people we know. They make a lot of noise, but they don't say anything.'"

Wind.

LIEUT. BEVAN, of the Drake, was talking at the New York Horse Show about rough weather.

Some one told the old story about the winter day when it was so windy that the crows all had to walk home.

Lieut. Bevan laughed at this story, saying he could see the black crows trudging along the road against the wind. Then he went on:

"But that wind could have been nothing to one that my boatswain talks about.

"'This wind,' the boatswain declares, 'came on in the Bay of Biscay, and it blew so hard that it took four men to hold the captain's hat on, and even then it blew all the anchors off the buttons of his coat.'"

These Explanations.

SENATOR FORAKER, at a dinner in Washington, quoted with a laugh an extravagant and incredible statement that he had read in a magazine.

"But, Senator, allow me to explain that," said a Western politician, and the man gave forthwith an explanation that was fairly plausible.

But Senator Foraker laughed again.

"The thing is preposterous," he said, "and all the explanations in the world won't alter its preposterousness. These explainers! They are never at a loss, are they? They remind me of old James Scarlett, of Rainsboro.

"There was nothing which James Scarlett of Rainsboro could not explain.

"One winter night he was reading a volume of the 'Seaside Library' to his family gathered about the fireside. With his spectacles on his nose he droned along like this:

"'Gwendolen de Vere Hastings lowered her limpid blue eyes, and Lord Algernon Mannering took her slim white hands in his, and crushed her to him in a passionate embrace.

"'At that moment five minutes past 12 sounded from the castle belfry, and——'

"But here young Miss Scarlett interrupted.

"'No clock could strike five minutes past 12,' she said.

"'Certainly it could,' James snorted. 'It was five minutes slow.'"

Too Finicky.

PROF. M. E. JAFFA of the University of California, is conducting at Oakland a series of experiments with the object of increasing the laying power of the hen.

Prof. Jaffa has already secured some remarkable laying records. In discussing these records, he said the other day:

"Cleanliness is a prime factor in successful chicken farming. Keep the runs clean, dry, cheerful, and your hens will do their duty by you nobly.

"In fact, to make hens lay well, it is almost necessary to carry neatness to the finicky point—to be as finicky as the old lady with the aquarium.

"This old lady did not merely keep the aquarium neat, the glass spotless, the stones at the bottom snowy, but it was said of her that every Saturday night she took the fish out and gave them a bath."

Too Much for Him.

NIKOLA TESLA, the noted electrician and inventor, was showing a group of young ladies over his magnificent laboratory.

In front of an ordinary reading light he paused and said:

"When this type of light came out, I had in my employ a young fellow called Charles.

"Charles, the first time he saw one of these lights burning, said to me:

"'Sure, Mr. Tesla, 'and what's that?'

"'That,' said I, 'is electricity, Charles.'

"He frowned and shook his head.

"'Very good,' he said. 'Very good. But I'll be hanged if I don't think it takes more than electricity to make the hairpin burn in the bottle.'"

These Smugglers!

COMMISSIONER JAMES R. GARFIELD, at a dinner in Chicago, told a story of Adam Black, the founder of the well-known publishing house.

"One day a short time after Mr. Black had opened his book shop," he said, "a rough-looking man entered stealthily, leaned over the counter, winked, and whispered in Mr. Black's ear:

"'I've got some fine smuggled whisky that ye can have at a great bargain.'

"'Go away,' said Mr. Black. 'I want nothing of that kind. You are a bad man. Go away.'

"But the smuggler must have doubted the sincerity of this repulse, for now, leaning over the counter again, he whispered still more earnestly:

"'I'll take prayer-books for it.'"

She Won.

"THE late Hezekiah Butterworth," said a Boston journalist, "had a high opinion of a woman's wit. He liked to prove woman man's superior in fancy, in humor, in retort.

"He related one day to me a quarrel between a married couple that he had overheard in the subway.

"This couple got on at Scolley Square, and rode in Mr. Butterworth's direction.

"'There is no calamity which can befall a woman that I have not suffered,' the lady said in a bitter voice.

"'There you are wrong, Jane,' the husband replied. 'You have never been a widow.'

"She frowned upon him as she rejoined:

"'I said "calamity," sir.'"

A Card Sharp.

JOHN S. MAGUIRE, the Dayton meat dealer who has for years been fighting the beef trust, was talking in his office one day about the trust's methods.

"For unblushing and unashamed misconduct," he said, "this trust reminds me of a poor young man who had proposed to a millionaire's daughter.

"The girl liked the fellow, but his poverty frightened her.

"'Think of the future, dear,' she said. 'You are poor. You can give me none of the luxuries to which I have been accustomed from my childhood.'

"'But your father——' he began.

"'Alas! he would do nothing for us,' she interrupted.

"'Does he play poker?' the youth asked.

"'No.'

"He smiled confidently at that, and took her hand in his.

"'Then,' he said, 'I'll teach him. Put your trust in me, love, and fear for the future not at all.'"

Might Have Made a Difference.

"THE late Bishop Thomas Frederick Davies of Detroit," said a Detroit man, "once told me an interesting story of an elopement. He figured in this elopement as the officiating clergyman. It was in Philadelphia, during his rectorship of St. Peter's.

"It seems that the proprietor of one of the largest dry goods houses in Philadelphia had noticed for some months the melancholy of his head clerk, a young man whom he held in high regard.

"The clerk's pallor and increasing leanness, his frequent sighs and absent-mindedness worried the milli aire proprietor. He questioned the young And finally the young man admitted to him th in love.

"'Then,' said the head, 'elope with her.'

"'Do you advise that?' the clerk asked

"'Yes. She will be at your dance at Devon night.'

Retrenching.

IT was Mrs. Hetty Green's seventieth birthday.

"Madam," said an interviewer, "will you tell how you account for your success?"

"By being different," Mrs. Green answered. "By getting as much knowledge as possible, and by working anything I undertake as hard as possible."

She smiled grimly.

"I have been different from a New Bedford girl, friend of my childhood.

"This girl, though she married a poor man, gave more thought to money than a child.

"Her husband one day opened a letter, turned and said reproachfully:

"'My dear, it was only last month that I paid a milliner's bill of $75, and here is another one for $ month.'

"She smiled at him.

"'Well,' she said, 'that shows that I am beginning spend less.'"

An Unique Pleasure.

A. J. DREXEL BIDDLE, whose book on Madeira one of the standard works that deal with the had been talking about the trouble which has arisen tween Germany and Portugal over the German rium at Funchal.

"Madeira is a delightful place," he said. "One of greatest, one of its strangest delights is coasting. coast down the steep mountain sides in a wicker with wooden runners, and so fast do you go that times your runners smoke, sometimes they even into flame.

"This coasting in Madeira's May-like weather strange pleasure. I can't describe its strangeness reminds me——"

He smiled.

"It reminds me in its strangeness of a Christmas that was sent last month to a certain maiden lady.

"The gift was sent to her by her nephew, and ward he described it thus:

"'At first I could not think of anything to give Mary for Christmas, and then, suddenly, I remem that she was an old maid, wholly unacquainted with grand passion, and so, in order to give her an pleasure, I sent her an anonymous love letter.'"

How to Live in London.

MRS. CRAIGIE, as John Oliver Hobbes is known real life, had finished her lecture at Bryn College, and now she was surrounded by a number students. These charming girls, their rose-leaf lons, bright hair, and clear eyes enhanced by the black of their gowns and mortar-boards, questioned Craigie with respectful curiosity.

"You live in London, don't you?" one said.

"Yes, I live in London; in Lancaster Gate," Mrs. Craigie replied.

"In Lancaster Gate in the West End?"

"Yes," said Mrs. Craigie, smiling.

"But on account of the fogs and the damp, living London, even in the West End, is horrible, isn't it?" a young girl.

"Oh, not at all," said Mrs. Craigie. "If one spends summer in the country and the winter on the London is a delightful place to live in."

MARK TWAIN, at a dinner in New York, story from his native town of Hannibal, Mo.

"There are in the world," he said, "a good many like Jonathan Scarborough of Hannibal.

"Scarborough was one of those men, with nothing absolutely known against them, who are yet looked and no doubt justly, with suspicion.

"It was thought of Scarborough that, for a poor he ate too much chicken. And one day the blow He was arrested for chicken stealing.

"A witness was called to testify about Scarb character.

"'Did you ever know this man to steal poultry?' the lawyer for the defense.

"'No, I never did,' said the witness. 'But this I do know: If I was a chicken, and Jonathan ough was about, I'd roost high.'"

THEY WHISPER A MESSAGE OF HOPE TO THE PRODIGAL SON.

It was a half-holiday, and Ralph Foster was spending it wandering up and down the shady avenues out toward the suburbs of the city. He had expected to find some enjoyment in this exercise, after the close confinement of a book-keeper's desk in a downtown office, but instead of affording him pleasure it only intensified his disgust with the world in general and himself in particular.

He had not realized what a dreary drag it would be from day to day when he had, after two years of wild, gay life in another city, suddenly left his rollicking companions and commenced an entirely different life in this strange place. His old comrades searched in vain for any clue to the reason for his sudden disappearance. They never found any. It had been such a little thing. The boys had planned an evening's fun, with rather more than the usual amount of dubious amusement in it, and they were making joking little allusions to it as they sat at the restaurant table. Suddenly Harry Vaughn had rolled his eyes to the ceiling in mock solemnity.

"What would mamma say?" he exclaimed, his deep bass voice changing to a high falsetto.

There was a shout of laughter, in which all joined except Ralph. None of the boys noticed the change in his face, but a girl just leaving the restaurant saw, unnoticed, and looked straight into his eyes with a half-conscious appeal. It was only for an instant, yet in some mysterious way it showed him how far he had strayed from innocence and purity.

For six months he had kept the sudden resolution which he then formed, but the dull monotony of the life he was leading threatened to be too galling to be endured, and as he wandered about on this sunny day, feeling his friendlessness among the happy homes which seemed to hold a cheery welcome for every one save himself, he was fairly sick with discouragement.

A gate clicked, and a lady passing out turned toward him. Glancing up, he noticed that she had a strong, sweet face. Attracted by her quiet beauty, he watched her furtively for a moment, and then his eyes dropped, and in her hands he saw—a bunch of violets. He did not realize that he was looking at the violets eagerly, yes, hungrily, until she stopped and held them out.

"Take them," she said simply. "I am sure you will enjoy them."

"I beg your pardon for my rudeness," he said hastily, his cheeks burning. "Thank you. I won't take them, though I am very fond of violets."

"Yes?" She seemed to expect him to say something more, and her smile was full of sympathy.

"You see," somehow he couldn't help telling her, "mother always had them, and I haven't seen any like these for three years. Perhaps I was feeling a little homesick."

Once more she held the violets out to him, adding to their silent appeal: "Please take them!" He almost thought there were tears in her eyes, but of course there couldn't be. "I love them, too, and I have them every day," she said gently. "My mother left them for me. She's up among God's violet beds now." There was no doubt about the tears at last, but she was smiling bravely through them.

"Thank you!" he said softly. "I'll take them."

He turned, and walking swiftly down the street, entered a quiet park. Here he threw himself into a seat, and lifting the violets, breathed in their dainty fragrance. Then, looking in their faces, a magic spell was wrought, and he saw them no more, but instead he saw the half-forgotten scenes of which they spoke. He saw himself, a tiny toddler, stealing out to the violet bed and pulling up the violets, roots and all. When his mother found him, she snapped his fingers (very softly) and then kissed them when he promised that he would be very good.

It was a year or two later that he was very ill and mother kept fresh violets by his bedside every day. When he stubbornly refused his medicine they were taken away, but it was never for very long. As soon as the horrid stuff was gulped down, the violets came back and smiled at him and did their best to cheer him.

Later still, he remembered picking every violet in all the beds one happy birthday, and helping mother to make them into dainty buttonhole bouquets for each of the little friends who helped him celebrate. Life had been pure and sweet and joyous in those happy boyhood days. Could it ever be so to him again?

The violets, at least, had not changed. Somehow they seemed to be all intermingled with his mother's love and kisses. She had pinned them on his coat for every festive occasion, and the pinning process had always ended in a kiss. The last violet and the last kiss—three long years ago! How could he have left her for so long? And it was months since he had written. Was it fair to his mother to treat her so? What was it she said, as she pinned the last violet on his coat and kissed him good-by? "Whenever you see violets, dear, they will remind you of mother's love and mother's welcome, always waiting you in the old home."

He closed his eyes, and seemed to see her, a little older, a little more feeble, watching down the lane at twilight, after the southbound train came through, always hoping, going in to tea a little more weary each night, but without a doubt that soon, perhaps tomorrow, she'd see him come swinging up the lane and feel his strong arms gather her to his heart.

He started up, and hastily counting the bills in his pocketbook, ran out to the street and hailed a passing cab.

"To the Union depot, and don't waste any time about it!"

Away they rattled to the station, and were just in time to catch the southbound train.

A night and a day of alternating hope and fear, joy and dread. Would the little mother be waiting, or had she perhaps grown too weary? Through the long hours of the night, as the train sped onward in the darkness, one soul drank to the dregs the bitter cup of remorse and repentance. As the morning light broke clear and fresh, the chains of evil desire which had held him were rent asunder, and the future in that light was full of promise.

The little mother gathered violets for the tea table with a new eagerness. There were more than usual, and she arranged them in quaint, shallow dishes in all the rooms. In his room she put them. The others, watching, turned aside to hide their tears. They thought that her mind was failing under the constant strain of watching, and the daily disappointment.

She dressed in pure white, and went out to the gate before the most distant rumble of the train could be heard. So impatient was she that she could not stand waiting at the gate, but went on down the quiet lane.

At last the train came thundering in to the tiny station, stood there puffing a moment, and then went on. The little mother hurried along the meadow path, and climbing the stile, strained her eyes into the darkness. Her quick ears caught the sound of footsteps—not walking, but running!

"Ralph!" her clear voice rang out in glad assurance.

"Mother! Oh, mother! Dear little mother, how did you know I was coming?"

"I think the violets told me," she answered softly.

COMO EVA, NACIO TAMBIEN EN UN PARAISO.

Por Especial Contribuyente.

EVA, su nombre lo dice, divina como la mujer primera, formada por la voluntad infinita del Creador. Nacida no en el palacio majestuoso de una ciudad populosa y laberenta, sino en un paraiso de flores y de aromas, habitado por ondinas y querubes, al pié de una encumbrada montaña coronada por los hielos en el invierno y vestida de matices a las primeras lluvias de la primavera.

Asi es pues, tan pronto como abrio los ojos, ya se vio rodeada de los prodigios y bellezas inimitables de la naturaleza. Justo es que en ella se hubieran reconcentrado todos sus encantos y toda su hermosura.

Pasados los primeros años de una niñez absolutamente pura y sin inquietudes, Eva, comenzaba a desarrollarse sorprendentemente, y a sentir esa necesidad imperiosa de amar. Iba a las orillas de un pequeñó lago, y al verse tan linda, diremos, una beldad, poseida de un orgullo sin limites, decia como Luzbel, "Quién como yo?"

En sus horas intimas algunas veces lloraba por mas que ignorara el motivo de sus lagrimas. Enteras pasaba las tardes contemplandose en el lago y parecia poseerse de desesperacion al hallarse tan hermosa y tan sola. Por las manañas su delicia era que los primeros rayos de sol la sorprendieran alli juntito al agua dejando a ésta que ciñera con sus cristales sus piés blancos.

Un dia, después de mirarse por milesima vez en aquel "espejo liquido," penso que de nada servia la lisura de su cutis si no habia quien la tocara, ni el amor inflamante de su pecho, ni sus labios quemantes si no habia quien los besara; una ira que hasta entonces le fué desconocida se apodero de su alma y llena de indignacion y de ternurá exclamo:

"Señor; para que me diste un alma de fuego y me hiciste tan hermosa si habias de condenarme a este aislamiento? para que si ibas a tenerme aqui apartada del mundo y de sus goces?"

"Todo lo que me rodea es bello y sublime, y respira amor, pero ninguna de estas cosas me comprenden: yo necesito algo que no puedo explicar."

"No me hiciste semejante a la mujer primera?" Pues entonces dame un compañero con quien disfrute de los dones de éste suelo, a quien le diga los secretos del corazon que late tanto; desde hace tiempo me siento preocupada, y estoy sin sosiego.

"Dime, cual es la causa de todas mis angustias?"

"Las aguas derretidas de los hielos se deslizan y vienen a dar al lago; las fieras que atemorizan con sus rugidos se buscan para amarse; y, aqui donde todo se aduna y se revela supremo como tu, yo estoy enteramente sola..................................!"

Algunas años después, Eva era casada: vivia en la misma choza y disfrutaba los encantos del mismo paraiso, aumentados con la presencia de dos preciosos niños.

Un dia al obscurecer, dijo el esposo a Eva: "Ves aquellas lomas que apenas se distinguen alla en el profundo azul del horizonte? Pues alli me situaba dia por dia al despertar la aurora para gozar mirando este lugar donde se abrigan mis dichas; sabia yo que era imposible distinguirte por que hay mucha distancia, sin embargo, tenia la esperanza."

"Cuan loco estaba por ti!"

"Tu que ni me conocias, ni sabias que en tu niñez habia yo acariciado tu carita, y que velaba yo por ti, estoy seguro que jamas dirigiste la vista a las lomas donde con esfuerzo sobrehumano é impaciente procuraba verte."

"No puedo ponderarte mis ansiedades, algunas veces creia, que vista por una de tantos magnates, te ofreceria, oro y alhajas, consiguiendo asi hacerte su esclava; otras, me parecia que hastiada de esta vida solitaria, y viéndote alguno de estos, te lanzarias en busca de fama y de admiradores, y que alguno de éstos, una vez suya, te arrojaria deshonrada al vicio."

"Mira cuantos temores tenia y cuanto sufria mi alma siempre apasionada y celosa de tu suerte."

Concluyo asi el esposo y la extrecho tierna y fuertemente como si aun temiera perderla.

Bien ha dicho un poeta, que somos juguetes del destino fiero; ahora gozamos las caricias del ser amado teniendo ante los ojos la grata perspectiva de una felicidad indefinida, y un minuto mas tarde lloramos tal vez por una irreparable pérdida.

Esto sucedio a Eva, cuando mas enamorada estaba del hombre que desde niña la habia amado y que en el pensamiento la vigilaba constantemente, la parca vino a derribar el foco de ilusiones forjado al calor de un amoroso pecho.

Eva, vive aun, pero no alla bajo el techo que presencio sus dichas, no, cada flor, cada planta, cada eco, le traian recuerdos letales de lo que amaba, de la felicidad rota, ida para siempre.

Ha enfermado la pobrecilla, claro! nacer con el corazon henchido de ternura, y de fuego, amar y ser amado, y luego, ver que el destino inexorable nos arranca lo que constituye parte de nuestro ser, la vida misma, eso no tiene nombre.

Como he dicho antes, la desdichada vive, pero para ella sola; contemplar su dolor, es su ilusion unica, acariciar las flores, su placer, y expresar con llanto su tristeza, forman el futuro programa de los dias que le quedan de existencia.

Cuantas almas llenas de sensibilidad, de efecto, de principios nobles, siguen la misma ruta, sacrificando su vida en el amor. Cuantas, asi como Eva, ven en la edad temprana sus dias amargados, y sin poder alimentar una esperanza mas, mueren tisicas de pena.

Que triste, pero que consolador!

THE ARMY OF TEACHERS.

The army of education in the United States is made up of 450,000 teachers, of whom 120,000 are men and 330,000 women. The overwhelming majority of the teachers are natives of the United States, less than 30,000 having been born abroad—one in fifteen.

Most of the male teachers are between the years of 25 and 35. The majority of the women teachers are between 15 and 25.

There are 2300 male teachers over 65. There are less than 1500 female teachers over 65. Three times as many female as male teachers are put down as "age unknown."

There are 21,000 colored teachers in the United States thus divided between the two sexes: 7700 men and 13,300 women. There are 500 Indian teachers in the Indian schools of the United States—240 men and 260 women.

The average age of teachers in the United States is higher than in England and lower than in Germany. The proportion of very youthful teachers is much greater in the country than in the city districts.

The largest proportion of male teachers is to be found in West Virginia, where they number 50 per cent. of the total. The largest proportion of women is to be found in Vermont, where they form 90 per cent. of the whole number. The standard of education is very much higher in Vermont than it is in West Virginia.

The number of teachers in the United States has increased greatly in recent years. In 1871 there were 125,000, in 1880 225,000, in 1890 340,000, and it is at present 450,000.—[New York Sun.

DEAD IN GLASS CASE.

"Auto-preservation" is the name which Signor Vercelloni, an Italian doctor, has given to a discovery that preserves the human body without the use of ordinary methods of embalming.

"There is no necessity to touch the body at all, much less to dissect it," explains the doctor. "The old method, which is a very expensive one, is entirely done away with. No unctions or wrappings are used.

"The body is simply placed in a zinc coffin, which is laid inside an ordinary wooden coffin, and between the two a patent powder mixture is sprinkled, which preserves every feature of the body, and especially of the face, exactly as it was at death. Viewed through a glass lid, there is nothing revolting in its appearance, the person appearing as though in a peaceful sleep."

Signor Vercelloni is of opinion that the discovery will do away with the religious feeling against cremation, and may be valuable from the point of view of identification in criminal cases, and also in scientific research.

"In cases of family disputes," said the doctor, "think of the enormous advantage it would be to be able to gaze through the crystal lid and see the body fully preserved. There is a big case, involving millions of money, in the law courts now which my discovery would have decided without the dispute being dragged before the public. Then consider the historical advantage in having the remains of eminent personages exposed to the public veneration."—[Manchester (Eng.) Chronicle.

A SONG.

Dead leaves that whirl in the tattered wind
  That once were fairy gold,
Breathlessly, hopelessly torn and blind—
  This it is to be old.

Wild songs that clang on the silver air,
  A flame with a forked tongue,
Passionate, masterful, wise and fair—
  This it is to be young.

Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

GREAT DISPLAY OF BIRDS.

THE SUCCESS OF THE POULTRY SHOW IN LOS ANGELES.

By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

NOTE.—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experience with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions, fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

THE poultry, pigeon and pet stock exhibition which closed last night (Saturday) was in more than one respect a matter of congratulation to the breeders' and fanciers who stood behind the enterprise. Its success established beyond all question of doubt the fact that Los Angeles has outgrown the atmosphere of the town and assumed that of a metropolis calculated to make a well managed poultry show a fixture and a paying proposition. That this opinion is shared by people not directly interested along commercial lines is clearly attested by the large attendance during the five days and evenings in which it was held. The total number of poultry entered in all the classes was about 1200, total pigeons 500, with a sprinkling of ducks, turkeys, geese, etc., making a grand total of 1800 individual specimens—the largest aggregation of fowl ever gathered together at any similar exposition in the Southwest.

More gratifying, however, than mere numbers was the quality of the birds. Judge C. L. Hogue, who is a veteran at the art and a recent comer to Los Angeles from Battle Creek, Michigan, gave it as his unbiased opinion that bird for bird, this exhibition was the equal of any at which he has officiated in the East, barring possibly the New York and Boston fixtures. This matter of quality only again emphasizes the truth so often stated in The Times, namely, that our conditions of soil and climate are favorable to the production of birds of quality and that too in goodly numbers. Indeed, the fact was made patent to all familiar with the onward trend of the industry, that it has passed the experimental period, and under the guiding hand of average intelligence and application affords splendid openings to people with moderate means seeking an outdoor occupation.

If we are to take the classes in their numerical strength at this show the American is certainly in the ascendancy, the White Wyandottes showing the largest number entered closely followed by the Barred and White Rocks. The Leghorns, and especially the Whites, were nowhere near so strong in numbers and quality as in former years. The Asiatics would have fared badly indeed but for the strong string of Black Langshans "put up" by two leading breeders—the stately Brahmas and the lordly Cochins being conspicuous only for their absence; the English were represented by the Orpingtons—with some grand specimens, including a number of imported birds from England. The quality was there in Barred and White Rocks, White, Columbian, Buff and Silver Penciled Wyandottes, Rhode Island Reds, Blue Andalusians, Brown Leghorns, and especially the Black Minorcas, which came out strong in typical shape, color markings, and fine head and leg points. The pigeon exhibit was beyond question the best that the Southwest has ever seen, the birds being high-class in quality throughout. The leading varieties were all well represented. The turkeys were of good quality, possessing size, fine shape, and especially beautiful plumage. The Indian Runner ducks attracted attention, the breed being popular and seemingly adapted to this section. In geese, the Toulouse occupied the center of the stage. A few Guinea and pea fowl added variety, while the egg-laying rooster and the hairy hen gave the gallinaceous biologist a think or two coming.

Secretary Humphrey on Evolution.

The poultry business as our grandmothers understood it is a thing of the past. A few dozen eggs in the market basket has given way to a broad commercial proposition that enlists the attention of men of means and thought. The interest which has been taken in our show is one of the evidence of this fact. The show is intended as an educator and is proving predminently so. Modern methods and appliances are demonstrated and explained. It also proves that poultry is being successfully raised in California and is of as high grade as can be found in the east. My personal opinion is that California is predminently adapted to the poultry business. True many fail, but that is not the fault of the business. The attendance at the show has been surprisingly large, which to some extent indicates the trend of thought. The poultrymen have made a superb display and are justly entitled to all the encouragement they are receiving. Our show is not intended as a money maker, but the expenses are necessarily large and a small admission is charged.

We believe we are entitled to the encouragement of the public for we are making an effort to build up and improve a magnificent industry. Few realize the immensity of the business. Our gold mines, about which we swell with pride, are small factors as compared to it; nothing but King Corn and Emperor Wheat can overshadow it.

To the uninitiated it may seem incredible, but statistics clearly show that the "chicken business" runs into the millions. Like the little busy bee which gathers its bits of nectar from thousands of blossoms, which in the whole totals up the carloads of honey which go annually to the East from California, so the ever-industrious hen yields a crop of fruit annually which adds to the agricultural wealth of the country a sum annually exceeding any other one line of soil product.

It is this fact which has gradually become a fixed entity in the commercial world that is attracting the attention of men of means to the poultry business as a commercial proposition. We have found in our experience in growing a few hundred head of fowls per year a good profit when giving them the same attention that we would a mercantile, manufacturing, or financial enterprise; the gains are quite as good, regular and safe. Indeed if the matter is followed to a final conclusion along practicable lines, we believe it feasible that a larger profit can be realized out of the poultry business for the amount of actual capital invested than might be expected year in and year out from the cultivation of an orange grove, the conducting of a commercial enterprise, or the application of capital and labor in the exploitation of any other soil product.

A well conducted poultry show containing the fine exhibits both as to quality and quantity that characterized the fixture just closed does much in an educational way to strengthen this opinion and to carry home to the minds of the people at large, the significance and importance of fostering the industry and establishing poultry culture on a firm basis in the Southwest to the end that the importation of eggs and poultry from the East shall cease and the local supply of eggs and poultry shall meet the home demand. WM. M. HUMPHREYS.

Says Judge Tyler.

It affords me a real pleasure to be able to tell the readers of The Times that in an experience covering nearly half a century (the half of which was spent in California,) as breeder, fancier, and judge of poultry, that the late fixture was in every way a very creditable affair. The quality in all the classes was high, demonstrating that to send East for breeding stock and eggs for hatching is worse than carrying coals to Sheffield.

In not a few instances the California bred bird won over the imported specimen from the East in the late show. In this connection it must not be forgotten that the imported specimen is invariably a selected bird, while the California bird is often the product of a fancier or breeder possessing only a few birds from which to make a choice. The success of the enterprise was indeed gratifying to me, as a few of the old fanciers hereabouts have witnessed shows which did not pay costs which proved a rather heavy burden on the few from year to year. It is pleasant to be able to record that during the past twenty-five years in which it has been my pleasure to judge at all functions of this nature held in Los Angeles, that the quality of poultry has greatly improved and that with our expansion in other direction poultry culture has not lagged behind. Especially noticeable is this improvement in the Plymouth Rocks, the Wyandottes, the Leghorns, the Minorcas, and the Orpingtons. To be sure we had many fine exhibits representing the other classes and varieties, but the rank and file seem to tie rather closely to the above varieties. Going beyond poultry the exhibit of turkeys at this show was indeed a promise of good things for the future, the birds giving evidence of strong constitutional qualities, fine form and carriage and good plumage. The pigeon exhibit which I had the pleasure of handling was beyond doubt the finest exhibit of birds that it has ever been my pleasure to pass upon in California. The different classes were well filled and the birds were all uniform in quality.

If I may be allowed to say a word in the way of friendly criticism and suggestion it seems to me that with the show growing so large as to embrace nearly 2000 specimens it is imperative in the interests of the breeders as well as the general public that the exhibits be staged along advanced lines adopted in New York, Boston, England and Canada. This does not include an additional expenditure of labor or capital—it simply means that the cock, hen, cockerel and pullet of a given variety be all placed together. This enables the judge to find birds of each division segregated by themselves and not in a diverse manner as at present, i.e.: allowing each exhibitor in a class to put his cock, hen, cockerel and pullet staged together while another exhibitor has his in similar manner in another part of the hall. It seems to me that we are now sufficiently strong to do business alongside of New York and London in the poultry line.

Another point which has impressed itself on my mind is that every time a poultry show is held its management has to resort to all manner of expedients to find a suitable location. One year it is a tent, another a store room, another a hall on the second floor, and a fourth in some out-of-the-way place, lending to the enterprise somewhat nomadic and an unsettled atmosphere. To meet conditions this year the management found it necessary to erect three large tents, all of which were insufficient, the aisles being so cramped and narrow as to make it impossible for two people to pass two abreast. The arrangement of the tents were also irregular and inharmonious, failing to impress the visitors with the same importance as if held in a large, commodious, and well-lighted hall. With the vast public improvements going on constantly it seems strange that Los Angeles should be without a hall of this kind. Let me express the hope that before another year rolls round the fifteenth annual show of the Los Angeles County Poultry Association and the second annual fixture of the Poultry Breeders' Society will be held in a fine hall, centrally located for purposes of this sort.

JUDGE S. TYLER.

Artificial vs. Natural Incubation.

With the closing of the show campaign, all interested in the breeding of chickens will naturally turn their attention to the hatching of eggs. The next three and four months to the breeder with a small flock the old hen will continue to do business at the old stand, but to the breeder who is growing along commercial lines the incubator possesses an economical strength that in this age of improvements cannot be overlooked. In this connection the United States Department of Agriculture has just issued Farm Bulletin No. 236, bearing especially on this point, from which we take the following extract, making emphasis to the fact expressed in these columns from time to time on the practice of the "wooden hen" over the one that cackles:

"Poultry raising is one of the important features of farm work. The incubator is an important factor in poultry raising. It is a success; and the time is not far distant when it will be as necessary upon every farm as is the plow, the mower, or the separator. It is a machine the operation of which is simple. It calls for no hard or heavy manual labor. A woman, a child or even a crippled or invalid member of the household may learn to operate an incubator easily and successfully. To make this possible and to bring a practical knowledge of this subject to every farmer or other interested person in our land, is the aim of this article.

"In order to make this article of the greatest value to all, it must appeal to the manufacturers of incubators as well as to the users of them. Hundreds of most excellent incubators are being made and sold, but they are forced to compete with almost as many that are inferior and imperfect, if not positively defective. Now every imperfect machine put out is a serious damage to the incubator business. The purchaser of an inferior machine, failing to secure good results, sets aside his incubator and informs his neighbors that artificial incubation is a failure. On the other hand, the purchaser of a good machine—one properly made and adapted to his work—is so apt to be pleased with his success that he encourages his friends and neighbors to undertake raising chickens with incubators. At this point it seems proper to answer the question, asked so frequently, 'Is there not some danger that so many will embark in this business that it will be overdone, and the markets be overflowed with poultry and eggs?' Answer: No; the demand is constantly increasing, and more production will be followed by increased consumption. As fast as a regular supply can be depended upon, to the same extent will consumers learn to avail themselves of the supply.

"Again, not every one who has gone into the poultry business will remain in it. Many will not find it to their liking, while others will not have sufficient energy and persistence to learn its details. The poultry business is one of the most stable lines of business in the world to-day. Its products are always in demand. No prejudice of religion or caste stands in its way. Sales are not limited as to localities or seasons. When the use of the incubator becomes known, when farmers generally become acquainted with its management and its many advantages, then will the public learn that the supply of poultry products is regular, and then will the use of these products be greatly increased."

Asked and Answered.

J. K. of Ocean Park, writes one of his hens has a bad leg, that it is swollen and full of scabs, it seems to cause some pain and that the other leg of the fowl is also becoming troubled in the same way.

This bird is undoubtedly troubled with what is known as scaly leg, which is caused by a microbe which burrows under the scales of the foot and shank. The crusts can be removed in warm soapy water or vigorous rubbing with an old tooth brush, when removed apply an ointment of lard and kerosene. Care must be exercised in removing the scabs or it will cause a wound. If the disease is allowed to run, the legs become encrusted with scabs making a very unpresentable appearance.

CHICKEN RANCHES.
For information regarding poultry ranches in the greatest poultry center of the United States, write to GRAHAM, SHERWOOD & OLDFIELD, Petaluma, Cal.
We have large lists of improved and unimproved chicken and fruit ranches; cheap transportation, excellent climate, good water, irrigation unnecessary, first class schools; just the country for a man with small outlay and on small acreage to make a good living. On tide water, thirty-seven miles from San Francisco. The county is well settled, and intersected by steam and electric roads. Many ranchers, who commenced in a small way, are now gathering eggs daily from many thousands of laying hens. In 1904, 3,500,000 (three million, five hundred thousand) dozen eggs were shipped out of Petaluma.

The Times for a short description of the Silver Spangled Hamburgs together with an opinion on their good points. Regarding the Hamburgs there are four varieties, namely, the Golden Spangled, Golden Penciled, Silver Spangled, Silver Penciled, the White and Black. They belong to what is known as the Dutch class and a variety alone by themselves. They have never been overly popular in California, due possibly to the fact that they are not quite as hardy as the Leghorns and Americans, rather smaller in size, but are said to be good layers. The Silver Spangled are the most popular and when bred true to type and plumage are indeed a beautiful bird. The writer remembers a pen of five which won at the New York show and were sent to Los Angeles some years ago, which were beyond a doubt the prettiest sight in the room. As the name implies the plumage is a rather glossy silver white, each feather ending in a greenish black spangle. They all have rose combs, and are non-sitters. With careful attention the Hamburgs should do reasonably well in this climate. It might be said that they are essentially a fancier's fowl and as they are not often seen in the show room, their presence in reasonable numbers would prove a valuable addition to the general exhibit. Let us express the hope that our correspondent takes up the breed with pleasure as well as profit to himself.

THE SCHOOL CITY.

WORKINGS OF A NEW EXPERIMENT IN THE SELF-GOVERNMENT OF THE YOUNG.

[Frank Parsons, in Century:] The writer was present a few weeks ago when the first school city was organized in Boston by Wilson L. Gill, the inventor and founder of the system. There were 700 pupils, all girls of the grammar grades. They were delighted with the plan, voted unanimously and enthusiastically to adopt the Golden Rule as the fundamental law of their school city, supplemented it with various provisions against disorder, destruction or injury of property, profanity, rudeness, unkindness, etc., and showed remarkable discretion in the election of their officers.

The Mayor was a bright-faced girl of twelve and a half years. When asked, shortly after the election, what it meant to her to be Mayor of Hancock School, she said: "It means to see that every girl is orderly, clean and good. It means that they must have good conduct. They must be clean and neat in their dress and habits. They must keep the schoolrooms and the schoolyard neat. And they must be kind to everybody."

"That is a great task. Aren't you afraid of it?"

The answer was prompt and clear: "No, for I think they are all good citizens."

Mary Finn, the judge said: "I shall warn citizens who don't behave, and if that does no good I shall punish them. They must behave."

The whole discipline of the school is put into the hands of the pupils. The teachers give instruction, and advice when it is needed, and the ultimate responsibility and authority are always with them. But the students make laws and really govern themselves, although there is an authority above them, just as a grown-up city governs itself, although the Legislature may at any time revoke its charter.

In fact, there is more real self-government in these school cities than in most of our larger cities. For there is no apathy in the school city, no stay-at-home vote, no political machine or boss.

There is no graft in the school city, no boodle on the Council, no "understanding" between the police and wrongdoers. The ten-year-old judge and the twelve-year-old Mayor are absolutely incorruptible. Habits of good citizenship are formed while the mind is plastic, open to the full force of considerations of right and justice and free from commercial motives and other influences that in later life so often interfere with the duties of citizenship. The love of liberty is strengthened and ennobled by recognition of the rights of others and the necessity of mutual limitations for the public good. Respect for law and authority is developed. The sense of justice is strengthened and the judicial attitude of mind is cultivated.

The results have been excellent in every way. Both conduct and scholarship are greatly improved. Disobedience is pulled up by the roots. Public sentiment ranges itself on the side of law when the public makes the law. A breach of order is no longer regarded as a defiance of an alien government, but as an injury and an insult to the community. Even the most disorderly schools have been reduced to good conduct by the institution of the school city.

THE AUTO IN MISSOURI.

FARMER POTTS'S MACHINE IN PIECES, BUT THERE WAS NO ACCIDENT ABOUT IT.

[Macon (Mo.) Correspondence New York Sun:] Along in the early part of November Thomas Jobson sold a 16-horse-power gasoline machine to Matthew Potts, a farmer up in Drake township. Potts spent the greater part of the day here learning how to run the thing. At 5 o'clock in the afternoon he cut loose from his instructor and headed his new toy for home, some thirty miles up the country.

"Glad the farmers are getting over their prejudice," remarked Jobson. "If Potts reaches home alive and gets so he can run it we'll sell a dozen machines up in Drake."

"I read an article in a paper the other day," said a friend, "stating the farmers over in Indiana were selling off their road horses and adopting the auto."

"Level heads! They'll all get 'round to it by and by. You can't stop the wheels of progress."

No news came down from Drake township for ten days. The local correspondent up there chronicled no accident. It was evident that all was well with Potts and his red devil.

Last Saturday Mr. Potts came to town driving four horses and a canvas top farm wagon. Stopping near the automobile sheds, he climbed out and slowly went into the office.

With portentous deliberation he filled and lighted his short brier pipe. The members of the firm were relieved to notice the absence of bruises and bandages.

"I'm the fellow you sold that runabout machine to," said Potts.

"Y-e-s. Anything wrong with it?" asked Jobson.

"No, the machine's all right, but the people won't stand for it."

"But you have a perfect right to the roads, Mr. Potts; the law says you have, if you use caution."

"That's what I thought, but up in our parts they make their own law sometimes. The Sunday night after I got it I took the family to church. The minister preached on 'Vanity,' and did it in such a way the congregation understood he was shooting at us. When he was through Deacon Dickson moved 'that it was the sense of this meeting that the Potts family be reprimanded for putting on airs and violating the Sabbath by riding in a wagon that makes a loud and unseemly noise.'"

"That was a fool motion," observed Jobson.

"That's what I told 'em with a 'damn' added, and the deacon then moved to expel me from the church for unchristianlike behavior. It caried unanimously."

"That was mean, but maybe you can get in some other church."

"I'm afraid not. I been doing too much swearing lately. Next the village—Cloverdale—passed a law making it a fine of $500 and six months in jail for anybody to come to town in any wheeled wagon that wasn't drawn by horses, mules or oxen."

"They can't pass any law like that!" said Jobson indignantly.

"That's what I told 'em," returned Mr. Potts, "but they did it. Then the Anti-Horse Thief Association sent me a card with a skull and crossbones on it, saying I could have till the 5th of December. I knew what that meant. Billy Jones got one o' them notices once, and when the time was up the neighbors found him hanging to a tree."

"That was sudden."

"Very. Then the road overseer has been to see me once or twice. They've bothered me so much that I thought if you didn't mind I'd ask you to take it back, at a fair discount, of course."

"You haven't had any accident with it?"

"Oh, no! I've been very careful to handle it just like you showed me."

"Well, you gave me $500. I'll give you $300 for it back. You see, I'll have to sell it now as a second-hand machine."

"Yes, I guess so. I brought it in with me. I'm much obliged to you; you've treated me square in this deal and I ain't got not hard feelings at all."

Mr. Potts led the way to his covered wagon. In the bed was a jumble of cogwheels, rods, levers, rubber tires and twisted pieces no man could nominate. Jobson looked wrathfully at his customer.

"I thought you said you hadn't met with any accident?" he exclaimed.

"I didn't," said Potts calmly. "The Law and Order League broke in the barn last night, and that's the way it looked when they got through. But there was no accident about it."

CITIES WITHOUT DIRT OR NOISE.

That the cities of the future will be without soot, smoke, noise and confusion is the forecast of S. Morgan Bushnell, a prominent electrical engineer, in his article, "Wonder Cities of Electricity" in the February Technical World Magazine.

"As one by one," says Mr. Bushnell, "we see the old steam plants in our large buildings discarded, we begin to approach the realization of the ideal electric city. The tourist when stopping in the city of Niagara Falls, notwithstanding the immense manufacturing industries which have grown up there within the last few years, will see almost no chimneys delivering their smoky contribution to the otherwise clear atmosphere. Here, every steam plant has been shut down, with the exception of one or two small plants in which it is necessary to use steam in the treatment of wood pulp for the manufacture of paper. In these mills the power processes are performed either by the direct agency of water power or by electric power through the agency of motors.

"The visitor to some of the model factories recently built, will wonder how it has become possible to preserve the absolute cleanliness that is found on every floor and in every department. He will find that small electric motors have displaced the old systems of shafting and belts, with their connections from floor to floor, their rasping noise and vibration, and their accompanying dust and dirt. The result is the ideal workshop. Electricity gives the most perfect lighting, the most perfect source of power, and the most easily manipulated form of heating, whether in the factory, the office, or the home."

WHAT MAKES SHOES SHINE.

The philosophy of polish on any substance is simply the production by friction of such smoothness of the surface layer of its particles that they readily reflect the rays of light falling upon them. Different articles are used to aid in procuring this smoothness on different substances. With leather the best substance seems to be a paste containing bone-black—that is, the powder obtained from charred bones or ivory—to which is added a small quantity of acid to dissolve it, oil to preserve the soft texture of the leather, and treacle and gum to render the mass adhesive.—[Technical World Magazine.

Farming in California—The Land and Its Products.

CONDUCTED BY J. W. JEFFREY, AGRICULTURAL EDITOR.

FIELD NOTES.

Best California Pears.

OTHER than the climate there is no product of this State so uniformly excellent as the Bartlett pear. The fact that this fruit is being attacked by that most insidious foe, the blight, makes it all the more deplorable that one of the leading agricultural journals should give this fruit a kick at this time. "The best selling California pear comes within the same category as the Ben Davis apple, and we never look on this fruit without recalling the whited sepulcher, which was outward fair to view, but within filled with dead men's bones and all uncleanness," says this journalistic critic. Is not that about the limit? Were it not like casting pearls before swine, the writer of that sentiment should be sentenced to eat one big Bartlett, California-grown, and to watch the other fellow finish the balance in the box. Perhaps the blight has so long since depleted the East of this luscious pear that the editor of that paper has forgotten what it tastes like, and has not the wherewithal to buy even a sample of California's great fruit. "Sour grapes" are sweet—to the fellow who is eating them.

Suggestions on Wheat Rust.

CONTRARY to expectations, the wheat of the Imperial Valley was badly damaged by rust last summer, and in many cases ruined. In fact the crop of 1905 was but a miniature of the crops of Canada, the Dakotas, Minnesota and adjacent States the previous season, where the rust did more damage than of any other year since wheat has been grown in this country. There may be this difference in the future, however, that the farmers of the Imperial country may learn to control the elements that produce this disease through timely irrigation, while the causes of wheat rust in the East are beyond the influence of the growers. We may have assumed that the air is so dry in the Colorado River delta that rust could not exist, yet through irrigation at the time the disease would do the most damage no doubt supplied the superabundance of moisture necessary to produce there the most disastrous results. Adding to the disappointment was the fact that the growing wheat at Imperial was most promising, the fields showing crops almost shoulder high, of vigorous stand and strength. The experiences in that valley last summer have demonstrated one mooted question of the whole country, namely, that the prevalence of rust is not aggravated by worn-out soils or other complicated conditions of vegetable life, but that rust attacks strong, healthy wheat plants with the greatest avidity.

Only trial and experience can settle the availability of the Imperial plain for wheat culture. The trial is worth while, for Pacific Coast wheat commands the markets of the world in price, though the farm value is not as great as that of wheat grown nearer the markets. Though the Pacific States' yield was about 75,000,000 bushels in 1904, the capabilities of production are 100,000,000, the yield of the banner crop of 1901. If this cereal can be established at Imperial it will do much to bring the State back to its old-time production. It is estimated that rust destroys 100,000,000 bushels of wheat annually in the United States, but this loss may be greatly reduced by the cultivation of rust-resistant varieties such as the Durums. Six kinds of this Russian wheat in the great Dakota rust epidemic of 1904 produced from 21 to 35 bushels to the acre, weighing about 56 pounds to the bushel where the common home varieties made less than twelve bushels, weighing about 42 pounds each. Would it not be profitable for some of the farmers at Imperial to try these new wheats? If the rust there is caused by overirrigation or untimely watering, the continuation of wheat culture will require resistant crops there, more than in countries only occasionally suffering the conditions of climate that intensify the attacks of rust. The problem of rust attack is not confined to irrigated lands in California, and the introduction of resistant kinds would be of value to the whole State.

Table Grape Vineyards.

NEVER before in the twenty years I have been associated with the horticultural interests of Southern California have there been so many inquiries relating to the planting of table grapes as are coming up this winter. How far the extension of this planting will go, or how soon the business may be overdone I shall not presume to answer, the querists having to work that out as best they may. As to varieties to plant for shipment and the home market, the range is considerable. Of those suitable both for raisins and fresh use, the Muscat, Thompson's Seedless and the Sultana may be profitably grown, these varieties and the white grapes used solely for the table being more suitable for Coachella and Imperial than the colored varieties, the latter failing to color properly in those hot sections. The old standard black table grapes are the Black Hamburg (the Black Prince), Black Morocco, the California Black Malvoisie, and the Cornichon. The Barbarossa Emperor and the Flame Tokay are profitable red grapes for table use. There are some other good varieties for the markets such as the Malaga, Rose of Peru and Almeria.

But there is such a diversity of soil and conditions in Southern California that one should give weeks to the investigation of successes and failures with particular varieties. I believe there is possible a great development in this line, but all the approachable markets will have to be utilized in order to make the growing of table grapes of great importance. On the other hand, the home demand is getting heavy, and it will take at profitable prices a large tonnage of the best quality of these new vineyards. Robust growers of table varieties should be planted ten feet apart each way, or ten by twelve. Planters should look to shipping qualities, for it will not be possible for the home market to consume the offerings if all the farmers go into table-grape-raising who are talking of it now.

Plowing Semi-arid Lands.

DRY-LAND plowing is uppermost in the minds of hundreds of farmers at this season of the year. As usual the soil will be skimmed with the gang plow. The fact that dry-grown crops fail in the arid West occasionally, no matter how thoroughly the plowing may be done, seems a bar to better cultivation among the majority of grain farmers, yet its value has been demonstrated by innumerable trials. For all soils that have underlying fertility should be stirred deeply, only those of inferior subsoil being profited by shallow plowing. The former includes the greater percentage of the grain lands of Southern California. It would be a novelty for some one to begin disking his grain land soon after harvesting, to be followed by deep plowing after the earlier rains. On this subject I have an inquiry from a land owner of Los Angeles city for more particulars of the so-called Campbell system of dry farming.

Farmer Campbell's plan involves a simple principle, namely restoring the capillarity of the soil where it has been arrested by the plow. It is a sensible principle, even if it is called a fad by the Rocky Mountain press. To restore the capillary action of the soil Mr. Campbell uses a sub-surface packer in the form of a tool consisting of a series of wedge-shaped wheels attached to a common axle. The wheels are about eighteen inches in diameter, and placed upon the shaft about six inches apart. The machine is better than a roller, which only firms the surface of the soil, leaving poor connection between the broken ground and the hard bottom of the furrow. The packer firms the soil in the lower portions of the furrow slice, giving the undersurface soil the power to draw moisture from below. Every new departure has its critics, and Mr. Campbell's is getting it pretty heavily from those who do not expect anything new in "plain farming." But there will be no profit in the cultivation of millions of square miles of the semi-arid West—that portion receiving from six to twenty inches of rainfall annually—until some means is devised of preventing this sparse precipitation from too rapid evaporation. Why not try the Campbell plan here?

Academy of Horticultural Science.

AS it is necessary in commercial affairs to have Chambers of Commerce and Boards of Trade as clearing-houses for efforts toward material improvements, why should we not have a clearing-house for the study and application of horticulture? Why should we not have an association of fruit growers whose mission should be to collect, digest and arrange facts relating to the cultivation of fruits, especially those in which difficulty or failure appears; an association that should be prepared to officially direct and assist investigation along lines in which experience called for it; a body of men to co-operate with scientists engaged and get the best and most needed results through their understanding of local conditions as no scientist could understand them without years of wasted efforts. This clearing-house of information, intuition and experience should sift out the non-essential and minimize misdirected effort on the part of the investigators supplied by the government and do things horticulturally that the Chamber of Commerce does commercially.

In this we are not appealing to farmers as they are found in other States. Here communication is easy, assemblage convenient. In every community resides one or more farmers with leisure, ability and inclination to engage in investigation, capable as a body to influence and even direct scientists toward the point and method of attack upon the obscure problems of the orchard. A body of twenty-five or fifty of these semi-professional men and practical growers would do much to clarify the efforts which will have to be made if we are to make the most of fruit growing, or even continue it in a few of its most pregnable lines. Where is there such an institution in California, continuous in membership, free from official or compelling circumstance, able to direct its forces as an academy of sciences and fight out its campaigns without hindrance "if it takes all summer?" Such an association should be formed at once. It's work would not interfere with that of any other institution and it would be an organization of value both to scientist and practical farmer.

The Mystery of Marketing.

LETTERS still continue to arrive asking that this department engage in the marketing-of-oranges controversy. I cannot but feel sorry that the few growers, who think jumping onto the other fellow the proper procedure, do not possess some way of having it out and yet not involving others in what seems a profitless task. Just now it is a new plan that should be jumped upon, in which a grower is seeking to Kearneyize the citrus fruit business by forming an association similar to the Fruit Exchange only that each grower must pledge himself to obey implicitly the orders of the central factotum and ship when, where and in quantities dictated by the said factotum. Now there is no chance for an argument here. Let the gentleman gather together every grower as sheep in a fold—if he can—but do not hold your breath, my correspondent, till he does it, or you will be dead a full decade or a hundred years before the achievement. As to placing your faith in a marketing [illegible] fostered by a man who has only been in the [illegible] two or three years, you must decide for yourself. [illegible] newcomers are the best and most enterprising [illegible] world, and they really know more than all the old [illegible]ers and shippers combined, but they do not know [illegible] enough to be of any use to themselves or to any [illegible] But they are the salt of the earth when they get [illegible] down to business and begin to accumulate real [illegible]edge. I know of no mystery of marketing fruit, [illegible] sesame to success. The growers might all join [illegible] lofty combination that would overturn all the [illegible] of commercial supply and demand and force people [illegible] come to California and buy all the oranges offered [illegible] profitable figures. Or they might all organize [illegible] some basis entirely in accord with fundamental [illegible]ples of barter and sale. But they will do neither [illegible] cannot be compelled to. An old fellow once had a [illegible]ting horse that could travel a mile in a minute, [illegible] wouldn't do it, and no one could make it. Better [illegible] go on in the way seeming best to you and let the [illegible] fellow worry over his own new schemes.

The Grip of Graft.

A FARMER came into the office of the editor of [illegible] Agricultural Department a few days ago to ask [illegible] opinion as to the sense in continuing to pay for [illegible]ance in one of the old-line companies that has been [illegible] conspicuously under disfavor for the last few months. [illegible] referred him to the expressions of disinterested [illegible] seen in the news columns of The Times lately, in [illegible] they advise to continue to pay, as the insurance [illegible]nies now under fire are strong institutions and will [illegible] doubt emerge from the fire with the grip of graft [illegible] moved. He asked if some of the good local companies were not more reliable. Of course there is no [illegible]tion as to the stability and quality of the home [illegible] be asked about especially, but the writer's opinion [illegible] life insurance in general, or upon the lives of farmers [illegible] particular would be of no value because I write a [illegible]mer's column. The residents of the foothills above [illegible]mona should, above all others, get as cheap insurance [illegible] is consistent with good business, for they will [illegible] pay a long time in that salubrious climate, and I told [illegible] gentleman so. Seventy-five years from now the [illegible] conditions will prevail there that are now prevalent [illegible] some of the healthy regions of North Carolina. A [illegible]itor down there recently asked a native's age. "I [illegible] 81 last April," was the reply. "That is not so very [illegible] Men often live to that age in the North, where no [illegible] claims are made about climate." How long has [illegible] father been dead?" "Father dead? Why, dad [illegible] dead. He's upstairs putting grandfather to bed."

Taxing Gross Receipts.

Senator Newlands proposes that railroad [illegible] like railroad dividends, be fixed by Congress[illegible] action, once and for all. He proposes a tax [illegible] gross receipts as a method which has the advan[illegible] of simplicity and justice. Gross earnings cannot [illegible] juggled and they are a fair index to the condition of [illegible] business. Senator Newlands proposes that this rev[illegible] shall be collected in the form of a franchise tax [illegible] the authority of the nation itself and then di[illegible] among the several States upon some equitable [illegible] Railroad taxes now amount to about 3 per cent. of [illegible] gross receipts. He would take this as a starting [illegible] and gradually raise it to 5 per cent. where it will [illegible]manently remain. Thus each State would receive, [illegible] the average, 66 per cent. more than now without the [illegible]pense of collection. We are inclined to believe, [illegible]ever, that his bill is a dream.

The Boy and the Farm.

If a boy can do better for himself in town than [illegible] country, let him go to town. The "if" is a long [illegible] the evidence that success is more likely in the [illegible] should be pretty definite. Many country boys go [illegible] city and fail. On the other hand many of the most [illegible]cessful and useful business men of our cities are [illegible]try-bred and reared, so there are two sides to the [illegible]tion. Speakers before agricultural meetings should [illegible] in their zeal, overlook the actual facts in the case [illegible] recommend almost unconditionally that the boys [illegible] on the farm. It is just as foolish as for city people [illegible] urge that all boys born in town remain there, in [illegible] the fact that hundreds of thousands of city-bred [illegible] have found health, wealth and happiness as agri[illegible]rists and stockmen.—[Orange Judd Farmer.

Educative Value of School Gardens.

It does not seem that any statement should be [illegible]sary to show the advantages of school gardens. [illegible]sides training habits of observation, garden work [illegible] children off the streets, cultivates habits of industry [illegible] respect for other people's gardens, gives the children [illegible] love of nature and turns their attention toward [illegible] blessings of outdoor life as an offset to the strong [illegible]rent toward the life of the shops and the tene[illegible] Window gardens in the home follow school gardens [illegible] bring added sweetness to life.

Something besides gardening is taught—patience, [illegible]bearance, respect for the rights of others, respect [illegible] labor, neighborly assistance, with the thoughts of [illegible] as much as possible, instead of as little, which [illegible] be the animating principle in this age of strife. [illegible] doubt the children will get over their unselfishness [illegible] on, but they are started aright.

Peculiarities of the Peanut Plant.

THERE are some peculiarities of the peanut plant that might well be noticed. While the peanut is a leguminous plant, it is an underground legume—one that grows and matures its seed pods beneath the soil. Hence the specific name by which it is known and described—hypogæa.

The small, yellow, butterfly-shaped flowers appear on stems that spring out from the axils of the branches above ground, which stems (peduncles) increase in length till they reach and penetrate the soil about the plants. As the flower fades and falls off, the germ of the future pod begins to form at the end of the stem, and once the peduncle has found its way into mellow soil, the pod begins to grow rapidly. If the stem fails to reach the ground, no pod is formed.

Another interesting peculiarity of the peanut is its habit of closing each pair of leaflets together, like the covers of a book, on the approach of night, or when a shower begins to fall upon them. The leaflets are in pairs, and as darkness and dewy eve come on, each pair begins gradually to approach nearer and nearer together, until they meet and stand erect, edge up, and remain so through the night.

The formation of numerous small nodules upon the roots of this plant, as it approaches maturity, is a third peculiarity that attaches to it, in common with some other plants of the same order. These nodules are always present; but they are more numerous and better developed whenever the plant is grown on a light, porous, sandy loam, such as suits the peanut best. The presence of these nodules indicates thriftiness and vitality in the crop, and when they are a few in number, and small, the soil is either not suited to the peanut, or it needs amendment and fertilization. These protuberances have been called bacteria nodules, their office being to assimilate and appropriate the nitrogen gathered by the plant from the atmosphere. Whenever these nodules are abundant, and they nearly always are in a sandy, calcareous soil, the crop will be a large one.

There is one more fact concerning the peanut which may be regarded as peculiar to it. It has no insect enemies, so to speak. That is, the plant is very rarely attacked or fed upon by any insect—certainly never to the detriment of the crop. Of what other farm product can this be truthfully said?—[Nut Journal.

Why Lawn Forest Trees Die.

MANY people who have large forest trees growing on their lawns wonder why they do not live longer. I have in mind a fine suburban home built in a woods. The underbrush was cleared away and soon a beautiful lawn was seen beneath the fine trees. In several years' time a large number of trees died and each succeeding year saw a few more of them going the same way. When we saw the place last summer only a few trees of the once beautiful grove survived. What was the cause?

When sod is formed over the soil the moisture from the rainfall cannot reach the roots of the trees as rapidly as when the soil was loose under the old forest conditions. Then, too, all the rich organic nourishment resulting from the decay of the fallen leaves is withdrawn from the trees by raking the ground clear of the leaves, and burning them away from the place of falling. Trees need mineral and organic nourishment just like any other living creature, and when their natural supply is cut off, it should be seen to that artificial fertilizer and manures are placed around their roots, if one wants them to flourish. A tree that has been standing for a century or more naturally draws on a large amount of earth for its mineral food supply, and the marvel is that some of these still exist, deriving as they do their sustenance from an impoverished field.—[Indiana Farmer.

Early California Vegetables.

THE pioneer farmers were astonished at the size of the vegetables produced on our vigin soil and in our glorious climate, and as the demand was brisk during the days when the gold fever was at its height, a great many people engaged in their production for market. In a soil of such marvelous productiveness, while for a year or two vegetable growers made money, there was almost immediately a great overproduction. Vegetables in California have uniformly been abundant and cheap the year round, and market gardening was very soon abandoned by native-born Americans. With the building of our railroad system, however, it was possible for the products of specially favorable localities to extend the radius of their marketing, and we have had a steady and increasing trade in vegetables with the northern coast and the States east of the Sierras, with occasional shipments beyond the Missouri. Vegetables, however, will not endure any such cost of transportation as our fruits easily carry, and for the extreme East we cannot usually compete with Florida and the other Southern States, except in a few specialties, of which celery and asparagus are the chief. The growth of our truck-farming industry has been gradual, beginning, as a genuine truck-farming industry, with the building of the Central Pacific Railroad, although we doubtless made shipments to Oregon earlier. Cabbage, especially, has always been an important article of shipment, and in some years we have been able to ship it beyond Missouri River points, besides making large shipments from Southern California to the Southeast. We also ship cauliflower. This year we have shipped potatoes to the Middle West by trainloads.—[Chronicle.

Seed Improvement.

TO scientific methods adopted in seed growing is to be attributed much of the improvement accomplished in many economic plants, the most careful selection being made from year to year of the mother plants for the next crop. This is true not only of truck and field crops, but also of flowers.

It is in California that most of the flower seeds are produced, including the bulk of the petunias, verbenas, nasturtiums and sweet peas.

In most European countries there are seed control stations, so called, at which seeds are tested by simple, yet interesting methods, the work of sprouting them being done mainly by young girls. There are forty such stations in Germany, where they have created such a sentiment in favor of pure seeds, as opposed to the adulterated stuff, containing more or less weed seeds, commonly sold, that the best dealers are glad to submit samples of their merchandise for proof of quality, guarantees of which are returned by the stations after examination and trial.

The Department of Agriculture is anxious to establish a similar system of seed control in this country, if Congress can be persuaded to enact the requisite legislation. —[American Cultivator.

The Home Vineyard.

THE grape should be grown in every garden, or somewhere on every farm. It is easily cultivated, and brings almost certain reward for the care and attention bestowed upon it. It is a mistaken notion that its culture requires any special skill or knowledge. While the grape succeeds best in warm, well-drained, and fairly fertile soil, there are but few farms on which it cannot be successfully grown in quantities sufficient for home use. A south or southeastern exposure will usually give greatest satisfaction. The grape, under favorable conditions, makes an enormous growth of wood and fruit, and to enable it to do its best the soil must be prepared for a corresponding development of its root system. If the soil is hard and compact it will be difficult for the roots to find the proper food supply, thus the importance of thoroughly pulverizing the surface and subsoil is apparent. Unleached wood ashes and well composted barnyard manure will be found among the cheapest and best fertilisers. These should be used liberally and well mixed with the soil in its preparation before planting and may be used afterward as top dressing to be worked into the surface in the process of cultivation.—[Orange Judd Farmer.

Hotbeds.

IN the colder regions of California the farmer can build and use a cheap hotbed with great satisfaction. The labor and material needed are small. A January hotbed will supply green things during February and March. Every farmer's table will appreciate these good things in late winter. The fresh lettuce, radishes, beets, carrots, spinach, etc., to be grown are a boon to any farm family.

It is so simple and easy to have these things. First select a sheltered spot behind a barn or tight fence or a southern slope. Dig a hole one and one-half feet deep, four or five feet wide, and as long as wanted. Put stable manure in this to a depth of six to twelve inches, and then cover with ten or twelve inches of good loamy soil. Now build a cheap frame of wood over this bed. Make it two feet above ground, level on the north (back) side and six inches above that level on the south. Throw loose earth up against this frame to keep out cold air.

Use either cheap canvas for covering beds or window sash. If only canvas is used very cold snaps may require the use of gunny sack or other heavy cover for one or two nights. It is often more economical to do this than to buy sash. Sash gives more perfect protection, however. Canvas covers are tacked to rollers on lower edge for easy handling.

The frame must be kept carefully covered on cold days and nights, and opened to the sun on warm days. The bottom heat supplied by the manure at the roots of plants will force the crops wonderfully. Rain is very beneficial to such beds if not too copious. If the soil is kept very dry the plants burn. If kept too wet plants "damp off." A little ashes and sulphur sprinkled on top of the soil just after planting help to keep out insects and make plants healthy.

Any family can use a hotbed five feet wide and ten feet long to advantage at this season. This is the place for growing relishes in winter, and starting plants in early spring when too cold for outdoor planting. The truth is that such a bed in use in the colder or mountainous parts of California will put them way ahead of the season. In Southern and Central California the hotbed is rarely needed in winter. A cold frame in these regions is usually sufficient. In making a cold frame, follow suggestions above given, except we must omit the manure. No bottom heat is needed in this case.—[California Cultivator.

THE POPE AND HIS SISTERS.

The Papal as well as the Royal family have settled back into their winter quarters with a sigh of pleasure at being at "home" again.

The three sisters of Pius X are in their new old apartments in the Piazza San Pietro, a telephone from their house connected with a wire in the private apartment of the pontiff being the novelty of the season. The good ladies have never grumbled at the difficulties put in the way of their free access to their brother by his entourage, but the hint of a true friend that they might find a telephone a pleasure, and that they had better speak of the idea personally with His Holiness, was gratefully acted upon, and so the telephone was installed.

Much pity is lavished upon Pius X's "captivity" and the nostalgia from which he is supposed to suffer; but little thought is bestowed upon the real victims of the Papacy—his dear old sisters. They are all three maiden ladies of very certain age, and the Pope is the joy of their hearts. In Rome they are divided from him partly by the force of circumstances and partly purposely; and have so far felt themselves misrepresented to him, certain Vatican circles dreading—quite uselessly—their influence, and being determined from the first that it should be exercised as little as possible. "Petticoats" are abhorred in those precincts without any reference to the persons wearing them. The three in question are as innocent and as certainly harmless as doves.—[Pall Mall Gazette.

TUSKS OF ELEPHANTS.

Dr. G. C. Schillings, who has traveled much in Africa, has this to say of the tusks of elephants: "The size and weight of tusks of exceptionally large animals are sometimes phenomenal. In 1898 an old male elephant was killed by native hunters not far from the Kilimanjaro, the tusks of which had a combined weight of 450 pounds. These enormous teeth created quite a sensation when they were brought to market in Zanzibar. One of these tusks, the largest in existence, is at present in the British Museum, in London, the other is in the United States of America.

"Yet tusks of over 100 pounds are pretty rare. The weight does not always depend on the age and size of the animal. Not only do the different varieties of elephants differ as to the average weight of their tusks, but different members of the same family show dissimilarity in this respect. The South African elephant's tusks are considerably inferior in size and weight to those of the elephant in equatorial Africa.

"Rowland Ward in his book, 'Records of Big Game,' gives the weights and measurements of the biggest tusks known to us. The African elephant exceeds the antediluvian mammoth as well as the Indian elephant. The biggest tusk is twenty-four and a quarter inches in circumference, ten and a half feet long and 226 pounds in weight."

More About Milk Diet.

DR. TILDEN has the following in A Stuffed Club for December, in regard to a booklet on "Milk Diet," reviewed here recently:

"I have often said that if I were to be banished and my food restricted, I should not consider it any great hardship if I were restricted to bread and milk. Dr. Porter's booklet contains many suggestions regarding milk diet and milk cure that I am not prepared to accept nor reject. The Doctor writes like a man of knowledge and experience, and until I have tested his prescription thoroughly, and I mean by thoroughly, with his understanding of what he means, I have no right to say that he can not do just what he says he can.

"I am not disposed to believe much in restricted, exclusive diet cures. The all-meat cure I have written of before in the Club. The one-food idea will bring relief—respite—to those who are sick from stuffing. If the reader does not know it already, I will inform him: It is impossible to overeat long on one food. There is the meat cure; the cereal cure—those who pin their faith and hope to dextrinized starches; the grape cure; the bread and apple cure; the fruit and nut and many other cures unnecessary to mention. On the other hand, there are the various kinds of fasting cures, and neither last nor least, the stuffing cure, so popular among the ultra-regular and scientific physicians.

"I will admit that I am partial to the exclusive, all milk treatment, if I must accept an exclusive diet.

"Friend Brook of the Los Angeles Times, has written this cure up quite extensively in the November 5th issue of that most excellent Sunday magazine. By the way, readers of the Club, if you haven't seen a Sunday Times you don't know what you've missed. The two or three pages on health edited by Harry Brook, are worth the subscription; besides this most excellent feature, you get about all the paper you can "tote" home with reading matter galore on all subjects. Send ten cents and sample the Los Angeles Sunday Times.

"There are great possibilities in any exclusive, single food proposition, and in a field of work like that presented by the general practice of medicine, where ignorance and stupidity reign king on the subject of food and feeding, an exclusive milk cure is so much better than the haphazard now practiced that there should be a law compelling the drug dopers to adopt milk to the exclusion of their drugs and 'eat what agrees with you,' 'eat all the good nourishing food you can; you must literally stuff yourself with big juicy steaks, eggs and cream.'

"Those who are at a loss to know what to feed, and who believe in stuffing, should send Dr. Porter $1.00 and learn his plan of exclusive milk feeding. I really think the all-milk idea is the best one-idea cure I have seen."

Having heard that the milk diet had been tried with success at the St. Helena Sanitarium, the editor inquired and received the following reply from Dr. T. F. Thorpe:

"Your card to Dr. Evans was handed to me by Mr. Bowen, our business manager, and in reply permit me to say that it is true we are using Dr. Porter's method, with a few of our thin patients, with very good results to date. However, as this particular method of forced feeding is rather new to us, and as the patients now following it themselves requested to be allowed to try the same, we are not, as yet, prepared to report on the matter. I will say, however, that I think the method of forced feeding well adapted to thin individuals who have been unable to get on their feet by adhering to less exacting dietary methods, and to those who desire to give up smoking, drinking and other like habits."

The following letter has been received from a Los Angeles correspondent:

"After reading your article on milk diet some weeks since, I adopted it at once, according to directions for fastings, etc, and having had most disastrous results, would be glad of information as to reasons which might be of use to others trying the same cure. I took two quarts daily with the addition of a little cereal food in order to have something to chew at each meal. Milk and cereals as a part diet always agree with me nicely. I enjoy it, and I was most anxious to get all the benefits described by the exclusive use of it. I increased to two and one-half quarts in three weeks. I found I had no appetite and was losing flesh and a great distaste for the milk was growing on me; but with clean tongue, good color and bowels moving freely daily I increased to three quarts, but at the end of a week had lost four pounds, weighing then ninety-two pounds (height 5 feet 5 inches,) and the nausea on taking the milk was worse every day. I insisted that it was not true nausea or biliousness, only some sort of muscular contraction that was pure nonsense and I was determined to force the milk down. At this time an extreme feeling of illness all over my body came upon me with no pain in a particular spot, and though bowels moved daily the movement was dry and hard in little bullets. The feeling of weakness and illness increased, but I still stuck to the milk till I fainted down town and came home very sick and my family insisted on a change of diet, but no kind of food agrees with me since I gave up the milk and I have been fairly starving. I had this same experience ten years ago. Can you tell me what is wrong? I am greatly disappointed as to results."

This correspondent evidently did not read the review of Dr. Porter's book carefully. He would have noted the remarks made by the editor.

"In regard to quantity, the author, as above mentioned, recommends a glass of milk every half-hour, while awake. Supposing a person to be awake sixteen hours of the day, this would mean four quarts of milk every twenty-four hours, or seventeen ounces of water-free nourishment. This, as the editor believes, is altogether too much. Half of this amount is sufficient to maintain in mental and physical vigor a person who does sedentary work in a mild climate. Especially when a person is resting in bed there is very little loss of vital force—rather, on the contrary, force is gained. On the other hand, one must, of course, allow for persons who are run down and thin. But then, again, the nourishment must not be increased beyond the power of the digestive organs to handle it, or there will follow biliousness, and disgust for food. Dr. Porter says a full-sized person will need at least six quarts daily, 'some undersized persons can drink eight quarts.' Eight quarts means 34 ounces of water-free nourishment, or four times as much as the ordinary well person needs to maintain health. The editor doubts muchly whether any person could keep up this immense amount of nourishment for more than a very short time, without disturbance and disgust. However, as Dr. Porter has evidently had much experience along this line, the editor will not undertake to contradict him, but rather prefers to leave this question of quantity an open one."

This correspondent was very foolish to attempt to force more food into the stomach than the appetite craved. Such action is entirely unnatural and therefore entirely wrong and must inevitably have bad consequences. No one under any conditions should ever attempt to eat an ounce more than a normal, healthy appetite calls for. The constipation should have been corrected. For this purpose, fruit, dried or fresh, particularly figs and prunes, might have been added to the milk.

As against this single experience of the correspondent may be quoted scores of cases in which persons have benefited greatly and permanently by the adoption of a milk diet.

Medical Legislation—XLVIII.

THE editor recently had something to say in this department in regard to "medical ethics." The following, on this subject, is from "Health:"

"It is doubtful whether there is anything in existence, more inanely stupid, and at the same time, more distressingly tyrannical than the so-called 'code of ethics' tacitly subscribed to by the medical profession. While there are some few things in it that are to the advantage of the laity, yet broadly speaking, it is designed for the conservation and protection of the profession itself. No one will dispute the right of any body of men to frame rules for the governance of its members: but such rules should at least be based on common sense. For instance, it is unethical for a physician to advertise; but if he is particularly skilful in treating a certain disease, or if, as a surgeon, he is especially successful in a certain class of operations, why should not that fact be made known to the public, who are the ones most interested? Yet we are asked to believe that the welfare of the dear public is the principal object sought. In Germany, where medicine is in high repute, and where the examinations are more strict than anywhere else, it is quite common to see physicians displaying large enameled signs, and not only that, but the said signs set forth the specialty to which the doctor devotes himself—a proceeding that would not be tolerated by the medical societies in America, the land of the free. But let a physician be in attendance on a prominent person as patient, he will take care to have his name well displayed on the bulletins; or if, as a surgeon, he has an important operation on hand, it is surprising how quickly and easily the newspapers get hold of it. But they never advertise. Oh, dear, no! Consistency, thou art a jewel."

Here is another extract from the same hygienic monthly. The editor has frequently called attention to the fact that the vilest quacks never have any difficulty in obtaining, for trifling recompense, the services of unworthy "regulars," to act as buffers between them and the law:

"Quite recently, two creatures in New York City, who have by some means become possessed of medical diplomas, have been punished for falsely signing death certificates. In one case, a child of five years of age had been attended by an unlicensed physician, and not being qualified to sign a document of that nature, he employed the possessor of a diploma to do so for him, although the latter had never seen the case. The consideration given was $1, little enough for becoming a party to a misdemeanor, but the fine of seventy-five dollars which was inflicted will doubtless act as a deterrent in the future. The other case was more flagrant. A man going home very early in the morning, happened to see a large wicker basket conveyed from a house in West Forty-seventh street, which so excited his suspicions that he telephoned to the police. Investigation revealed the fact that the body had been brought from a certain sanitarium with a very unsavory reputation, death having, in all probability, been the result of a criminal operation. In this instance the doctor certified that the woman had died of a tumor. In this instance the punishment was more commensurate with the offense—this disgrace to the medical profession being sentenced to ten days' imprisonment in the Tombs, and to pay a fine of $200. Of course it would be the height of injustice to condemn the honorable profession of medicine on account of scoundrels like these, who contrive in some manner to associate themselves with it; but it reveals the hideous possibilities of covering up unnumbered crimes."

SUNBRIGHTS CALIFORNIA FOOD CO.

Gentlemen—I have raised three delicate babies on Sunbrights and certainly believe it saved the lives of my twins. With my youngest baby it was especially serviceable. We were a long way from the Sunbrights market and on that account tried other foods, all failing, until baby weighed less at two months than at birth. We finally sent over 600 miles for Sunbrights. In a week great improvement began and in a month he had gained 4 pounds. I believe Sunbrights can be adapted to the needs of any baby, no matter how delicate, and has only to be known to be appreciated. Yours very truly, Mrs. Alice [illegible] Scotia, California.

D. S. Maddox, M.D., of Columbus, O., sends to the Medical Brief—a "regular" publication—a sketch of a proposed medical law. In forwarding this sketch, he writes:

"It is the consensus of opinion among the liberal element of the medical profession that no medical laws at all would be far better than those which now disgrace the statute books of most of the States. Indeed, there are many who hold the view that the practice of medicine ought not to be, under any circumstances, the subject of legislation. The majority, however, appear to believe that some sort of legislation is necessary, provided it is sensible and just, and does not restrict or interfere with the constitutional rights of the individual. The following draft of a bill is therefore respectfully submitted as a basis for anti-medical trust legislation. It is submitted with the belief that it, or something very like it, would meet the views of a large per cent. of liberal-minded physicians who are opposed to the present trend of medical legislation; and with the added belief that it would prove an effective remedy in any State where medical freedom has been restricted by the arbitrary rulings of despotic boards.

"It will be seen that this bill does not in any way attempt to regulate the profession; nor does it aim to regulate the public. It merely provides a place of registration for physicians, and a record open for public inspection at all times. It amply protects the public against bogus doctors by prescribing adequate penalties in case of fraudulent representation. The medical trust doctors would no doubt cry out against a bill of this character on the ground that it does not protect them, or afford them an opportunity to make a close corporation of the practice of medicine."

The closing section of the proposed law declares that the provisions of the act shall not apply to "osteopaths or persons practicing magnetic healing, mind cure, massage or Christian Science, if they don't administer drugs, or perform or attempt to perform surgical operations."

That would be more liberal than most of the existing laws. On the other hand, there should be, as the editor has said, a law providing that any one who proposes to practice any form of healing, whether allopathic, homeopathic, hydropathic, suggestive therapeutics, or anything else, should be examined, by experts of his own school, in regard to his ability to do what he pretends to do. That is all the medical law that is needed, and all that the American public will tolerate, before long.

He declares the United States is fostering and perpetuating this deadly disease, through taxing liquors for the purpose of revenue, which leads to their being adulterated. They Call it "Sport."

A RECENT dispatch from Berlin tells how Emperor William and another royalty went to a boar hunt, in Hanover, where great preparations had been made. "After taking up their respective positions in the stands the drive past began. Splendid sport ensued, the royal personage shooting twenty-nine boars and the Emperor thirty-three." Some people would call that butchery. Any green hand in the Chicago stockyards could make a better record than that.

Queer Taste.

IT is a curious taste that leads some persons to frequent funerals, as a sort of recreation. Also, the custom that leads to a fulsome public display at a funeral is but a few removes from the customs of the Irish peasantry, and of many savage tribes. The average normal individual, who has lost a loved one, desires, at that time, to be as much as possible alone with his grief.

Excess of Exercise.

A. B. KIERNAN, the Australian champion swimmer, died last month, in Australia. Commenting upon this, an exchange remarks that "a strange fatality seems to be connected with eminent athletes." There is nothing strange, at all, about it. Excessive exercise of the muscles overtaxes the heart, and brings on early death. To this extent—when overdone—physical culture is more dangerous than no exercise at all. Very few great athletes reach a ripe old age.

This excess of exercise and athletics leads to other evils. The magnificent floral festival at Pasadena, on New Year's Day, was somewhat marred by a bitter dispute over the allotment of the chief prize, of $1000, in the chariot races, a dispute that came near culminating in a fight. It appears to be an unfortunate fact that anything in the shape of athletic contests nowadays tends to breed unpleasantness and discord, if not something worse. A writer in Physical Culture, one of the leading exponents of athletics in the United States, has been contributing a series of articles, showing how the amateur athlete, who is supposed not to profit financially by his work or reputation, usually makes more money than his professional confrere. The trophies he receives may be of small value, but he is allowed a big compensation, in the shape of liberal "expenses."

Again, the father of W. E. Corey, head of the United States Steel Corporation, who recently attained unenviable notoriety, is quoted as saying:

"The boy laid the foundation of his own ruin when he became head of the baseball business of Braddock and followed it with football. He wanted to be an athlete, and I have never yet seen a man aspiring to be an athletic marvel who did not then and there lay the foundation of his future ruin."

This does not imply, by any means, that we should look down upon athletics. On the contrary, physical culture is one of the most desirable features of education. A man whose mind is cultivated at the expense of the body is lopsided. What we should aim to avoid, however, is admixture of commercialism with athletics. To this extent, the propriety of offering such a big money prize as a thousand dollars for a contest of skill between private gentlemen is questionable. In the olden days of Greece's glory, when the human race reached the highest stage of mental and physical perfection of which we have any knowledge, the reward of the victor in the Olympian games, for which long and arduous training and rigid self denial were necessary, was a simple wreath of laurel.

It is about time that there should be a movement for the elimination of the commercial element from the healthy field of athletic sports. Otherwise, between brutality on the one hand and cupidity on the other, we may expect to see a strong revulsion against athletics in general, which would be regrettable.

You will look in vain, Maggie. First, because the number was already in type when your card was received, and secondly, because the editor draws the line at manicuring—in other words, he cannot stretch the Care of the Body to the finger tips and toe nails. For information on this and kindred subjects the correspondent is respectfully referred to the numerous lengthy and able departments in this and other papers and magazines, dealing with "Health and Beauty," "How to Be Handsome Though Ugly," "How to Be Happy, Though Married"—and so forth, and so forth, ad libitum; ad nauseam.

Glucose.

A VINELAND correspondent asks in regard to glucose. Glucose, which is largely substituted for sugar nowadays, is made by treating corn with sulphuric acid. It may also be produced, in this way, by treating straw, or wood, or even rags, and they do say that in Hamburg they use up old stockings and underwear. However, this is perhaps a fable, like that relating to the general use of yellow dogs in the manufacture of sausage.

Commercial sugar is harmful, and the cause of much of the dyspepsia and consequent bad teeth from which Americans suffer. Glucose is still more harmful, being highly irritating to the stomach. It is largely used in the fruit syrups, sold at soda fountains. In fact, from a hygienic point of view, the modern soda fountain is more injurious to health than a saloon, where fairly pure liquors are sold. It is also largely used in the manufacture of fruit jellies. Many of these fruit jellies, by the way, do not contain any fruit at all, being composed of slaughter-house refuse, analine dyes and glucose. A nice componud, to take into the human stomach! In buying fruit preserves, see that you demand the label of a firm that guarantees the purity of the product. There is at least one such firm in Los Angeles, and it advertises freely in The Times.

The Ralston Idea.

A CORRESPONDENT writes:

"Have been reading the 'Combination Book' of the Ralston Health Club. Might I ask for your opinion of the ideas contained therein? Many of them seem similar to your own."

Not having read the book, and knowing nothing of the club referred to, the editor is not prepared to give an opinion. At one time, the Ralston idea had great vogue. Ralstonites were plentiful, and classes were held frequently, yielding a good income to the preceptors. So far as the editor is aware, the so-called Ralston movement embraces good ideas in hygiene, although the proponents, as in other similar movements, try to throw a halo of mystery over simple operations like breathing and exercising. Also, the leader of the cult is responsible for a meat and hot-water diet, which the editor regards as decidedly injurious, although it may facilitate digestion for a time.

Cold California Cottages.

THE editor of the real estate department of The Times had a sensible article in the number of Sunday, December 31, on the lack of proper facilities for warming houses in Southern California, an omission of which Eastern invalids complain loudly. There is no doubt that thousands are prevented from stopping here by this mistake.

In the early days, nothing in the way of artificial warming was known in the houses of residents. Of late, there has been some improvement in this respect, but there are still thousands of residences where one has to depend on small coal oil or gas stoves, or something of that kind. Because this is a semi-tropical climate, it should not be taken for granted that we need no artificial warmth. On the contrary, it is to some extent even more necessary here than in the East. For the same reason that we feel heat much less here than in the East, we feel the cold so much more—because the dryness of the atmosphere facilitates evaporation, and loss of heat. At a temperature of 50, when people in the East would be going around in their shirt sleeves, Californians sit around shivering, and the longer a person lives in this section the more is he likely to be affected in this way. Again, the difference in temperature between an hour before sunset and an hour after is immense, as is the difference between night and day. For these reasons, all houses should be provided with a proper method of heating, the best of which is steam heat or hot water. That is better than hot air, because it is not so desiccating. Coal oil lamps and gas stoves eat up the oxygen of the air. Of course, it is an excellent thing to harden yourself, but old people and invalids cannot be running around to keep up the normal warmth. They must have comfort, or they will go elsewhere for it. Sixty degrees F. should be sufficient for the healthy person, with normal circulation, and 70 should be the maximum, for anybody. Be sure that there is ventilation in the rooms. You will be surprised to find how little difference it makes in the temperature to leave the windows open a few inches at the top. Also keep a pan of water in the room.

For those who have to depend, to some extent, on lamps, for heating purposes, there has recently been introduced, and is for sale on the market in Los Angeles, the invention of an Eastern visitor, who noticed these conditions, and set about to fill a "long-felt want." It is a thin sheet-iron contrivance, in the shape of a pyramid, that is hung on a metal rod over the lamp, with the point downward. It throws down heat that would otherwise rise up to the ceiling, and within half an hour or so raises the temperature of a room 8 degrees.

As the real estate editor said, in the article referred to, it is a wonder how any human lungs can stand Eastern conditions, where, perhaps, you walk out from a room heated to 80 degrees, to a temperature of perhaps 30 degrees below zero—a change of 110 degrees, in a moment.

Hydrochloric Acid—Headache.

A COLTON correspondent writes as follows:

"I noticed your article not long ago about many people being deficient in a certain kind of acid in the stomach—think it was hydro-something—can't remember the name, but you will doubtless recollect. Can people suffering so counteract that deficiency by a certain diet? If so, what should they eat? How does that deficiency effect the general health in time?

"Also, what is the significance of a headache every morning on awaking, which sometimes gets better upon eating, and often does not? The pain is in the back of the head from about the middle to the neck. I believe that diseased organs that do affect the head each have their own place of affecting it; do they not?"

The acid referred to is hydrochloric acid. People who have a deficiency of this acid should avoid "free" fats, taking oil only in the shape of an emulsion, as in nuts, and cream, and olives, or olive oil thoroughly beaten up. Avoid all greasy foods. Eat plenty of fresh fruit in season, and tomatoes.

A headache may arise from many various causes. A majority are caused by errors of diet, which give rise to toxic poisoning. Retention of uric acid in the system is also a frequent cause of headache. Such headaches usually manifest themselves, however, in the fore part of the head, especially at the temples. Headaches may also be caused by excessive eye strain and by breathing foul air. To remove the effect, it is necessary to know the cause, and remove that.

No Sure Thing.

A DISPATCH from Honolulu states that the Hawaiians are indignant, because Dr. Jordan, of Stanford, is said to have intimated that the claim that Mrs. Stanford had died from poison had been made the basis of a plea by the Honolulu officials to draw large fees. The Honolulu physicians are said to be preparing a "scientific statement" that death was due to strychnine poisoning.

It appears that the doctors not only cannot always tell, for sure, when a person is dead, but even what they die of, although the deceased is dissected.

Death Rate of Los Angeles.

FOLLOWING is from the Seattle Post-Intelligencer:

"Dr. George H. Kress of Los Angeles has reported upon these conditions, and his article in the Journal of the American Medical Association contains many facts of vital interest to this part of the Pacific Coast also. He shows that Los Angeles has a higher death rate from consumption than any other place in the United States, as we would naturally expect. Indeed, the statistics seem to show a general tendency to increase of this disease in southern cities, the lowest rates being in Cleveland and Detroit. The death rates by months in Los Angeles show the results of the winter migration of hopeless cases, for the fewest deaths are in July, and there is a regular increase until March, when the rate decreases again.

The editor has not seen the article referred to, but unless Dr. Kress explained the conditions, he has certainly done Los Angeles a gross injustice. In this connection, read the following, from The Times of January 6:

"A gross injustice is being done the fair name of Los Angeles, and the Chamber of Commerce is trying to prevent its continuance. The United States government, in making up its tables of vital statistics, gives a prominent place to deaths in proportion to the population. For the basis of the calculations it takes the last census. While this works no hardship on most cities, in a place where the population is growing very fast it unduly swells the number of deaths per thousand.

"Los Angeles, with its phenomenal increase, fares worst of all. The last census gave us a population of 102,000, and on this the figures are based. It is generally admitted that now we have 200,000 people here, but the tables of vital statistics take no heed of this. The result is that deaths occurring here in reality at the rate of about 13 or 14 per 1000, appear in the tables at the rate of 25 to 28 per 1000. Our death rate appears on the surface to be one of the highest in the country."

To this, it should be added that a very large majority of those dying from consumption in Los Angeles have been in Southern California only a few months, or years; consumption is almost unknown among natives; also, that the County Hospital is within the city limits and deaths occurring in that institution are of course credited to the city.

Boils.

SUGGESTIONS for the cure of boils continue to arrive. Here are two of the latest:

"Take egg shells, brown them, grind them to a powder and take a teaspoonful every morning for ten days, or as long as you are afflicted." This idea is not a new one. The editor has had egg shells recommended for other ailments. It may be that the lime in the shell, like the lime in bones, can be assimilated in the system, while ordinary minerals cannot be. This, of course, would be the only benefit of the substance.

Another correspondent writes:

"As for boils, I once had a long series of them, which defied all remedies, till I consulted Dr. Salisbury of New York City, recently deceased. He said that a boil is due simply to acidity of the blood, which coagulates the albumen and fibrine of the blood, forming little strings; these lodge in the small blood vessels next the skin, piling up against each other like logs in a log jam, and forming a hard white core. His remedy was cream of tartar, which by an alkaline reaction on the liver corrects the acidity of the blood, dissolving the coagulated elements. He told me to take two teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar, dissolved in a glass of water, the first thing on rising in the morning, and a spoonful occasionally during the day. When I started on this treatment I had a new boil forming, which had attained the of a thimble. It ceased to develop, and faded two or three days. I have never had one since. I have advised this remedy to friends, I have known it to fail to cure a boil or a felon, in a few days."

Cream of tartar is a drug. Why go to drugs you can get plenty of alkaline substances in food? you want to correct acidity, use plenty of foods tain a goodly amount of potassium, such, for as lettuce, olives, potatoes, peas and beans. You all the medicine you require in nature's foods, going to the drug store.

By DR. W. I. SEYMOUR, 517 S. Broadway, 3d Floor,

"Kryptok" invisible bifocals mean the greatest achievement in the optical science for the past twenty years. Wonderful results have been accomplished in the field of astronomy, photography, microscopy, etc., owing to the scientific improvement of high-power lenses, which new and unknown worlds into existence, and people the earth with myriads of microbes unknown to our But of infinitely greater value to humanity, and particularly to you who wear glasses, is the scientific achievement recently perfected. The Kryptoks now enable you to in a single lense, two distinct focuses. Not only is this wonderful sight-saving device, but it does away with extra pair of glasses and affords you infinite relief the constant annoyance of changing from one pair of to another, when you wish another focus.

True it is that great efforts have been made along this for many years, but how successful heretofore is dent in the clumsy, old-style bifocal constantly seen streets. They give one the appearance of having a oval window in the lower part of their glasses, the edge of which is usually outlined by a streak of dirt gathers on the raised surface of the reading part, or in case of the split bifocal dirt gathers in the crack the lenses, where it is almost impossible to remove it, is not alone unsightly, but injurious to the sight.

Another crude effort to supply reading glasses that blur distant vision is the half glass, sometimes called cal glasses," but who wishes to call attention to their firmity by this awkward appearing "half pair of glasses"?

It is no longer necessary—and we of today can science and inventive genius for the advent of the "Kryptok," which affords us the maximum of sight and to a minimum the burden of wearing glasses.

Perhaps it has never occurred to you that elderly wear these disfigured glasses, and it is a plain of advancing years to allow oneself to be tagged with pair of old-style bifocals. Now that the Kryptok has come an acknowledged success, the annoying question appearance has been settled for all time, providing can afford the slight additional expense of having a pair "Kryptoks."

SOME DENTISTRY POINTS THAT

There is no excuse whatever for any civilized person this enlightened age going around with his or her in poor condition. Good, clean, well-looking teeth much a part of modern requirements as the bath ventional clothing.

Then, too, science and training have robbed the chair of its old-time horrors. One no longer says: going to the dentists," in a tone indicating that the felt as if he were going to be hanged or tortured.

This being the situation, there is absolutely for going around with the teeth in poor condition. some persons are afraid to smile because every time open their mouths they show their teeth. On the hand, you may not recall any particular feature of a you see, but if the teeth are bad you do remember, recollection is not a pleasant one.

Painless work constitutes the latest and most boon conferred by dentistry. We have spared or expense in securing every appliance that will to good work, and perfect comfort and satisfaction patients. What Various People Eat.

DELICACIES FOR SOME ARE DISGUSTING TO OTHERS.

By a Special Contributor.

GERMANY is eating horse. A ten-course dinner of Algerian lion was served by a Parisian Tartaran, who basely bought instead of shooting the game. Monkey is said to be excellent with a faraway flavor of rabbit, but many diameters more savory. Still, monkey eating is cannibalism if our ancestors really were arboreal in their habits.

An English traveler and game bagger in Africa swore that baked elephant foot was a dainty dish to set before a king—not an African woolly monarch, but even Edward VII himself, who knows something of the refinements of artistic cookery and has an experienced palate. Dr. Livingstone, in speaking of a breakfast of elephant's feet cooked for him in native fashion and which he very much enjoyed, said: "It was a royal feast, and I found it delicious."

The natives of nearly all parts of Africa are exceedingly fond of white ants as a dish. On one occasion, while camping on the banks of the Zouga, Livingstone was visited by a chief, and as he was at dinner at the time, he gave him a piece of bread and some preserved apricots. The chief seemed to relish it very much, and Livingstone asked him if he had anything equal to that in his country. "Ah," said he, "did you ever taste white ants?" Livingstone assured him that he had never tried that delicacy. "Well, if you had," replied the chief, licking his mouth with pleasant memories, you never could wish anything better."

When the white ants cast off their colony of winged emigrants, a canopy is erected like an umbrella over the ant hill. As soon as ants fly against the roof they tumble down in a shower, and their wings instantly become detached from their bodies. They are then helpless, and are swept up in baskets to be fried, when they make a very palatable food.

Another Englishman—why is it always an Englishman to whom these original and courageous tastes are attributed?—An Englishman averred that boa constrictor properly cooked was better than the best veal, being nearly all breast. And yet the boa constrictor has no mercy on the calf.

This recalls some curious and cruel customs of our English forefathers who killed animals by slow and terrifying processes in order that their flesh should be made tender by muscular agony and mental distress. It is probable that the struggles of a creature slowly killed by torture softens its muscles. The flesh of a hunted hare is more tender than the flesh of a hare shot unawares.

Bulls were baited with dogs, not so much for the barbarous pleasure of witnessing brutal conflicts as for the maceration of the beef, which would have been less edible had the animals been killed quickly with knife and bludgeon. While bull baiting was still sanctioned in England as a wholesome culinary process, our ancestors macerated pigs by whipping them to death, a treatment that produced the requisite bodily convulsions and mental distress in the dying animals. Hence it was usual with the old English to fly a hawk at barn-door poultry and "crammed birds."

Addison tells us that in his time the fastidious epicure would commend a sucking pig, or a piece of older pork to his friends with the assurance that the creature had died under the lash. Our ancestors, in the pursuit of gastronomic pleasures, were capable of practices repugnant to the finer feelings of the present generation. According to Monsieur Louis Ude, any cruelty was permissible, and even commendable, in cookery that was conducive to the palate's gratification or the attainment of a superior color in a viand. In his recipe for a "matelotte of eels," he says lightly and concisely: "Take one or two live eels, throw them into the fire. As they are writhing and twisting about on all sides, lay hold of them with a wet towel in your hand and skin them from head to tail."

During the flourishing state of the empire, the Romans were very expensive in their suppers. Vitellius, according to Suetonius, had a supper when 2000 rare and foreign fishes were presented upon the table, with many strange birds brought from the Straits of Gibraltar by galleys sent on purpose to transport them to Rome.

While the French menagere will rave over a dozen snails served in the shell, the dainty Japanese will quietly relish her wishinaku and bowl of chic-chic, and the practical German hausfrau surprises her husband with the juiciest of roast pork and pickled pigs' feet on the dish.

Goulash, with plenty of paprika, is the Hungarian's delight, while the dark-eyed daughters of Italy will not be happy unless they can offer their families a genuine feast including salami sausage, olives, and extra well-flavored spaghetti and risotto. A fragrant after-dinner cigarette, accompanied by a very small glass of vodka is the usual indulgence of the Russian woman after Thanksgiving dinner.

A French woman in New York finds the greatest pleasure in cooking her husband a rabbit that has been exposed to the air until it takes on a certain gamy odor euphemistically called "haut gout." To this delicacy she adds some cocks' combs fried in sweet butter. On Christmas day she will serve monsieur some real tripe or a dozen big vineyard snails. New Orleans imports snails from France in barrels protected by wire netting to prevent this succulent article of diet from creeping out.

These things would seem droll to an esthetic dainty, and perhaps to Lucullus, whose appetite craved hummingbirds' tongues.

All the world worships the regulation turkey—the ideal bird for Thanksgiving, Christmas or any other occasion, especially when stuffed with oysters or chestnuts; and when you have no chestnuts handy, you might substitute the "Life and Anecdotes" of Chauncey Depew.

Philadelphia scrapple is eaten all over the world. It used to be made by Pennsylvania farmers, but it is now made practically altogether by the Scrapple Trust, which turns out thousands of pounds daily from the first frost till the spring thaw.

This delicate stuff is made of pigs' heads, liver, pork, sage, thyme and a dozen other ingredients. The meat is first boiled on the bone in vats as large as swimming pools. Then it is cut up into chunks the size of your fist by rows of bare-armed experts with scimitars. Then it is ground to a gray powder in steam power grinding machines.

The old-time Baltimore oyster roasts were greatly enjoyed. First, a drink of hot Scotch whisky, then the roast oysters, followed by a glass of old English ale. The price of a drink of whisky in the olden days was a "fip" (6¼ cents), and very fine mixed drinks, a "levy" (12½ cents).

Just at present oyster roasts are the order of the day, and there is not a Saturday night or a Sunday afternoon that the shores of Patapsco are not ablaze with the fires of the oyster roasters. What the clambake is to New York, the shadbake to Philadelphians, so is the oyster-roast to Baltimoreans, and they'll swear that it goes ahead of all other affairs of like nature.

Henry Seelinger, a prominent saloon-keeper and restaurateur in Norfolk, Va., eats muskrat, very much to the amusement and disgust of his esthetic patrons.

Eight years ago, S. Wilkins Matthews, a member of the Virginia Legislature, gave a muskrat dinner at Murphy's Hotel in Richmond, when thirty or forty members of the Legislature, the Governor of Virginia, and State officials were his guests and sat down at the table to dine and test the taste of this varmint.

When Admiral Sigsbee's squadron was cruising in the Caribbean Sea in 1904 and the spring of 1905, the officers of his flagship, the Newark, found that bark salad was not only edible, but was quite palatable. This remarkable food is made from the bark of a tropical tree and much enjoyed by the natives along the coast. The rough or outer part is chipped off and the inner portion chopped into fine slices and made into a salad dressed with oil, spices, etc.

About eight years ago the gunboat Bennington had been at sea for some time, taking soundings in Magdalena Bay, off the coast of Mexico. Some macaroni which had been brought on board was being served to the crew. For two or three days the sailors noticed black specks in the dish, and asked the steward the cause of it. He was at a loss to know, and brought some of the uncooked eatable for the inspection of the officers, who found upon looking into the hole through the macaroni, qualities of water bugs and cockroaches. Strange as it may seem, the officers had not detected any peculiar taste about the viand. Many years ago the old residenters of New Orleans advocated crushed cockroaches made into a broth as a cure for lockjaw. This medicinal virtue of the roach recalls a fact which came under my observation at Barry Dock, a large coaling town on the coast of Wales, about thirty miles from Cardiff. Men working around the docks in the dampness ate the Cardiff coal dust for pulmonary ailment, and claimed they were receiving benefit, and that others had been cured by this extarordinary diet.

Shark fin is a popular dish with the Chinese, and a few old seamen. Goychee (shark's fin fried or in soup) and bird's-nest soup are common items on a Chinese menu card.

A dish made of the stomach of a reindeer, or seal, and mixed with seal oil, is the Eskimo substitute for ice cream.

During a six years' residence in the West, a scientist made diligent study of snakes and their peculiarities. As an article of diet, he says the blue racer, of all snakes, is the most delicate in flavor, as it is very cleanly in its habits and particular as to its feed. The flesh of the rattler is also perfectly wholesome and toothsome, having a flavor, like the flesh of most snakes, like chicken. At an evening entertainment, given at the home of this investigator, lettuce, edged sandwiches of finely-minced snake meat were served, and were supposed to be chicken until it chanced that a student discovered a peculiarly-shaped bone. Twirling it between his thumb and finger, he approached his host and asked if there was anything save a snake that could make use of that bone. Being assured that there was not, the company were soon discussing the merits of the blue racer they had been eating. From one snake thirty-five sandwiches had been made.

The eating of snakes, bugs, worms and reptiles of every species has frequently occurred, all shocking enough to our well-fed senses, but they must not be forgotten in the recollection of well-authenticated cases which we have of cannibalism.

An English officer, during a successful campaign in the east, many years ago, expressed a wish for a well-cooked boar's head. On the following day his table was graced with what was represented to him as a native dish of the food that he desired, prepared with especial care by one of the most noted cooks of India. The officer ate with unusual relish, not neglecting to bestow most extravagant praise on the manner of cooking, and begged that the recipe for preparing boar's head might be given him. The reader may imagine his horror when the Englishman afterward received incontestable proof that he had dined off a slave's head, who had been killed for the purpose, instead of a boar, no such animal being known in that country.

On a visit to New Orleans in the spring of 1897, I found that bullfrogs and cream cheese were considered gastronomic delicacies in the Crescent City. They were served in nearly all the restaurants, the former at 30 cents, the latter at 5 cents.

Of course I had to breakfast at Monsieur Begués in New Orleans, located in the very heart of the French quarter, this shrine of the gourmets. Not to have breakfasted here or in the Café of the Black Cat (Chat Noir) in New York and Paris, is not to have been one of the inner circle, the choice spirits of Bohemia.

At this famous breakfast restaurant there is always an omelette a la Burbank; the waiter girl bears it in triumphantly on a huge platter and places it before our host. What is there not in this huge creation? It recalls one of Franklin's essays, in which the philosopher says that "Disorder breakfasts with Plenty, dines with Poverty, sups with Misery and sleeps with Death." Liver thick as steak, dish fit for the gods! With this are served red peppers, which Monsieur Begué hands around himself, with great gusto and delight. He seems to be especially proud of being able to swallow a large, two-inch chunk of it himself. He has no rivals in the feat. It reminds one of the story of Stockton, maybe, but it is more like Field who, as each course grew hotter than the one that had preceded it, remarked gaspingly as he gulped down the last, that he felt as if he had swallowed a whole torchlight procession. At which Monsieur Begué chuckled audibly with delight.

Lastly are brought on the funny little A B C plates for fruit, and with the fruit are passed two varieties of cheese, each louder than the other, both clarion-toned, to cap all the café brulant, the hottest, most flaming torch in the procession.

WILLIAM P. CABELL.

THE STRONG.

Dost deem him weak that owns his strength is tired?
Nay, we may safest lean on him that grieves;
The pine has immemorially sighed,
Th' enduring poplars are the trembling leaves.

To feel and bow the head is not to fear;
To cheat with jest—that is the coward's art.
Beware the laugh that battles back the tear;
He's false to all that's traitor to his heart.

He of great deeds does grope amid the throng
Like him whose steps toward Dagon's temple bore;
There's ever something sad about the strong—
A look, a moan, like that on ocean's shore.

—[John Vance Cheney, in Century.

Every housekeeper knows it's quite a bother to decide always just how much milk or cream to order. If she orders a little extra, it may spoil before she uses it. If she orders just enough for her own use, she will run short if unexpected company comes.

Lily Cream is the happy solution of all this milk difficulty. Lily Cream is always rich, sweet, wholesome—and it keeps indefinitely. Keep a dozen cans in your pantry. Use them as you need them. Always good.

Lily Cream is thoroughly sterilized, and sealed in air-tight cans. But it's the same price as ordinary milk.

PURITAS
DISTILLFD WATER

We ask you to study this great question of pure water. Give it that same careful, critical, impartial consideration you would give any question affecting the health of yourself and the health of your family.

You might be surprised to know that practically all the authorities of the world unanimously agree that the only absolutely pure water is that purified by distillation; and that ordinary drinking water, infected as it is with germ life and holding minerals in solution, is an unquestionable menace to health and shortens human life.

Study this question. Investigate it thoroughly. Facts will force you to the conclusion that your health demands that you drink PURITAS doubly distilled water—the only PURE water obtainable in this section.

The low price of Puritas puts it in everybody's reach.
